8 Ibid s 107(5). However, unless the case falls squarely within s 107(5), the Court of Appeal is the appropriate court in which the correctness of the judge's decision should be questioned: R v Renda [2005] EWCA Crim 2826 at [27], [2006] 2 All ER 553 at [27] per Sir Igor Judge P, giving the judgment of the court. Even where the case does fall within the Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 107(5), this does not mean that it would be unsafe to continue with the trial. It may in some cases be possible to neutralise any potential prejudice by demonstrating the fact (if such be the case) that the evidence in question is false. Greater difficulty may in fact be caused by evidence which although clearly contaminated is not demonstrably false, so that a jury may be tempted to rely upon it.

EVIDENCE/(16) EVIDENCE OF GOOD OR BAD CHARACTER/1512. Spent convictions and convictions for childhood offences.

1512. Spent convictions and convictions for childhood offences.

In proceedings for an offence committed or alleged to have been committed by the defendant when aged 21 or over, evidence of his conviction for an offence when under the age of 14 is not admissible unless: (1) both of the offences are triable only on indictment; and (2) the court is satisfied that the interests of justice require the evidence to be admissible<sup>1</sup>.

In contrast, statutory provisions which otherwise restrict the disclosure of spent convictions<sup>2</sup> in judicial proceedings<sup>3</sup> do not affect the determination of any issue, or prevent the admission or requirement of any evidence relating to a person's previous convictions, or circumstances ancillary<sup>4</sup> thereto in any criminal proceedings before a court in Great Britain (including any appeal or reference in a criminal matter)<sup>5</sup>.

Nevertheless, criminal courts and advocates should give effect to the general intention of Parliament by never referring to a spent conviction when such reference can reasonably be avoided; no one should refer in open court to a spent conviction without the authority of the judge, which authority should not be given unless the interests of justice so require; and when passing sentence the judge should make no reference to a spent conviction unless it is necessary to do so for the purpose of explaining the sentence to be passed<sup>6</sup>.

1 Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 108(2). This applies in addition to s 101 (see PARA 1505 ante): s 108(3). However, it applies in terms only to evidence of convictions and not to evidence of conduct giving rise to a conviction or to other evidence of bad character within the meaning of s 98 (see PARA 1503 ante). It may be that such evidence would be subject to exclusion under the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 78 (as amended) (see PARA 1365 ante) (cf R v Highton [2005] EWCA Crim 1985 at [13], [2005] 1 WLR 3472 at [13], [2006] Crim LR 52 at [13] per Lord Woolf CJ).

4 For such purposes, any of the following are circumstances ancillary to a conviction: (1) the offence or offences which were the subject of that conviction; (2) the conduct constituting that offence or those offences; and (3) any process or proceedings preliminary to that conviction, any sentence imposed in respect of that conviction, any proceedings, whether by way of appeal or otherwise, for reviewing that conviction or any such sentence, and anything done in pursuance of or undergone in compliance with any such sentence: ibid s 4(5).

5 Ibid s 7(2)(a). They also do not apply in any proceedings relating to the variation or discharge of a supervision order under the Powers of Criminal Courts (Sentencing) Act 2000, or on appeal from any such proceedings: Rehabilitation of Offenders Act 1974 s 7(2)(d) (substituted by the Children Act 1989 s 108(5), Sch 13 para 35; and amended by the Powers of Criminal Courts (Sentencing) Act 2000 s 165(1), Sch 9 para 49).

1513. Duty of court to give reasons for rulings on evidence of bad character.

Where the court makes a relevant ruling<sup>1</sup> it must state in open court (but in the absence of the jury, if there is one) its reasons for the ruling and if it is a magistrates' court, it must cause the ruling and the reasons for it to be entered in the register of the court's proceedings<sup>2</sup>.

1 A 'relevant ruling' means: (1) a ruling on whether an item of evidence is evidence of a person's bad character (see PARA 1503 ante); (2) a ruling on whether an item of such evidence is admissible under the Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 100 or s 101 (including a ruling on an application under s 101(3) (see PARAS 1504-1505 ante); or (3) a ruling under s 107 (see PARA 1511 ante): s 110(2).

EVIDENCE/(16) EVIDENCE OF GOOD OR BAD CHARACTER/1514. Bad character of defendant in cases of handling stolen goods.

1514. Bad character of defendant in cases of handling stolen goods.

Where a person is being proceeded against for handling stolen goods<sup>1</sup>, but not for any offence other than handling stolen goods<sup>2</sup>, then at any stage of the proceedings, if evidence has been given of his having or arranging to have in his possession the goods the subject of the charge, or of his undertaking or assisting in, or arranging to undertake or assist in, their retention, removal, disposal or realisation, the following evidence is admissible for the purpose of proving that he knew or believed the goods to be stolen goods<sup>3</sup>:

- 2210 (1) evidence that he has had in his possession, or has undertaken or assisted in the retention, removal, disposal or realisation of, stolen goods from any theft taking place not earlier than 12 months<sup>4</sup> before the offence charged<sup>5</sup>; and
- 2211 (2) provided that seven days' notice in writing has been given to him of the intention to prove the conviction<sup>6</sup>, evidence that he has within the five years preceding the date of the offence charged been convicted of theft or of handling stolen goods<sup>7</sup>.

The trial judge has an overriding discretion to exclude such evidence if its prejudicial effect outweighs its probative value<sup>8</sup>.

1 See PARA 302 ante.

2 See R v Davies [1953] 1 QB 489, 37 Cr App Rep 16, CCA; R v Ballard (1916) 12 Cr App Rep 1, CCA. It is immaterial that other goods evidence of which is admitted should be the subject of another indictment awaiting trial against the defendant: R v Jones and Hayes (1877) 14 Cox CC 3. The judge should withdraw the evidence from the consideration of the jury if the prosecution fails to establish that the other property was stolen property (R v Girod and Girod (1906) 70 JP 514, CCR) or if the prosecution fails to prove an allegation of possession of other stolen property (R v Garside (1967) 52 Cr App Rep 85, CA). The evidence is not restricted to the finding of other stolen property in the defendant's possession but may include eg the circumstances in which it was found: see R v Smith [1918] 2 KB 415, 13 Cr App Rep 151, CCA.

3 Theft Act 1968 s 27(3). Such evidence is capable only of proving guilty knowledge or belief. It may not be used to prove that the defendant possessed the goods he is charged with handling, nor can it be treated as relevant to any issue of dishonesty: R v Duffas (1993) 158 JP 224, CA. Such matters may however be provable by evidence of bad character admissible under the Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 101 (see PARA 1505 et seq ante). Note that convictions for theft, robbery, burglary by stealing and handling stolen goods all fall within the same category for the purposes of s 101(1)(d) and s 103(4): see the Criminal Justice Act 2003 (Categories of Offences) Order 2004, SI 2004/3346; and PARA 1507 note 9 ante.

4 For the meaning of 'not earlier than 12 months' see R v Davis [1972] Crim LR 431, CA.

5 Theft Act 1968 s 27(3)(a). Section 27(3)(a) is to be restrictively construed and is not to be used to elicit the details of other instances of possession: R v Bradley (1979) 70 Cr App Rep 200, CA; R v Wood [1987] 1 WLR 779, 85 Cr App Rep 287, CA. Cf R v Smith [1918] 2 KB 415, 13 Cr App Rep 151, CCA. The Theft Act 1968 s 27 (as amended) is to be construed in accordance with s 24 (scope of offences relating to stolen goods: see PARA 303 ante): s 27(5).

6 Such a notice is not defective because it does not state that it is given under or for the purpose of ibid s 27 (as amended): R v Airlie [1973] Crim LR 310, CA.

7 Theft Act 1968 s 27(3)(b). Section 27(3)(b) does not provide for the details of previous offences to be admitted: R v Fowler (1987) 86 Cr App Rep 219, CA; but the effect of the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 73(2) (as amended) (see PARA 1347 ante) is that any certificate of conviction following trial on indictment must state the substance and effect of the indictment and conviction (including the type of property involved), omitting only the formal parts. If this conviction was in fact for a very similar offence (eg handling the same kind of property) this will be apparent on the certificate, and admissible in evidence, subject only to the judge's discretion to exclude it, should it appear that its admission would prejudice the fairness of the proceedings: R v Hacker [1995] 1 All ER 45, [1995] 1 Cr App Rep 332, HL.

8 R v Knott [1973] Crim LR 36, CA (applying to the Theft Act 1968 s 27(3) earlier decisions in R v List [1965] 3 All ER 710, 50 Cr App Rep 81; R v Herron [1967] 1 QB 107, 50 Cr App Rep 132, CCA). See also R v Rasini (1986) Times, 20 March, CA; R v Hacker [1995] 1 All ER 45, [1995] 1 Cr App Rep 332, HL.

Where more than one offence is alleged, it may be necessary to exclude the evidence admissible under the Theft Act 1968 s 27(3) in relation to counts where guilty knowledge is the primary issue, in order to prevent the evidence influencing the jury on those counts where the primary issue is possession. Where the evidence is admitted, the jury should be warned about the uses to which such evidence may properly be put: R v Wilkins [1975] 2 All ER 734, 60 Cr App Rep 300, CA; R v Perry [1984] Crim LR 680, CA. Such difficulties may be avoided in many cases if the prosecution relies instead on the Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 101(1)(d): see PARAS 1505, 1507 ante.

Halsbury's Laws of England/CRIMINAL LAW, EVIDENCE AND PROCEDURE (VOLUME 11(1) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1-620; VOLUME 11(2) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 621-1049; VOLUME 11(3) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1050-1557; VOLUME 11(4) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1558-2180)/20. EVIDENCE/(16) EVIDENCE OF GOOD OR BAD CHARACTER/1515. Positive and negative evidence of good character.

1515. Positive and negative evidence of good character.

The concept of 'good character' may be divided into 'positive good character' (which may include matters such as a solid employment record or faithful discharge of family duties<sup>1</sup>) and 'negative good character' (which means the mere absence of significant criminal convictions<sup>2</sup>). Evidence of positive good character may, in the case of a defendant, be given by witnesses called specifically for that purpose<sup>3</sup> and may take the form of evidence of general reputation, even though such evidence is mere hearsay evidence of opinion<sup>4</sup>.

1516. Good character of persons other than defendants.

A party calling a witness (other than a defendant) may not ordinarily call evidence or ask questions in order to establish the good character or credibility of that witness, except in rebuttal of attempts to discredit that witness; and he is limited, even then, to the rebuttal of allegations of general untruthfulness by contrary evidence of reputation<sup>1</sup>. Evidence in rebuttal of particular allegations of misconduct relating to credibility is not permitted, because such issues are collateral and the witness's denial of such an accusation will be final<sup>2</sup>. However, it is common for a witness to be questioned as to his trade, profession or calling, or occasionally as to whether he is married etc, and such questions might sometimes help to underpin his credit<sup>3</sup>. Expert witnesses are exceptions to the rule. It is necessary to adduce evidence to establish the experience and qualification of any expert witness<sup>4</sup>.

The admissibility of evidence relating to the good character of other persons (such as the deceased victim of a crime) depends simply on relevance<sup>5</sup>. It may be relevant where for example it is suggested that the deceased attacked or provoked the defendant<sup>6</sup>.

1 R v Wood [1951] 2 All ER 112n, CCA; R v Hamilton (26 June 1998, unreported), CA; R v Turner [1975] QB 834, 60 Cr App Rep 80, CA. See also R v Robinson (Raymond) [1994] 3 All ER 346, 98 Cr App Rep 370, CA; R v Beard [1998] Crim LR 585, CA.

2 Even where there has been a direct attack on the credibility of a witness, a further witness called to testify as to the other's credibility cannot be permitted to testify in chief as to the particular facts, circumstances of incidents which form the basis of his opinion, although he may be cross-examined upon them: R v Richardson [1969] 1 QB 299 at 304, sub nom R v Longman and Richardson [1968] 2 All ER 761 at 764, CA, per Edmund Davies LJ.

3 R v DS [1999] Crim LR 911, CA (court approved direction in which the jury were invited to 'have regard' to the fact that a prosecution witness was a clergyman, but were also warned that their main judgment should be formed upon their impression of him in the witness box).

4 See PARA 1490 ante.

5 As to relevance see PARA 1364 ante.

6 Any such attack on the character of another person may also lead to evidence of the defendant's bad character becoming admissible: see PARA 1510 ante.

Halsbury's Laws of England/CRIMINAL LAW, EVIDENCE AND PROCEDURE (VOLUME 11(1) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1-620; VOLUME 11(2) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 621-1049; VOLUME 11(3) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1050-1557; VOLUME 11(4) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1558-2180)/20. EVIDENCE/(16) EVIDENCE OF GOOD OR BAD CHARACTER/1517. Good character of defendants.

1517. Good character of defendants.

A defendant is entitled to have evidence of his good character<sup>1</sup> put before the court, in one or more of the following ways:

- 2212 (1) the defence may cross-examine prosecution witnesses (or witnesses called for a co-defendant) for the purposes of establishing the defendant's good character. A police officer who has testified for the prosecution may, for example, be asked to confirm that the defendant has no previous convictions or cautions, if such is the fact<sup>2</sup>;
- 2213 (2) the defence may elicit such evidence from its own witnesses, and may call witnesses ('character witnesses') for the specific purpose of testifying as to the defendant's good character<sup>3</sup>; and
- 2214 (3) the defendant may take the witness stand and give evidence of his own good character<sup>4</sup>.

Evidence of good character may be relevant because it appears to show a lack of criminal propensity<sup>5</sup> and where the defendant's credibility is in issue it may also serve to bolster that credibility<sup>6</sup>. Positive evidence of a defendant's good character may not strictly speaking be established by reference to his specific good deeds or creditable behaviour, but only by evidence of general character founded upon the knowledge of those who know anything about him and his general conduct<sup>7</sup>. This rule has long been recognised as an anomaly<sup>8</sup>, and although a defendant has no right to adduce evidence of more specific matters reflecting on his good character or lack of relevant criminal propensity, in practice the courts will often permit such evidence to be given<sup>9</sup>.

Of crucial importance in proceedings on indictment before a jury is the entitlement of a defendant to have his good character (if any) dealt with in the judge's summing up. In this context, a defendant may be entitled to be presented to the jury as being of good character notwithstanding that he may have some minor or largely irrelevant criminal convictions, although a 'good character' direction may need to be qualified so as to take such matters into account<sup>10</sup>.

1 This may be positive or negative good character: see PARA 1515 ante. The defendant's right to adduce such evidence remains governed by the common law, although the Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 101(1)(f) (see PARA 1509 ante) may become engaged where a defendant's claim to good character threatens to create a false or misleading impression.

2 This may mean only that the defendant has escaped justice on previous occasions, but in the absence of positive evidence of previous criminal behaviour it would not be appropriate for a trial judge to make any comment to that effect: cf R v Marr (1989) 90 Cr App Rep 154, [1989] Crim LR 743, CA.

7 R v Rowton (1865) Le & Ca 520, CCR; R v Redgrave (1981) 74 Cr App Rep 10, CA.

8 See R v Rowton (1865) Le & Ca 520 at 530, CCR, per Cockburn CJ: 'The only way the law allows of your getting at the disposition and tendency of [the defendant's] mind, is by evidence as to his general character founded upon the knowledge of those who know anything about him and his general conduct. . . . No one pretends that . . . examination can be made as to a specific fact, though everyone would agree that evidence of one fact of honesty or dishonesty, as the case might be, would weigh infinitely more than the opinions of a man's friends or neighbours as to his general character. The truth is, this part of our law is an anomaly. . . . Evidence must be of [D's] general reputation and not the individual opinion of the witness . . . '

Where evidence of a defendant's allegedly good general reputation has been adduced, evidence in rebuttal may include (but is not confined to) evidence suggestive of a bad reputation. The common law rule permitting the use of hearsay evidence of reputation has been preserved by the Criminal Justice Act 2003 ss 99(2), 118(1): see PARA 1515 ante.

9 See eg R v Samuel (1956) 40 Cr App Rep 8, CCA, in which the defendant was allowed to give evidence of a specific occasion on which he had behaved with commendable honesty. The defendant nevertheless has no right to insist on the admission of such evidence. See R v Redgrave (1982) 74 Cr App Rep 10 at 15, CA, per Lawton LJ: 'It was brought to our attention . . . that nowadays, as a matter of practice in [cases involving alleged homosexual offences] defendants are often allowed to say that they are happily married and having a normal sexual relationship with their wives. We are not seeking to stop defending counsel putting that kind of information before a jury. It has long been the practice for judges to allow some relaxation of the law of evidence on behalf of defendants. Had this young man been a married man, or alternatively, had he confined his relationship to one girl, it might not have been all that objectionable for him to have given evidence in general terms that his relationship with his wife or the girl was satisfactory. That would have been an indulgence on the part of the court. It would not have been his right to have it said'.

EVIDENCE/(16) EVIDENCE OF GOOD OR BAD CHARACTER/1518. Directions as to defendant's good character.

1518. Directions as to defendant's good character.

A defendant who is of previous good character<sup>1</sup> is ordinarily entitled to have this good character put to the jury by the judge in the course of the summing up<sup>2</sup>. The jury should be directed that good character cannot by itself provide a defence to a criminal charge, but is evidence which should be taken into account in his favour<sup>3</sup>. There are two limbs to a typical good character direction. First, if the defendant has testified at his trial, or if he relies on exculpatory passages in 'mixed' statements made by him before the trial<sup>4</sup>, the jury should be told that his previous good character is relevant to the question of his credibility<sup>5</sup>. The judge may, however, comment on the difference between denials made in pre-trial statements and evidence given on oath<sup>6</sup>. Secondly, the judge must direct the jury as to the relevance of the defendant's good character as an indicator of a possible lack of criminal propensity, whether or not the defendant relies on pre-trial statements or he has testified in his own defence<sup>7</sup>.

Since good character may be a relative concept<sup>8</sup>, a judge may, if the circumstances justify it, qualify that direction<sup>9</sup>, or give only one limb of the standard good character direction, omitting the other if it is inappropriate<sup>10</sup>. He may not, however, withhold or water down a defendant's good character direction merely because by giving it in the usual way he might risk prejudicing the position of a co-defendant who is not of good character<sup>11</sup>, nor (in the absence of positive evidence contradicting or qualifying claims to good character) should he undermine such claims by suggesting that the defendant's good reputation or absence of previous convictions may have been undeserved<sup>12</sup>.

1 A defendant may be of good character merely in the sense that he has no (or no significant) convictions or cautions recorded against him, or he may be of 'positive good character' in the sense that evidence has been adduced as to his positive qualities: see R v Aziz [1996] AC 41, [1995] 3 All ER 149, HL; and PARA 1515 ante. It is a misdirection to water this down by telling the jury that they are merely 'entitled' to take good character into account: R v Lloyd [2000] 2 Cr App Rep 355, CA; R v Scranage [2001] EWCA Crim 1171, [2001] All ER (D) 185 (Apr). See also R v Miah [1997] 2 Cr App Rep 12, CA; R v Sanchez [2003] EWCA Crim 735, [2003] All ER (D) 118 (Jun).

4 As to mixed statements see R v Duncan (1981) 73 Cr App Rep 359; and PARA 1541 post.

5 The right to a 'credibility' direction does not, however, extend to cases in which the defendant attempts to rely on a fundamentally exculpatory interview in which his denials are mixed with insignificant admissions, which do not add any weight to the prosecution case: R v Garrod [1997] Crim LR 445, CA.

6 R v Aziz [1996] AC 41 at 50, [1995] 3 All ER 149 at 157, HL, per Lord Steyn. The judge may also need to qualify (but should not ordinarily withhold) the direction on credibility in cases where, for example, it is conceded that the defendant lied to the police when interviewed (R v Sharp [1994] QB 261, [1993] 3 All ER 225, CA; R v Burnham [1995] Crim LR 491, CA; R v Metcalfe [2005] EWCA Crim 1814, [2005] All ER (D) 360 (Jun)).

7 R v Vye, Wise and Stephenson [1993] 3 All ER 241, 97 Cr App Rep 134, CA; R v Aziz [1996] AC 41, [1995] 3 All ER 149, HL; R v Wren [1993] Crim LR 952, CA.

8 See note 2 supra.

9 This may be appropriate for example where the defendant has admitted some lesser criminal conduct, or has a criminal record for an offence less serious than those with which he is now charged (R v Aziz [1996] AC 41, [1995] 3 All ER 149, HL; R v Durbin [1995] 2 Cr App Rep 84, CA; R v Gray [2004] EWCA Crim 1074, [2002] 2 Cr App Rep 498, [2004] All ER (D) 358 (Apr)). Cases may arise in which, despite an absence of previous convictions, a good character direction would be inappropriate, unhelpful to the defendant or even an insult to common sense (R v Aziz supra; R v Zoppola-Barraza [1994] Crim LR 833, CA; R v Akram [1995] Crim LR 50, CA; Shaw v R [2001] UKPC 26, [2001] 1 WLR 1519, [2001] All ER (D) 365 (May)). Where a defendant has attempted to conceal his past from the jury, there may be no injustice in a judge declining to give him even a qualified good character direction: R v Mailett [2005] EWCA Crim 3159, [2005] All ER (D) 98 (Nov).

Whether spent convictions require qualification of a good character direction depends on the circumstances. A recently spent conviction for a relatively serious or similar kind of offence may still be relevant. See R v Nye (1982) 75 Cr App Rep 247, CA; R v Durbin supra; R v Mentor (Steven) [2004] EWCA Crim 3104, [2005] Crim LR 472.

10 R v Sanchez [2003] EWCA Crim 735 at [35], [2003] All ER (D) 118 (Jun) per Auld LJ. The defendant in that case had previously been cautioned for theft (shoplifting) but had not previously been involved in anything as serious as the cocaine smuggling with which she was now charged. The judge rightly withheld the 'credibility limb' of a good character direction, but still gave a standard propensity direction. See also R v Martin [2000] 2 Cr App Rep 42, CA. Where a judge is minded to give only a qualified or partial direction, it may be advisable for him first to invite submissions on this from counsel (R v Aziz [1996] AC 41, [1995] 3 All ER 149, HL).

11 R v Vye, Wise and Stephenson [1993] 3 All ER 241, 97 Cr App Rep 134, CA; R v Holden (1994) 99 Cr App Rep 244, CA. If nothing has been said and no evidence has been adduced as to the bad character of the co-defendant, the judge may be justified in saying nothing at all about that co-defendant's character (R v Shepherd [1995] Crim LR 153, CA).

EVIDENCE/ (17) HEARSAY/1519. Hearsay and original evidence.

(17) HEARSAY

1519. Hearsay and original evidence.

A fact is proved by original evidence when it is proved by oral testimony in the proceedings<sup>1</sup> from witnesses who have first-hand knowledge of that fact. If a witness lacks first hand knowledge (ie he did not personally perceive or experience the fact or event in question, but has merely heard or read about it through statements made by others) any evidence he purports to give on that matter will be second-hand evidence and thus hearsay<sup>2</sup>.

Even where a person does have first-hand knowledge of the facts in question, his evidence is original evidence only when it takes the form of oral testimony in the proceedings. A previously written or recorded statement by that person is hearsay (whether or not he later gives oral testimony in the proceedings) if tendered as evidence of those facts<sup>3</sup>.

Where a witness testifies as to what he has heard or been told in a statement made by another person, this is not necessarily hearsay. It is hearsay where the court or jury is invited to believe or rely upon the truth of what was asserted in the statement, but it is not hearsay where it is proposed to establish by such evidence, not the truth of the statement, but merely the fact that it was made<sup>4</sup>.

At common law, evidence that one or more persons had, by their words or conduct, demonstrated knowledge of or belief in certain facts was, according to some authorities<sup>5</sup>, equivalent to an 'implied assertion' of those facts by the persons concerned, and thus inadmissible as hearsay if tendered as evidence to prove the existence of those facts, even if the conduct in question was not intended to assert any such facts<sup>6</sup>. This interpretation of the hearsay rule, if it was ever good law, has now been abrogated<sup>7</sup>. The rules governing the admissibility of hearsay evidence<sup>8</sup> now apply if (and only if) the purpose, or one of the purposes, of the person making the statement appears to the court to have been to cause another person to believe the matter<sup>9</sup>, or to cause another person to act or a machine to operate on the basis that the matter is as stated<sup>10</sup>.

Evidence produced by computers, cameras or other machines without incorporating any human statement cannot be hearsay<sup>11</sup>. At common law, it was held that visual images, even when produced by human hands, were not 'statements' of any facts they purported to represent and therefore could not be hearsay<sup>12</sup>, but there is now express provision to the contrary<sup>13</sup>.

1 A statement made by a witness in criminal proceedings which, in accordance with a special measures direction under the Youth Justice and Criminal Evidence Act 1999 (see PARA 1417 et seq ante), is not made by the witness in direct oral testimony in court but forms part of the witness's evidence in those proceedings (eg video-recorded evidence in chief) is treated as if made by the witness in direct oral testimony in court: see s 31(1), (2).

As from a day to be appointed, oral testimony also includes evidence given by live link under the Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 51 (not yet in force) (see PARA 1415 ante) and evidence which, by reason of any disability, disorder or other impairment, a person called as a witness gives in writing or by signs or by way of any device: s 134(1). Where a video recording of an account given by a witness is admitted as his evidence in chief under s 137(1) (not yet in force), then if, or to the extent that, the witness in his oral evidence in the proceedings asserts the truth of the statements made by him in the recorded account, they are to be treated as if made by him in that evidence: s 137(2) (not yet in force). At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed.

2 R v Gibson (1887) 18 QBD 537, CCR; Myers v DPP [1965] AC 1001, 48 Cr App Rep 348, HL; Patel v Comptroller of Customs [1966] AC 356, [1965] 3 All ER 593, PC; Customs Comptroller v Western Electric Co Ltd [1966] AC 367, [1965] 3 All ER 599, PC; R v Sharp [1988] 1 All ER 65 at 68, [1988] 1 WLR 7 at 11, HL, per Lord Havers; R v Hussain [1998] Crim LR 820, CA. Where a witness purports to know a fact, it may be necessary to cross-examine him as to the basis of that knowledge. If it transpires that his knowledge was acquired only at second-hand (ie through reliance on statements made by others) his evidence may then be challenged as hearsay: R v Rothwell (1993) 99 Cr App Rep 388, CA. As to circumstances in which hearsay evidence may be admissible see PARA 1520 post.

3 At common law, a distinction was sometimes drawn between hearsay in the strict sense (where the witness testifies as to matters of which he has no first-hand knowledge) and narrative (where the witness attempts to reinforce his testimony by reference to his own previous statements on the subject). The general rule was that neither was admissible, but evidence of a witness's previous consistent statements might in some cases be admissible not as evidence of the facts asserted, but as evidence of the consistency of the witness. As to the admissibility of evidence of a witness's previous consistent or inconsistent statements as evidence of any facts stated see now the Criminal Justice Act 2003 ss 119, 120; and PARA 1529 post.

4 Subramaniam v Public Prosecutor [1956] 1 WLR 965 at 970, PC. Where eg it is relevant to prove that an offer was made, testimony as to the words constituting the offer, given by a witness who heard it being made, is not hearsay: Woodhouse v Hall (1980) 72 Cr App Rep 39, DC; and see also Ratten v R [1972] AC 378 at 387, 56 Cr App Rep 18 at 23, PC ('The mere fact that the evidence of a witness includes evidence as to words spoken by another person who is not called is no objection to its admissibility. Words spoken are facts just as much as any other action by a human being. If the speaking of words is a relevant fact, a witness may give evidence that they were spoken. A question of hearsay arises only where the words are relied on 'testimonialially' ie as establishing some fact narrated by the words'). See also Teper v R [1952] AC 480 at 486, [1952] 2 All ER 447 at 449, PC; Mawaz Khan v R [1967] 1 AC 454, [1967] 1 All ER 80, PC (evidence that the defendants advanced a demonstrably false alibi when arrested was not hearsay (confession) evidence because the alibi was not tendered by the prosecution as evidence of truth).

A statement concerning facts which are proved by other evidence is not hearsay if relied upon merely to prove that the maker of the statement was aware of those facts: R v Blastland [1986] AC 41 at 55, 81 Cr App Rep 266 at 272, HL, approving Thomas v Connell (1838) 4 M & W 267.

The hearsay rule applies both to positive assertions of fact and to 'negative assertions' (ie cases in which it is alleged that because no mention of a fact or event is made in a statement or document which might have been expected to mention it, that fact or event is not true or did not occur): R v Patel [1981] 3 All ER 94, 73 Cr App Rep 117, CA; but cf R v Shone (1982) 76 Cr App Rep 72, CA; R v Muir (1983) 79 Cr App Rep 153, CA.

5 Wright v Doe d Tatham (1837) 7 Ad & El 313; R v Harry (1987) 86 Cr App Rep 105, CA. See also R v Kearley [1992] 2 AC 228, 95 Cr App Rep 88, HL, although arguably the evidence in that case was excluded not as hearsay but because it was considered irrelevant.

6 In contrast it is clear that conduct which is intended to convey information (eg as a pre-arranged signal or through sign language) amounts to a statement and evidence given by someone who witnessed that conduct may be hearsay: Chandrasekera (alias Alisandiri) v R [1937] AC 220, [1936] 3 All ER 865, PC.

7 See the Criminal Justice Act 2003 ss 114, 115; and PARA 1520 post. See also R v Singh [2006] EWCA Crim 660, [2006] 1 WLR 1564, [2006] All ER (D) 335 (Feb).

8 Ie the rules contained in the Criminal Justice Act 2003 Pt 11 Ch 2 (ss 114-141) (as amended) and common law rules preserved by s 118(1). See PARA 1520 et seq post.

9 Ibid s 115(3)(a).

10 Ibid s 115(3)(b). It follows that the hearsay rule no longer applies even to cases in which the witness heard another person state a fact expressly, if it appears that this other person did not thereby intend to cause the witness or any other person (or machine) to believe or act upon that fact. For example, it may be that the witness overheard a conversation between two persons in which one or both of the speakers mentioned a fact apparently well known to each of them. The witness cannot say whether this fact is true, because he has no first-hand knowledge of it, but the court may be able to infer from the reported conversation that the fact mentioned is indeed true, without having to rely on any rule by which hearsay evidence is made admissible under the Criminal Justice Act 2003.

But where, for example, a computer stores or processes data that has been inputted by human hands (and thus depends on human truthfulness and accuracy) this data may be hearsay: R v Wood supra; and see the Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 129(1) (see PARA 1472 ante).

13 A 'statement' is now defined as any representation of fact or opinion made by a person by whatever means; and it includes a representation made in a sketch, photofit or other pictorial form: Criminal Justice Act 2003 ss 115(2), 134(2).

EVIDENCE/ (17) HEARSAY/1520. Admissibility and discretionary exclusion of hearsay evidence.

1520. Admissibility and discretionary exclusion of hearsay evidence.

In criminal proceedings<sup>1</sup> a statement<sup>2</sup> not made in oral evidence in the proceedings<sup>3</sup> is admissible as evidence of any matter stated<sup>4</sup> if, but only if: (1) any statutory provision makes it admissible<sup>5</sup>; (2) it is admissible under a common law rule that has been expressly preserved under the Criminal Justice Act 2003<sup>6</sup>; (3) all parties to the proceedings agree to it being admissible<sup>7</sup>; or (4) the court is satisfied that it is in the interests of justice for it to be admissible<sup>8</sup>.

Further restrictions apply to 'multiple hearsay' in which one hearsay statement<sup>9</sup> is used to prove that an earlier hearsay statement was made<sup>10</sup>.

Where hearsay evidence is admissible, the court may nevertheless refuse to admit it as evidence of a matter stated if the statement was made otherwise than in oral evidence in the proceedings and the court is satisfied that the case for excluding the statement, taking account of the danger that to admit it would result in undue waste of time, substantially outweighs the case for admitting it, taking account of the value of the evidence<sup>11</sup>. Prosecution (but not defence) evidence may alternatively be excluded either in the exercise of the court's discretion at common law<sup>12</sup> or where it appears to the court that, having regard to all the circumstances, including the circumstances in which the evidence was obtained, the admission of the evidence would have such an adverse effect on the fairness of the proceedings that the court ought not to admit it<sup>13</sup>. Human rights issues must be considered in this context<sup>14</sup>.

A party proposing to tender hearsay evidence must comply with requirements prescribed by the Criminal Procedure Rules (notably in respect of advance notice)<sup>15</sup>. If he fails to comply, one of the consequences is that the evidence is not admissible except with the court's leave<sup>16</sup>.

1 For the meaning of 'criminal proceedings' see PARA 1464 note 2 ante. See also R v H [2005] EWCA Crim 2083, [2006] 1 Cr App Rep 50, [2005] All ER (D) 311 (Jul). As to hearsay evidence in proceedings before service courts see the Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 135, Sch 7 (amended by the Courts Act 2003 (Consequential Amendments) Order 2004, SI 2004/2035, art 3, Schedule paras 45, 53) (see ARMED FORCES). Proceedings under the Crime and Disorder Act 1998 s 1C (as added and amended) (anti-social behaviour orders following criminal conviction) (see SENTENCING AND DISPOSITION OF OFFENDERS vol 92 (2010) PARA 304) are not criminal proceedings and the admissibility of hearsay evidence in such proceedings is governed by the Civil Evidence Act 1995 (see CIVIL PROCEDURE vol 11 (2009) PARA 808 et seq): R (on the application of W) v Acton Youth Court [2005] EWHC 954 (Admin), [2005] All ER (D) 284 (May).

2 For the meaning of 'statement' see PARA 1519 note 13 ante.

3 As to the meaning of 'oral evidence in the proceedings' see PARA 1519 note 1 ante.

4 Ie it is admissible despite being hearsay (unless it falls to be excluded on grounds other than the fact that it is hearsay: see the Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 114(3)). As to the meaning of 'matters stated' see s 115(3); and PARA 1519 text and notes 9-10 ante. Although the Criminal Justice Act 2003 does not directly address the status of oral testimony from witnesses who are found to lack first-hand knowledge of the matters on which they purport to testify, R v Rothwell (1993) 99 Cr App Rep 388, CA (see PARA 1519 note 2 ante) clearly remains good law (ie the witness's testimony cannot be admissible unless any statements from which his second-hand knowledge is derived would themselves be admissible).

5 Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 114(1)(a). A 'statutory provision' means any provision contained in, or in an instrument made under, the Criminal Justice Act 2003 or any other Act, including any Act passed after the Criminal Justice Act 2003: s 134(1). As to hearsay admissible under the Criminal Justice Act 2003 see PARA 1521 et seq post. As to the admissibility of hearsay in the form of confessions see the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 76 (as amended), s 76A (as added); and PARA 1540 post.

6 Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 114(1)(b). Common law rules are preserved by s 118(1): see PARA 1523 et seq post.

7 Ibid s 114(1)(c).

8 Ibid s 114(1)(d). See R v Xhabri [2005] EWCA Crim 3135, [2006] 1 All ER 776. See also the Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 114(2); and PARA 1530 post.

9 I.e. a statement, not made in oral evidence, that is relied on as evidence of a matter stated in it: ibid s 121(2).

10 A hearsay statement is not admissible to prove the fact that an earlier hearsay statement was made unless: (1) either of the statements is admissible under ibid s 117 (see PARA 1522 post), s 119 or s 120 (see PARA 1529 post); (2) all parties to the proceedings so agree; or (3) the court is satisfied that the value of the evidence in question, taking into account how reliable the statements appear to be, is so high that the interests of justice require the later statement to be admissible for that purpose: s 121(1). See R v Xhabri [2005] EWCA Crim 3135, [2006] 1 All ER 776; Maheer v DPP [2006] EWHC 1271 (Admin), [2006] EWHC 1271 (Admin), 170 JP 441.

11 Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 126(1). The potential application of this discretion appears narrower than that of the Criminal Justice Act 1988 s 26 (repealed) under which the court was able to take account of the wider interests of justice even when excluding evidence tendered by the defence: see R v Patel [1993] Crim LR 291, CA; R v Gregory [1995] Crim LR 568, CA. But see R v C [2006] EWCA Crim 197, [2006] All ER (D) 287 (Feb), in which it was held that the power to exclude evidence under the Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 126(1) is in fact extensive.

12 This discretion is preserved by ibid s 126(2)(b): see PARA 1365 ante.

13 Ibid s 126(2)(a). This power of the court to exclude evidence is under the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 78(1): see PARA 1365 ante.

14 By virtue of the Convention for the Protection of Human Rights and Fundamental Freedoms (Rome, 4 November 1950; TS 71 (1953); Cmd 8969) art 6(3)(d), everyone charged with a criminal offence has the right to examine or have examined witnesses against him and to obtain the attendance and examination of witnesses on his behalf under the same conditions as witnesses against him. The Convention is commonly referred to as the European Convention on Human Rights and is enshrined in the Human Rights Act 1998 Sch 1: see CONSTITUTIONAL LAW AND HUMAN RIGHTS vol 8(2) (Reissue) PARA 122 et seq. To the extent that art 6 (right to a fair trial) would be infringed by admitting such evidence, the court has a power to exclude the evidence under the Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 126 and a duty so to do by virtue of the Human Rights Act 1998. There can thus be no question of the Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 114 (see the text to notes 1-8 supra) being incompatible with the Convention. Article 6(3)(d) of the Convention does not, however, give a defendant an absolute right to examine every witness whose testimony is adduced against him. The touchstone is whether fairness of the trial requires this: R v Xhabri [2005] EWCA Crim 3135 at [43]-[44], [2006] 1 All ER 776 at [43]-[44] per Lord Phillips of Worth Matravers CJ, giving the judgment of the court. Hearsay evidence from 'absent witnesses' may in some cases be admitted without infringing the Convention, eg where the witness in question is dead (R v Al-Khawaja [2005] EWCA Crim 2697, [2006] 1 All ER 543, [2006] 1 Cr App Rep 184) or too ill to testify (Trivedi v United Kingdom [1997] EHRLR 520) or has been intimidated by the defendant or persons acting on his behalf (R v Sellick [2005] EWCA Crim 651, [2005] 1 WLR 3257, [2005] All ER (D) 223 (Mar); R v Thomas [1998] Crim LR 887, CA). In 'fear or intimidation' cases the rights and safety of potential witnesses may need to be balanced against those of the defendant, and this may justify the admission of hearsay evidence: Doorson v Netherlands (1996) 22 EHRR 330, ECtHR. See also R v Radak [1999] 1 Cr App Rep 187, [1999] Crim LR 223, CA; R v Gokal [1997] 2 Cr App Rep 266, CA; Luca v Italy [2001] Crim LR 747, ECtHR.

1521. Cases where a witness is unavailable.

- 2215 (a) the relevant person is dead<sup>8</sup>;
- 2216 (b) the relevant person is unfit to be a witness because of his bodily or mental condition<sup>9</sup>;
- 2217 (c) the relevant person is outside the United Kingdom<sup>10</sup> and it is not reasonably practicable to secure his attendance<sup>11</sup>;
- 2218 (d) the relevant person cannot be found although such steps as it is reasonably practicable to take to find him have been taken<sup>12</sup>; or
- 2219 (e) through fear<sup>13</sup> the relevant person does not give (or does not continue to give) oral evidence in the proceedings, either at all or in connection with the subject matter of the statement, and the court gives leave for the statement to be given in evidence<sup>14</sup>.

An appropriate direction is required in cases where hearsay evidence is admitted. This should draw the jury's attention to the inherent deficiencies of hearsay evidence<sup>15</sup>. It may be appropriate to explain why the relevant person is not available to testify, but not where such an explanation would be prejudicial to the defendant<sup>16</sup>.

1 For the meaning of 'criminal proceedings' see PARA 1464 note 2 ante.

2 For the meaning of 'statement' see PARA 1519 note 13 ante.

3 As to the meaning of 'oral evidence in the proceedings' see PARA 1519 note 1 ante.

4 As to the meaning of 'matters stated' see the Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 115(3); and PARA 1519 text and notes 9-10 ante.

5 Ibid s 116(1)(a). It is not necessary that such evidence would have been original (first-hand) evidence, but as to the additional requirements that are imposed by s 121 in respect of multiple hearsay see PARA 1520 ante. Nothing in s 116 makes a statement admissible as evidence if it was made by a person who did not have the required capability (ie would not have been competent to testify as a witness) at the time when he made the statement: see s 123(1), (3). See further PARA 1407 ante.

6 Ibid s 116(1)(b). Where the relevant person cannot be identified, the statement may in some cases be admissible on another basis (eg under the res gestae principle preserved under s 118(1): see PARA 1525 post) or in the interests of justice under s 114(1)(d) (see PARA 1530 post).

7 Ibid s 116(1)(c). These conditions are largely similar (but not identical) to those which previously governed the admissibility of first-hand documentary hearsay under the Criminal Justice Act 1988 s 23 (repealed) and the following cases were all decided under that Act. The burden of proof in respect of the specified conditions lies on the party seeking to adduce the evidence (see PARA 1373 ante) and admissible evidence must be used to prove that the conditions are satisfied: see Neill v North Antrim Magistrates' Court [1992] 4 All ER 846, 97 Cr App Rep 121, HL; R v Lobban [2004] EWCA Crim 1099, [2004] All ER (D) 91 (May), CA. A statement in a document cannot for this purpose be relied upon as evidence of that same document's admissibility (eg where it recites that the maker is about to go abroad and will not be able to return for the trial): R v Case [1991] Crim LR 192, CA. See further note 14 infra.

A condition which is in fact satisfied is to be treated as not satisfied if it is shown that the circumstances described are caused by the person in support of whose case it is sought to give the statement in evidence, or by a person acting on his behalf, in order to prevent the relevant person giving oral evidence in the proceedings (whether at all or in connection with the subject matter of the statement): Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 116(5).

8 Ibid s 116(2)(a).

9 Ibid s 116(2)(b). This may include inability to testify because of stress or anxiety: R v Setz-Dempsey (1994) 98 Cr App Rep 23, [1994] Crim LR 123, CA (decided under the Criminal Justice Act 1988 s 23).

10 For the meaning of 'United Kingdom' see PARA 45 note 2 ante. It is not sufficient that a person who is within the United Kingdom cannot be compelled to testify because he enjoys diplomatic immunity: R v Jimenez-Paez (1994) 98 Cr App Rep 239, [1993] Crim LR 596, CA (decided under the Criminal Justice Act 1988 s 23).

11 Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 116(2)(c). In deciding whether it is reasonably practicable to secure the witness's attendance to give oral testimony, a court or judge must weigh a number of factors, including the potential importance of the evidence, the expense and inconvenience that would be involved in securing the witness's attendance, and any particular reasons put forward as to why it would not be practicable or convenient for the witness to attend: R v Castillo [1996] 1 Cr App Rep 438, 140 Sol Jo LB 12, CA; R v Yu [2006] EWCA Crim 349, [2006] All ER (D) 29 (Feb). See also R v French and Gowhar (1993) 97 Cr App Rep 421, CA; R v Hurst [1995] 1 Cr App Rep 82, CA (all decided under the Criminal Justice Act 1988 s 23). Consideration should also be given to whether the witness's evidence may be secured by other means, such as by using a live link (see R v Radak [1999] 1 Cr App Rep 187, [1999] Crim LR 223, CA; and PARA 1414 ante).

13 'Fear' is to be widely construed and, for example, includes fear of the death or injury of another person or of financial loss: ibid s 116(3). There is no requirement that the fear must be justified or reasonable (cf R v Acton Justices, ex p McMullen (1990) 92 Cr App Rep 98, DC); but see the Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 116(4) (see note 14 infra).

14 Ibid s 116(2)(e). Leave may be given under s 116(2)(e) only if the court considers that the statement ought to be admitted in the interests of justice, having regard: (1) to the statement's contents; (2) to any risk that its admission or exclusion will result in unfairness to any party to the proceedings (and in particular to how difficult it will be to challenge the statement if the relevant person does not give oral evidence); (3) in appropriate cases, to the fact that a direction under the Youth Justice and Criminal Evidence Act 1999 s 19 (special measures for the giving of evidence by fearful witnesses etc) (see PARA 1419 ante) could be made in relation to the relevant person; and (4) to any other relevant circumstances: Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 116(4). See also R (on the application of Robinson) v Sutton Coldfield Magistrates' Court [2006] EWHC 307 (Admin), 170 JP 336, [2006] All ER (D) 28 (Feb).

As to the means by which the relevant person's fear may be established (including the possible use of evidence from the fearful witness on the voir dire) see R v Acton Justices, ex p McMullen (1991) 92 Cr App Rep 98, DC; R v Lobban [2004] EWCA Crim 1099, [2004] All ER (D) 91 (May) (decided under the Criminal Justice Act 1988 s 23). Where the defence on proper grounds can point to the necessity for them to be able to cross examine the witness or witnesses called to give evidence about the reason for the inability of a particular prosecution witness to attend to give evidence, they should ordinarily be given such an opportunity: R v Wood and Fitzsimmons [1998] Crim LR 213, CA; R v Elliot [2003] EWCA Crim 1695; but special arrangements may sometimes be appropriate in the case of the fearful witness himself: eg some vulnerable witnesses may insist, for reasons which the judge feels he should act on, that they are only prepared to be questioned by the judge. In those circumstances it may be appropriate to depart from the usual course, but reasonable steps, such as have been identified with the assistance of counsel, should be taken to protect the interests of both the prosecution and the defence; eg counsel should be asked to identify the questions and issues they respectively wish to have explored with the witness during the voir dire. Thereafter, it will be for the judge to determine what questions should be asked, but the identification of the relevant issues in this way will significantly help to ensure the proceedings are fair. Additionally, it may be necessary to separate the defendant from the witness by means of screens or a television link: R v Lobban supra at [38] per Fulford J, giving the judgment of the court.

15 See Judicial Studies Board, Specimen Direction No 35.

16 This may be a particularly sensitive issue where eg the relevant person claims to have been intimidated. See R v Ricketts [1991] Crim LR 915, CA; R v Churchill [1993] Crim LR 285, CA; R v Jennings [1995] Crim LR 810, CA.

As to human rights issues arising from the use of hearsay evidence from key (but absent or deceased) prosecution witnesses see R v Al-Khawaja [2005] EWCA Crim 2697, [2006] 1 All ER 543, [2006] 1 Cr App Rep 184; and PARA 1520 note 14 ante.

1521 Cases where a witness is unavailable

NOTES 8, 9--Where a witness is dead, or cannot be called for some other reason, the question of whether the admission of a statement from that witness will impair the fairness of a trial, will depend on the facts of the particular case: R v Cole; R v Keet [2007] EWCA Crim 1924, [2007] 1 WLR 2716.

NOTE 12--See R v Adams [2007] EWCA Crim 3025, (2007) 172 JP 113; R v T (D) [2009] All ER (D) 34 (Jun), CA.

NOTE 13--Courts will be ill-advised to seek to test the basis of fear by calling witnesses since that may undermine the very thing that the 2003 Act s 116 is designed to avoid: R v Davies [2006] EWCA Crim 2643, [2007] 2 All ER 1070.

NOTE 16--The hearsay rule and exceptions to it developed by common law and the Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 116 are consistent with the defendant's right under the European Convention on Human Rights art 6(3)(d) to examine witnesses against him: see R v Horncastle; R v Marquis [2009] UKSC 14, [2010] 2 All ER 359.

EVIDENCE/ (17) HEARSAY/1522. Business and other documents.

1522. Business and other documents.

The following requirements must each be satisfied in every case where hearsay evidence is to be admitted under this principle<sup>8</sup>:

- 2220 (1) the document or the part containing the statement was created or received by a person in the course of a trade, business, profession or other occupation, or as the holder of a paid or unpaid office<sup>9</sup>;
- 2221 (2) the person who supplied the information contained in the statement (the relevant person) had or may reasonably be supposed to have had personal knowledge of the matters dealt with<sup>10</sup>; and
- 2222 (3) each person (if any) through whom the information was supplied from the relevant person to the person mentioned in head (1) above received the information in the course of a trade, business, profession or other occupation, or as the holder of a paid or unpaid office<sup>11</sup>.

The additional requirements applicable to statements prepared for the purposes of pending or contemplated criminal proceedings, or for a criminal investigation are:

- 2223 (a) that any of the five conditions applicable to statements from persons who are not available to testify is satisfied<sup>12</sup>; or
- 2224 (b) the relevant person cannot reasonably be expected to have any recollection of the matters dealt with in the statement (having regard to the length of time since he supplied the information and all other circumstances)<sup>13</sup>.

Even where the above conditions are satisfied, the court may rule a statement inadmissible if satisfied that the statement's reliability as evidence for the purpose for which it is tendered is doubtful in view of: (i) its contents; (ii) the source of the information contained in it; (iii) the way in which or the circumstances in which the information was supplied or received; or (iv) the way in which or the circumstances in which the document concerned was created or received<sup>14</sup>.

1 For the meaning of 'criminal proceedings' see PARA 1464 note 2 ante.

2 For the meaning of 'statement' see PARA 1519 note 13 ante.

3 For the meaning of 'document' see PARA 1462 note 4 ante. As to the admissibility of authenticated copies of documents see the Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 133; and PARA 1464 ante.

4 As to the meaning of 'matters stated' see ibid s 115(3); and PARA 1519 text and notes 9-10 ante.

5 Ibid s 117(1)(a). Section 117 is similar in most respects to the Criminal Justice Act 1988 s 24, which it replaces.

6 Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 117(1)(b).

7 Ibid s 117(1)(c), (4)(a). See R v Bedi (1991) 95 Cr App Rep 21, CA; R v Hogan [1997] Crim LR 349, CA. The additional requirements do not apply to a statement prepared pursuant to a request under the Crime (International Co-operation) Act 2003 s 7 or an order under the Criminal Justice Act 1988 Sch 13 para 6 (as amended) (which relate to overseas evidence) (see PARA 903 ante); Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 117(4)(b).

8 Ie under ibid s 117. Where certain requirements are not satisfied, the statement may in some cases be admissible on another basis (eg as a public document under rules preserved by s 118(1) or in the interests of justice under s 114(1)(d): see PARA 1530 post.

9 Ibid s 117(2)(a). Examples of documents held to satisfy requirements of the similarly worded Criminal Justice Act 1988 s 24 (repealed) include the label on a bottle alleged to contain veterinary medicine (Department of Environment, Food and Rural Affairs v Atkinson [2002] EWHC 2029 (Admin), [2002] All ER (D) 116 (Oct)), police custody records (R v Hogan [1997] Crim LR 349, CA) and a transcript of evidence given at an earlier trial (R v Lockley [1995] 2 Cr App Rep 554, CA).

10 Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 117(2)(b). This may be the same person as the one who created or received the document etc under s 117(2)(a) (see head (1) in the text): s 117(3). As to the importance of identifying the relevant person (particularly in documents to which the additional requirements imposed by s 117(4)(a) apply (see the text and note 7 supra)) see R v Humphris [2005] EWCA Crim 2030, [2005] All ER (D) 105 (Sep).

11 Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 117(2)(c). Nothing in s 117 makes a statement admissible as evidence if any person who, in order for the requirements of s 117(2) to be satisfied, must at any time have supplied or received the information concerned or created or received the document or part concerned did not have the required capability at that time (ie would not then have been competent to testify as a witness) or cannot be identified but cannot reasonably be assumed to have had the required capability at that time: s 123(2), (3). See further PARA 1407 ante.

12 Ibid s 117(5)(a). The conditions are the requirements set out in s 116(2) (see PARA 1521 ante).

13 Ibid s 117(5)(b). See R v Carrington [1994] Crim LR 438, CA (decided under the Criminal Justice Act 1988 s 24 (repealed)); R v Humphris [2005] EWCA Crim 2030, [2005] All ER (D) 105 (Sep).

14 Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 117(6), (7). This provision in effect gives the court a discretion to exclude documentary hearsay evidence even when tendered by the defence (evidence in respect of which the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 78 (as amended) (see PARA 1365 ante) has no application). A much broader discretion was previously exercisable under the Criminal Justice Act 1988 s 25 (repealed) and, in respect of statements prepared for the purposes of pending or contemplated criminal proceedings, or for a criminal investigation, s 26 (repealed), but the Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 117(7) focuses on the reliability of the evidence and does not appear to permit challenges to admissibility based on any other considerations.

1523. Public information etc.

The following exceptions to the rule against hearsay were established at common law, and have now been preserved by statute<sup>1</sup>:

- 2225 (1) published works dealing with matters of a public nature (such as histories, scientific works, dictionaries and maps) may be admissible as evidence of facts of a public nature stated in them<sup>2</sup>;
- 2226 (2) public documents (such as public registers, and returns made under public authority with respect to matters of public interest) may be admissible as evidence of facts stated in them<sup>3</sup>;
- 2227 (3) records (such as the records of certain courts, treaties, Crown grants, pardons and commissions) may be admissible as evidence of facts stated in them<sup>4</sup>; and
- 2228 (4) evidence relating to a person's age or date or place of birth may in some cases be given by a person without personal knowledge of the matter<sup>5</sup>.

1 Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 118(1).

2 Read v Bishop of Lincoln [1892] AC 644 at 653, HL, per Lord Halsbury LC.

3 To be admissible under the public documents principle, a document must contain information of public interest, although not necessarily of widespread or general interest, and it must be open to inspection by members of the public on or without payment: Sturla v Freccia (1880) 5 App Cas 623, HL; Heath v Deane [1905] 2 Ch 86. Thus, the Companies Register is public (R v Halpin [1975] QB 907, [1975] 2 All ER 1124, CA) whereas National Health Service records or army regimental records, to which the public have no access, are not (Lilley v Pettit [1946] KB 401, sub nom Pettit v Lilley [1946] 1 All ER 593). Documents made by a public officer for his own personal use or reference are not admissible under this principle: Merrick v Wakley (1838) 8 Ad & El 170. It is not necessary for the official responsible for compiling or maintaining the records to have any duty to verify their accuracy: R v Halpin supra.

4 Such records may or may not be public documents within the meaning of head (2) in the text.

5 See R v Bellis (1911) 6 Cr App Rep 283, CCA; Bird v Keep [1918] 2 KB 692. An entry in a register of births or deaths (or a certified copy of such an entry) will ordinarily be admissible by statute as to the facts recorded (see the Births and Deaths Registration Act 1953 s 34 (as amended)); and CIVIL PROCEDURE vol 11 (2009) PARA 906) but further evidence may in some cases be needed to identify a person as the one recorded in the register, and a person cannot give original evidence as to the circumstances of his own birth.

Halsbury's Laws of England/CRIMINAL LAW, EVIDENCE AND PROCEDURE (VOLUME 11(1) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1-620; VOLUME 11(2) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 621-1049; VOLUME 11(3) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1050-1557; VOLUME 11(4) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1558-2180)/20. EVIDENCE/ (17) HEARSAY/1524. Reputation as to character or family tradition.

1524. Reputation as to character or family tradition.

The following exceptions to the rule against hearsay were established at common law, and have now been preserved by statute<sup>1</sup>:

- 2229 (1) any rule of law under which in criminal proceedings<sup>2</sup> evidence of a person's reputation is admissible for the purpose of proving his good or bad character<sup>3</sup>; and 2230 (2) any rule of law under which in criminal proceedings evidence of reputation or family tradition is admissible for the purpose of proving or disproving: (a) pedigree or the existence of a marriage; (b) the existence of any public or general right; or (c) the identity of any person or thing<sup>4</sup>.

However, these rules are preserved only so far as they allow the court to treat such evidence as proving or disproving the matter concerned<sup>5</sup>.

1 Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 118(1). See also s 99(2).

2 For the meaning of 'criminal proceedings' see PARA 1464 note 2 ante.

3 A defendant may give or call evidence as to his own good reputation, but not evidence as to specific deeds done by him: R v Rowton (1865) Le & Ca 520, CCCR. At common law, evidence may be given on behalf of either side to show that a witness as to the facts, other than the defendant, called by the other side has such a character or reputation that he ought not to be believed: R v Brown and Hedley (1867) LR 1 CCR 70; R v Bispham (1830) 4 C & P 392; R v Gunewardene [1951] 2 KB 600 at 609, 35 Cr App Rep 80 at 90, CCA, per Lord Goddard CJ. A witness called in such circumstances may be asked whether he has knowledge of the general reputation of the impugned witness for veracity, and whether, on the basis of such knowledge, he would believe the sworn testimony of the witness: R v Richardson [1969] 1 QB 299, sub nom R v Longman, R v Richardson [1968] 2 All ER 761, CA.

4 Evidence of reputation as being married is not sufficient to support a charge of bigamy: R v Woodward (1838) 8 C & P 561; Catherwood v Caslon (1844) 13 M & W 261 at 265; cf R v Wilson (1862) 3 F & F 119.

5 If they are concerned only with the mechanics of proof and do not determine whether the matter concerned is itself relevant or admissible. Thus, evidence of a non-defendant's bad character must be admissible under the Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 100 (see PARA 1504 ante) before evidence of reputation may be used to establish it under s 118(1); and evidence of a defendant's bad character must likewise be admissible under s 101 (see PARA 1505 ante).

1525. Res gestae.

The following exceptions to the rule against hearsay were established at common law, and have now been preserved by statute<sup>1</sup> in so far as they apply to criminal proceedings<sup>2</sup>. They are each considered to concern evidence forming part of the 'res gestae' (that is they are 'facts or statements so closely surrounding or accompanying the event or transaction in question as to form an intrinsic part of the overall picture')<sup>3</sup>.

- 2231 (1) A statement may be admissible as evidence of any matter stated<sup>4</sup> if it was made by a person (who may or may not be available to testify as a witness<sup>5</sup>) so emotionally overpowered by an event that the possibility of concoction or distortion can be disregarded<sup>6</sup>.
- 2232 (2) A statement may be admissible as evidence of any matter stated if it accompanied an act which can be properly evaluated as evidence only if considered in conjunction with the statement<sup>7</sup>.
- 2233 (3) A statement may be admissible as evidence of any matter stated if it relates to a physical sensation or a mental state (such as intention or emotion)<sup>8</sup>.

Although preserved, the practical importance of the res gestae principle (often used at common law to admit the dying statements of murder victims or of other persons since deceased) appears to be greatly diminished given the extensive provision for the admission of hearsay evidence by statute<sup>9</sup>.

1 Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 118(1).

2 As to the meaning of 'criminal proceedings' see PARA 1464 note 2 ante.

3 Teper v R [1952] AC 480 at 486, [1952] 2 All ER 447 at 448, PC. The term 'res gestae' is also used in some cases to describe events related to the events in issue but in which no question of the reception of hearsay evidence is involved.

4 The definition of 'matter stated' in the Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 115(3) (see PARA 1519 text and notes 9-10 ante) does not directly apply to res gestae statements which remain admissible at common law.

5 R v Andrews [1987] AC 281 at 302, 84 Cr App Rep 382 at 392, HL, per Lord Ackner (the res gestae principle should not be used as a device to avoid the inconvenience of calling oral testimony from witnesses who are available to attend the trial).

6 The possibility of concoction or distortion can be disregarded where the event which has given rise to the statement is so unusual or startling or dramatic as to dominate the thoughts of the speaker, so that his utterance was an instinctive reaction to the event, thus giving no time for reasoned reflection: R v Andrews [1987] AC 281 at 301, 84 Cr App Rep 382 at 391, HL, per Lord Ackner. See also Ratten v R [1972] AC 378, 56 Cr App Rep 18, PC, followed in R v Andrews supra; R v Nye, R v Loan (1977) 66 Cr App Rep 252, CA; R v Turnbull (1984) 80 Cr App Rep 104, CA. To satisfy that requirement the statement must have been made in circumstances of approximate, but not exact, contemporaneity, so that it can fairly be stated that the mind of the speaker was still dominated by the event: R v Andrews supra at 301 and 391, per Lord Ackner; Ratten v R supra; R v Glover [1991] Crim LR 48, CA. For an example of a case decided under the test in R v Andrews supra where the event (a minor traffic accident) was not sufficiently exciting to justify the admissibility of a subsequent statement see Tobi v Nicholas [1988] RTR 343, 86 Cr App Rep 323, DC. In addition, there must be no special features, apart from the time factor, suggesting concoction or distortion of the statement, such as malice on the part of the speaker: R v Andrews supra at 302 and 393 per Lord Ackner. Admissibility should be established without reliance on the contents of the statement itself, which would otherwise lift itself into the area of admissibility: Ratten v R [1972] AC 378, 56 Cr App Rep 18, PC. Any possibility of error in the facts related in the statement goes to the weight to be attached to it and not to the admissibility of the statement, and is therefore a matter for the jury, unless there are special features going beyond the ordinary fallibility of human recollection, such as the intoxication of the speaker, or the defectiveness of his eyesight: R v Andrews supra at 301 and 392 per Lord Ackner; and see Mills v R [1995] 3 All ER 865, [1995] 1 WLR 511, PC.

EVIDENCE/ (17) HEARSAY/1526. Confessions and admissions.

1526. Confessions and admissions.

Confessions and admissions<sup>1</sup> (other than formal admissions<sup>2</sup>) made by or on behalf of defendants<sup>3</sup> are admissible in criminal proceedings (if at all) only by way of exception to the rule against hearsay<sup>4</sup>. Common law rules in this area have largely been supplanted by statute<sup>5</sup>, but certain common law rules relating to the admissibility of confessions and vicarious admissions in criminal proceedings have been preserved<sup>6</sup>, namely:

2234 (1) any rule of law relating to the admissibility of confessions or mixed statements<sup>7</sup> in criminal proceedings; and

1 See PARA 1537 et seq post.

2 See PARA 1538 post.

3 Self-incriminating statements made by third parties are not admissible as confessions (R v Turner (1975) 61 Cr App Rep 67, CA) but may now be admissible eg under the Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 116 (see PARA 1521 ante) or s 114(1)(d) (see PARA 1530 post).

4 A statement by a defendant is not a confession if it is incriminating only on the basis of its manifest falsity: Mawaz Khan v R [1967] 1 AC 454, [1967] 1 All ER 80, PC (prosecution evidence of demonstrably false alibi concocted by defendants was not hearsay and thus not subject to rules governing confessions, because the prosecution did not rely on it as being true). See also R v Z [2005] UKHL 22, [2005] 2 AC 467, sub nom R v Hasan [2005] 4 All ER 685, reversing R v Z [2003] EWCA Crim 191, [2003] 1 WLR 1489, [2003] 2 Cr App Rep 173.

5 The admissibility of confessions is primarily governed by the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 76 (as amended), s 76A (as added): see PARA 1540 et seq post.

6 Ie by the Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 118(1).

7 As to mixed statements (ie statements that are only in part incriminating) see PARA 1541 post. As to the admissibility at common law of evidence concerning statements made in the presence of a defendant and not denied by him (also preserved by the Criminal Justice and Public Order Act 1994 s 34(5)) see PARA 1552 post.

8 As to the admissibility at common law of admissions made on a defendant's behalf by persons who have authority to make them see PARA 1539 post.

EVIDENCE/ (17) HEARSAY/1527. Common enterprise or conspiracy.

1527. Common enterprise or conspiracy.

At common law<sup>1</sup> statements made, or acts done, by one of several accomplices or conspirators in pursuance of a common enterprise or conspiracy<sup>2</sup> may be admissible as evidence against the others<sup>3</sup>; but there must be independent evidence to prove the existence of the conspiracy or common enterprise<sup>4</sup>, and at common law a statement which is not proved to have been made in pursuance of this common enterprise can be evidence only against its maker<sup>5</sup>.

1 The common law rule is preserved by the Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 118(1).

2 As to what may be regarded as a single common enterprise or conspiracy (as opposed to two or more individual ones) see R v Gray [1995] 2 Cr App Rep 100, [1995] Crim LR 45, CA (the principle is limited to evidence which shows the involvement of each of the defendants in the commission of the offence or offences). See also R v Murray [1997] 2 Cr App Rep 136, [1997] Crim LR 506, CA; R v Williams [2002] EWCA Crim 2208, [2002] All ER (D) 200 (Oct), CA. It is not limited to cases in which a conspiracy is alleged: see R v Jones [1997] 2 Cr App Rep 119, CA.

3 R v Blake and Tye (1844) 6 QB 126. See also R v Hardy (1794) 24 State Tr 199; R v Hunt (1820) 3 B & Ald 566; R v Shellard (1840) 9 C & P 277; R v Meany (1867) 10 Cox CC 506; R v McCafferty (1867) 10 Cox CC 603; R v Whitaker [1914] 3 KB 1283, 10 Cr App Rep 245, CCA; R v Steward [1963] Crim LR 697, DC; R v Walters (1979) 69 Cr App Rep 115, CA; R v Donat (1985) 82 Cr App Rep 173, CA. Where a conspiracy is alleged between A, B and C, statements made by A or B before C is shown to have become involved are only capable of being evidence against C to the extent that they prove the origin, character and object of the conspiracy, and cannot be evidence of C's later involvement: R v Governor of Pentonville Prison, ex p Osman [1989] 3 All ER 701 at 730, 90 Cr App Rep 281 at 312 per Lloyd LJ. It is possible that a statement may have wider admissibility by statute (eg under the Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 116: see PARA 1521 ante). A statement may be made in pursuance of a common enterprise even where it does nothing to advance that enterprise, as long as it provides evidence of that enterprise in operation: see R v Jones (Brian) [1997] 2 Cr App Rep 119, CA; R v Platten [2006] EWCA Crim 140, [2006] All ER (D) 194 (Feb).

1528. Expert evidence.

At common law, an expert witness in criminal proceedings may draw on the body of expertise relevant to his field when assessing evidence in the case and when drawing inferences or expressing opinions concerning that evidence<sup>1</sup>. This principle is now recognised and preserved by statute<sup>2</sup>.

Further provision has been made by statute as to the admissibility of expert evidence that might otherwise be excluded as hearsay<sup>3</sup>.

EVIDENCE/ (17) HEARSAY/1529. Previous statements of a witness.

1529. Previous statements of a witness.

Where a witness is called to give evidence in criminal proceedings<sup>1</sup>, a previous statement by that witness is admissible as evidence of any matter stated<sup>2</sup> of which oral evidence by him would be admissible<sup>3</sup>, if:

- 2236 (1) the statement identifies or describes a person, object or place<sup>4</sup>;
- 2237 (2) the statement was made by the witness when the matters stated were fresh in his memory but he does not remember them, and cannot reasonably be expected to remember them, well enough to give oral evidence of them in the proceedings<sup>5</sup>; or
- 2238 (3) (a) the witness claims to be a person against whom an offence has been committed; (b) the offence is one to which the proceedings relate; (c) the statement consists of a complaint made by the witness (whether to a person in authority or not) about conduct which would, if proved, constitute the offence or part of the offence; (d) the complaint was made as soon as could reasonably be expected after the alleged conduct; (e) the complaint was not made as a result of a threat or a promise; and (f) before the statement is adduced the witness gives oral evidence in connection with its subject matter<sup>6</sup>.

However, in all such cases the witness must while giving evidence indicate that to the best of his belief he made the statement, and that to the best of his belief it states the truth<sup>7</sup>.

If a previous statement by the witness is admitted as evidence to rebut a suggestion that his oral evidence has been fabricated, that statement is admissible as evidence of any matter stated of which oral evidence by the witness would be admissible<sup>8</sup>.

If a witness admits making a previous inconsistent statement<sup>9</sup> or if a previous inconsistent statement made by him is proved<sup>10</sup>, the statement is admissible as evidence of any matter stated of which oral evidence by him would be admissible<sup>11</sup>.

A statement made by the witness in a document which is used by him to refresh his memory while giving evidence, on which he is cross-examined, and which as a consequence is received in evidence in the proceedings, is admissible as evidence of any matter stated of which oral evidence by him would be admissible<sup>12</sup>.

However, no previous statement by a witness is admissible as evidence under any of the above heads unless that witness would have been competent to give at least unsworn testimony at the time when he made the statement<sup>13</sup>; and where a document containing a previous statement by a witness is produced as an exhibit it must not accompany the jury when it retires to consider its verdict unless the court considers it appropriate, or all the parties to the proceedings agree that it should accompany the jury<sup>14</sup>.

1 The term 'witness' includes a defendant who testifies for the defence. For the meaning of 'criminal proceedings' see PARA 1464 note 2 ante.

2 For the meaning of 'statement' see PARA 1519 note 13 ante; and as to the meaning of 'matters stated' see PARA 1519 text to notes 9-10 ante.

3 Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 120(1), (4)(a).

4 Ibid s 120(5).

5 Ibid s 120(6).

6 Ibid s 120(7); R v Xhabri [2005] EWCA Crim 3135, [2006] 1 All ER 776. At common law, the admissibility of such evidence was confined to prosecutions for alleged sexual offences and the complaint was even then admissible only as evidence bearing on the credibility of the complainant: R v Lillyman [1896] 2 QB 167, CCR; R v Christie [1914] AC 545, sub nom DPP v Christie (1914) 10 Cr App Rep 141; R v Osborne [1905] 1 KB 551, CCR. Such evidence was admissible where it was sufficiently consistent with the complainant's evidence that it might, depending on the view of the evidence taken by the jury, support or enhance the credibility of the complainant: R v S [2004] EWCA Crim 1320, [2004] 3 All ER 689, [2004] 2 Cr App Rep 646. Under the Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 120, however, admissibility is not limited to complaints in sexual cases and such evidence may also be admissible to prove the truth of any facts asserted: R v O [2006] EWCA Crim 556, [2006] All ER (D) 177 (Jun).

Under the old common law rule concerning complaints of sexual offences, it was held in some cases that complaints made on the following day (as in R v Rush (1896) 60 JP 777) or three days after the event (as in R v Ingre (1900) 64 JP 106 at 107) were made too late and were inadmissible, whereas on one occasion at least a complaint made after eight days was admitted (R v Hedges (1909) 3 Cr App Rep 262, CCA). What amounted to a reasonable time for the complaint, for the purposes of admissibility of evidence depended on the circumstances, including the character of the complainant, and the relationship between the complainant and the person he complained to, or would have complained to: R v Valentine [1996] 2 Cr App Rep 213, CA. It was for the judge to decide whether a complaint was made as speedily as could reasonably be expected: R v Cummings [1948] 1 All ER 551, CCA. Under the new statutory regime, admissibility is not limited to the first complaint made by a victim (eg, he may complain first to X and then, some time later (but at the first reasonable opportunity) to Y. It may however be necessary for a judge to restrict evidence of 'complaint upon complaint' which might be merely self-serving: R v O [2006] EWCA Crim 556, [2006] All ER (D) 177 (Jun).

7 Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 120(1), (4)(b).

8 Ibid s 120(2). Rules of common law determine when such a statement is admissible in the first place. See PARA 1437 ante. Section 120(2) merely addresses the evidential value of such evidence once it has been given. At common law, such a statement was admissible only for the purpose of rebutting the allegation and could not be regarded as evidence of the facts stated.

9 Ibid s 119(1)(a). As to the procedure for cross-examination of a witness concerning an alleged previous inconsistent statement see PARA 1445 ante. At common law, such a statement, if admitted or proved was admissible only for the purpose of impugning the credibility of the witness and could not be regarded as evidence of the facts stated.

10 It is proved by virtue of the Criminal Procedure Act 1865 ss 3, 4, 5: see PARAS 1436, 1445 ante.

11 Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 119(1). See R v Joyce [2005] EWCA Crim 1785, [2005] All ER (D) 309 (Jun). If in criminal proceedings evidence of an inconsistent statement by any person (eg the deceased maker of a statement admitted under s 116 (see PARA 1521 ante)) is given under the Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 124(2)(c) (see PARA 1532 post), the statement is admissible as evidence of any matter stated in it of which oral evidence by that person would be admissible: s 119(2).

12 See PARA 1439 ante.

EVIDENCE/ (17) HEARSAY/1530. Hearsay admissible in the interests of justice.

1530. Hearsay admissible in the interests of justice.

Hearsay evidence was not rendered admissible at common law merely because it appeared to be cogent or reliable<sup>1</sup>, or because it was favourable to the defence<sup>2</sup>, but the court now has a statutory discretion to admit any hearsay evidence that would otherwise be inadmissible where it is satisfied that it is in the interests of justice for it to be admissible<sup>3</sup>.

<sup>3</sup> Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 114(1)(d). See R v Taylor [2006] EWCA Crim 260, 170 JP 353, sub nom R v T [2006] All ER (D) 174 (Jan). In deciding whether hearsay evidence should be admitted on this basis, the court must have regard to the following factors (which are intended to focus attention on whether the circumstances surrounding the making of the statement indicate that it can be treated as reliable enough to admit it as evidence, despite the fact that it will not be subject to cross-examination) and to any others it considers relevant (Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 114(2)):

- 127 (1) how much probative value the statement has (assuming it to be true) in relation to a matter in issue in the proceedings, or how valuable it is for the understanding of other evidence in the case;
- 128 (2) what other evidence has been, or can be, given on the matter or evidence mentioned in head (1) supra;
- 129 (3) how important the matter or evidence mentioned in head (1) supra is in the context of the case as a whole;
- 130 (4) the circumstances in which the statement was made;
- 131 (5) how reliable the maker of the statement appears to be;
- 132 (6) how reliable the evidence of the making of the statement appears to be;
- 133 (7) whether oral evidence of the matter stated can be given and, if not, why it cannot;
- 134 (8) the amount of difficulty involved in challenging the statement; and
- 135 (9) the extent to which that difficulty would be likely to prejudice the party facing it.

The requirement that the court or judge 'must have regard to' these factors does not mean that a trial judge must embark upon a detailed investigation (perhaps involving the hearing of evidence) in respect of each listed factor. There is nothing in the wording of the statute that requires a court or judge to reach a specific conclusion in relation to each listed factor. If it did have that meaning, trials would become greatly elongated. Section 114(2) does, however, require an exercise of judgment in the light of any particular factor identified in accordance with that provision: R v Taylor [2006] EWCA Crim 260, 170 JP 353, sub nom R v T [2006] All ER (D) 174 (Jan).

1531. Rules of Court and notice requirements.

Notice requirements prescribed by the Criminal Procedure Rules<sup>1</sup> must be complied with by any party wishing to introduce a hearsay statement in evidence<sup>2</sup> or to object to the introduction of such evidence<sup>3</sup>.

The Criminal Procedure Rules require that parties wishing to introduce or object to the introduction of such evidence must give notice in the prescribed form<sup>4</sup> to the court officer and all other parties<sup>5</sup>. However, the court may dispense with this requirement to give notice of hearsay evidence, and allow notice to be given in a different form, or orally, or shorten a time limit or extend it (even after it has expired)<sup>6</sup>. A party entitled to receive a notice of hearsay evidence may waive his entitlement by so informing the court and the party who would have given the notice<sup>7</sup>.

1 See CrimPR Pt 34, made under the Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 132(1), (2).

2 If a party proposing to tender evidence fails to comply with a prescribed requirement applicable to it: (1) the evidence is not admissible except with the court's leave; (2) where leave is given the court or jury may draw such inferences from the failure as appear proper; and (3) the failure may be taken into account by the court in considering the exercise of its powers with respect to costs: ibid s 132(5). However, a defendant may not be convicted solely on the basis of such an inference: s 132(7). In considering whether or how to exercise any of its powers under s 132(5) the court must have regard to whether there is any justification for the failure to comply with the requirement: s 132(6).

3 The rules may provide that if no counter-notice is served in the prescribed form objecting to the admission of the evidence, the evidence is to be treated as admissible by agreement of the parties: see ibid s 132(4). Cf CrimPR 34.5.

EVIDENCE/ (17) HEARSAY/1532. Credibility of maker of hearsay statement.

1532. Credibility of maker of hearsay statement.

Where in criminal proceedings<sup>1</sup> a statement<sup>2</sup> not made in oral evidence in the proceedings is admitted as evidence of a matter stated<sup>3</sup> and the maker of the statement in question does not give oral evidence in connection with the subject matter of the statement<sup>4</sup>, other parties will have no opportunity to cross-examine that person, but the following provision is made for evidence to be adduced of matters appertaining to his credibility<sup>5</sup>:

- 2239 (1) any evidence which (if the maker had given oral evidence) would have been admissible as relevant to his credibility as a witness is so admissible in the proceedings<sup>6</sup>;
- 2240 (2) evidence may with the court's leave be given of any matter which (if he had given such evidence) could have been put to him in cross-examination as relevant to his credibility as a witness but of which evidence could not have been adduced by the cross-examining party<sup>7</sup>; and
- 2241 (3) evidence tending to prove that he made (at whatever time) any other statement inconsistent with the statement admitted as evidence is admissible for the purpose of showing that he contradicted himself<sup>8</sup>.

Where any such allegation is made, the court may permit additional evidence of such description as the court may specify to be adduced for the purposes of denying or answering the allegation<sup>9</sup>.

1 For the meaning of 'criminal proceedings' see PARA 1464 note 2 ante.

2 For the meaning of 'statement' see PARA 1519 note 13 ante.

3 As to the meaning of 'matters stated' see the Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 115(3); and PARA 1519 text and notes 9-10 ante.

4 Ibid s 124(1). Where a statement in a document is admitted as evidence under s 117 (see PARA 1522 ante) each person who, in order for the statement to be admissible, must have supplied or received the information concerned or created or received the document or part concerned is to be treated as the maker of the statement for the purposes of s 124(1)-(3): s 124(4).

6 Ibid s 124(2)(a).

7 Ibid s 124(2)(b). These are collateral matters on which a witness's answer (where there is a witness) must be treated as final (see PARA 1444 ante).

8 Ibid s 124(2)(c). If in criminal proceedings evidence of an inconsistent statement by any person (eg the deceased maker of a statement admitted under s 116 (see PARA 1521 ante)) is given under s 124(2)(c), the statement is admissible as evidence of any matter stated in it of which oral evidence by that person would be admissible: s 119(2).

EVIDENCE/ (17) HEARSAY/1533. Duty of judge to stop case where hearsay evidence is unconvincing.

1533. Duty of judge to stop case where hearsay evidence is unconvincing.

If at trial before a judge and jury the court is satisfied at any time after the close of the case for the prosecution that the case against the defendant is based wholly or partly on a statement<sup>1</sup> not made in oral evidence in the proceedings<sup>2</sup> which is so unconvincing that, considering its importance to the case against the defendant, his conviction of the offence would be unsafe, the court must either direct the jury to acquit him of the offence or, if it considers that there ought to be a re-trial, discharge the jury<sup>3</sup>.

1 For the meaning of 'statement' see PARA 1519 note 13 ante.

2 As to the meaning of 'oral evidence in the proceedings' see PARA 1519 note 1 ante.

3 Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 125(1). Where: (1) a jury is directed under s 125(1) to acquit a defendant of an offence; and (2) the circumstances are such that, apart from this provision, the defendant could if acquitted of that offence be found guilty of another offence, the defendant may not be found guilty of that other offence if the court is satisfied as mentioned in s 125(1) in respect of it: s 125(2). These provisions do not supplant the principles established in R v Galbraith [1981] 2 All ER 1060, 73 Cr App Rep 124, CA, governing the threshold at which prosecution evidence leaves the defendant with a case to answer (see PARAS 1313, 1372 ante) but they provide an additional safety valve obliging a judge to direct an acquittal where hearsay evidence appears particularly unpersuasive: R v Joyce [2005] EWCA Crim 1785, [2005] All ER (D) 309 (Jun), CA; and see also the Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 125(4) which states that s 125 does not prejudice any other power a court may have to direct a jury to acquit a person of an offence or to discharge a jury.

If: (a) a jury is required to determine under the Criminal Procedure (Insanity) Act 1964 s 4A(2) (as added) (see PARA 1265 ante) whether a person charged on an indictment with an offence did the act or made the omission charged; and (b) the court is satisfied as mentioned in the Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 125(1) at any time after the close of the case for the prosecution that: (i) the case against the defendant is based wholly or partly on a statement not made in oral evidence in the proceedings; and (ii) the evidence provided by the statement is so unconvincing that, considering its importance to the case against the person, a finding that he did the act or made the omission would be unsafe, the court must either direct the jury to acquit the defendant of the offence or, if it considers that there ought to be a rehearing, discharge the jury: s 125(3).

EVIDENCE/ (17) HEARSAY/1534. Deposition of child or young person.

1534. Deposition of child or young person.

Where, in any proceedings in respect of any specified offence<sup>1</sup>, the court is satisfied by the evidence of a duly qualified medical practitioner that the attendance before the court of any child<sup>2</sup> or young person<sup>3</sup> in respect of whom the offence is alleged to have been committed would involve serious danger to his life or health, any deposition of the child or young person<sup>4</sup> is admissible in evidence either for or against the defendant without further proof thereof if it purports to be signed by the justice by or before whom it purports to be taken<sup>5</sup>. However, the deposition is not admissible in evidence against the defendant unless it is proved that reasonable notice of the intention to take the deposition has been served upon him and that he or his counsel or solicitor had, or might have had if he had chosen to be present, an opportunity of cross-examining the child or young person making the deposition<sup>6</sup>.

TEXT AND NOTE 6--Reference to counsel or solicitor is now to legal representative, which means a person who, for the purposes of the Legal Services Act 2007, is an authorised person in relation to an activity which constitutes the exercise of a right of audience or the conduct of litigation (within the meaning of that Act) (see LEGAL PROFESSIONS vol 65 (2008) PARA 512): Children and Young Persons Act 1933 ss 43 proviso, 107 (s 43 proviso amended, definition in s 107 added, by Legal Services Act 2007 Sch 21 paras 18, 20).

Halsbury's Laws of England/CRIMINAL LAW, EVIDENCE AND PROCEDURE (VOLUME 11(1) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1-620; VOLUME 11(2) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 621-1049; VOLUME 11(3) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1050-1557; VOLUME 11(4) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1558-2180)/20. EVIDENCE/ (17) HEARSAY/1535. Proof by written statement.

1535. Proof by written statement.

In any criminal proceedings<sup>1</sup>, a written statement by any person is admissible as evidence to the like extent as oral evidence to the like effect<sup>2</sup> by that person if such of the following conditions as are applicable are satisfied<sup>3</sup>:

- 2242 (1) the statement purports to be signed by the person who made it<sup>4</sup>;
- 2243 (2) the statement contains<sup>5</sup> a declaration by that person to the effect that it is true to the best of his knowledge and belief and that he made the statement knowing that, if it were tendered in evidence, he would be liable to prosecution if he wilfully stated in it anything which he knew to be false or did not believe to be true<sup>6</sup>;
- 2244 (3) before the hearing at which the statement is tendered in evidence, a copy of the statement is served<sup>7</sup>, by or on behalf of the party proposing to tender it, on each of the other parties to the proceedings<sup>8</sup>; and
- 2245 (4) none of the other parties or their solicitors, within seven days from the service of the copy of the statement, serves a notice on the party so proposing objecting to the statement being tendered in evidence<sup>9</sup>;

but the conditions in heads (3) and (4) above do not apply if the parties agree before or during the hearing that the statement is to be so tendered<sup>10</sup>.

The following provisions also have effect in relation to any written statement so tendered in evidence:

- 2246 (a) if the statement is made by a person under the age of 18, it must give his age<sup>11</sup>;
- 2247 (b) if the statement is made by a person who cannot read it, it must be read to him before he signs it and it must be accompanied by a declaration by the person who read it to the effect that it was so read<sup>12</sup>;
- 2248 (c) if the statement refers to any other document as an exhibit, the copy required to be served on any other party<sup>13</sup> must be accompanied by a copy of that document or by such information as may be necessary in order to enable the party on whom it is served to inspect that document or a copy of it<sup>14</sup>.

Notwithstanding that a statement made by any person may be admissible<sup>15</sup> as evidence by virtue of the above provisions, the party by whom or on whose behalf a copy of the statement was served may call that person to give evidence<sup>16</sup>; and the court may, of its own motion or on the application of any party to the proceedings<sup>17</sup>, require that person to attend before the court and give evidence<sup>18</sup>.

So much of any statement as is admitted in evidence<sup>19</sup> must be read aloud at the hearing unless the court otherwise directs; and, where the court so directs, an account must be given orally of so much of any statement as is not read aloud<sup>20</sup>.

Any document or object referred to as an exhibit and identified in a written statement tendered in evidence under the above provisions is to be treated as if it had been produced as an exhibit and identified in court by the maker of the statement<sup>21</sup>.

1 The Criminal Justice Act 1967 s 9 (as amended) is applicable in all criminal proceedings, although it is invoked primarily in summary trials. Section 9 does not apply to committal proceedings (see s 9(1)) although as from a day to be appointed this exception is removed by the Criminal Justice Act 2003 ss 41, 332, Sch 3 Pt 2 para 43(1), (2), Sch 37 Pt 4. At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed.

2 The effect of a written statement is the same as if the statement had been made orally from the witness box: Ellis v Jones [1973] 2 All ER 893, DC; see also Lister v Quaiife [1983] 2 All ER 29, 75 Cr App Rep 313, DC. Where the issue is central to the case, prosecutors should give careful consideration as to whether or not to call the actual witnesses so that the proper impact of the evidence can be made on the court rather than relying on such statements which save expense and trouble in many cases: Lister v Quaiife supra.

3 Criminal Justice Act 1967 s 9(1).

4 Ibid s 9(2)(a).

5 The declaration must be 'contained' in the statement but it does not matter where in the statement it is positioned: Chapman v Ingleton (1973) 57 Cr App Rep 476, DC.

6 Criminal Justice Act 1967 s 9(2)(b). The declaration itself does not require a signature: Chapman v Ingleton (1973) 57 Cr App Rep 476, DC.

7 For these purposes, a document requiring to be served on any person may be served: (1) by delivering it to him or to his solicitor; (2) by addressing it to him and leaving it at his usual or last-known place of abode or place of business or by addressing it to his solicitor and leaving it at his office; (3) by sending it in a registered letter or by the recorded delivery service or by first class post addressed to him at his usual or last-known place of abode or place of business or addressed to his solicitor at his office; or (4) in the case of a body corporate, by delivering it to the secretary or clerk of the body at its registered or principal office or sending it in a registered letter or by the recorded delivery service or by first class post addressed to the secretary or clerk of that body at that office; and references to the secretary, in relation to a limited liability partnership, are to any designated member of the limited liability partnership: Criminal Justice Act 1967 s 9(8) (amended by the Criminal Justice and Public Order Act 1994 s 168(1), Sch 9 para 6(1); and the Limited Liability Partnerships Regulations 2001, SI 2001/1090, reg 9(1), Sch 5 para 4).

8 Criminal Justice Act 1967 s 9(2)(c).

9 Ibid s 9(2)(d).

10 Ibid s 9(2). Section 9 (as amended) applies to written statements made in Scotland or Northern Ireland as well as to written statements made in England and Wales: Criminal Justice Act 1972 s 46(1) (amended by the Criminal Procedure and Investigations Act 1996 s 47, Sch 1 para 22(2), (3)). As to the application of the Criminal Justice Act 1967 s 9 (as amended) to courts-martial see ARMED FORCES vol 2(2) (Reissue) PARA 376.

11 Criminal Justice Act 1967 s 9(3)(a) (amended by the Criminal Procedure and Investigations Act 1996 s 69(1)). By the Criminal Justice Act 1967 s 9(3A) (prospectively added by the Children and Young Persons Act 1969 s 72(3), Sch 5 para 55, but never brought into force), where the statement discloses that its maker has not attained the age of 14, the declaration must state that it is true to the best of the maker's knowledge and belief and that he understands the importance of telling the truth in it). The Criminal Justice Act 1967 s 9(3A) (as prospectively added) is no longer consistent with principles governing the competence of child witnesses, in which it is no longer a requirement that the child 'understands the importance of telling the truth' and it is therefore unlikely ever to be brought into force.

15 As to the tendering of statements prepared from originals but excluding inadmissible or prejudicial matter see Practice Direction (Criminal Proceedings: Consolidation) [2002] 3 All ER 904, [2002] 2 Cr App Rep 533 at III.24, CA.

Where the prosecution proposes to tender written statements in evidence either under the Magistrates' Courts Act 1980 ss 5A, 5B (both as added; prospectively repealed) (see MAGISTRATES vol 29(2) (Reissue) PARAS 669-670) or the Criminal Justice Act 1967 s 9 (as amended) it will frequently be not only proper, but also necessary for the orderly presentation of the evidence, for certain statements to be edited. This will occur either because a witness has made more than one statement whose contents should conveniently be reduced into a single, comprehensive statement or where a statement contains inadmissible, prejudicial or irrelevant material. Editing of statements should in all circumstances be done by a Crown Prosecutor (or by a legal representative, if any, of the prosecutor if the case is not being conducted by the Crown Prosecution Service) and not by a police officer: Practice Direction (Criminal Proceedings: Consolidation) [2002] 3 All ER 904, [2002] 2 Cr App Rep 533 at III.24.1, CA.

A composite statement giving the combined effect of two or more earlier statements or settled by a person referred to in Practice Direction (Criminal Proceedings: Consolidation) [2002] 3 All ER 904, [2002] 2 Cr App Rep 533 at III.24.1, CA, must be prepared in compliance with the requirements of the Magistrates' Courts Act 1980 ss 5A, 5B (both as added; prospectively repealed) or the Criminal Justice Act 1967 s 9 (as amended) as appropriate and must then be signed by the witness: Practice Direction (Criminal Proceedings: Consolidation) [2002] 3 All ER 904, [2002] 2 Cr App Rep 533 at iii.24.2, CA.

There are two acceptable methods of editing single statements (see Practice Direction (Criminal Proceedings: Consolidation) [2002] 3 All ER 904, [2002] 2 Cr App Rep 533 at III.24.3, CA):

136 (1) By marking copies of the statement in a way which indicates the passages on which the prosecution will not rely. This merely indicates that the prosecution will not seek to adduce the evidence so marked. The original signed statement to be tendered to the court is not marked in any way. The marking on the copy statement is done by lightly striking out the passages to be edited so that what appears beneath can still be read, or by bracketing, or by a combination of both. It is not permissible to produce a photocopy with the deleted material obliterated, since this would be contrary to the requirement that the defence and the court should be served with copies of the signed original statement. Whenever the striking out/bracketing method is used, it will assist if the following words appear at the foot of the frontispiece or index to any bundle of copy statements to be tendered: 'The prosecution does not propose to adduce evidence of those passages of the attached copy statements which have been struck out and/or bracketed (nor will it seek to do so at the trial unless a notice of further evidence is served)'.

137 (2) By obtaining a fresh statement, signed by the witness, which omits the offending material, applying the procedure in Practice Direction (Criminal Proceedings: Consolidation) [2002] 3 All ER 904, [2002] 2 Cr App Rep 533 at III.24.2, CA.

In most cases where a single statement is to be edited, the striking out/bracketing method will be the more appropriate, but the taking of a fresh statement is preferable in the following circumstances (see Practice Direction (Criminal Proceedings: Consolidation) [2002] 3 All ER 904, [2002] 2 Cr App Rep 533 at III.24.4, CA):

138 (a) When a police (or other investigating) officer's statement contains details of interviews with more suspects than are eventually charged, a fresh statement should be prepared and signed omitting all details of interview with those not charged except, in so far as it is relevant, for the bald fact that a certain named person was interviewed at a particular time, date and place.

139 (b) When a suspect is interviewed about more offences than are eventually made the subject of committal charges, a fresh statement should be prepared and signed omitting all questions and answers about the uncharged offences unless either they might appropriately be taken into consideration or evidence about those offences is admissible on the charges preferred, such as evidence of system. It may, however, be desirable to replace the omitted questions and answers with a phrase such as: 'After referring to some other matters, I then said . . .', so as to make it clear that part of the interview has been omitted.

140 (c) A fresh statement should normally be prepared and signed if the only part of the original on which the prosecution is relying is only a small proportion of the whole, although it remains desirable to use the alternative method if there is reason to believe that the defence might itself wish to rely, in mitigation or for any other purpose, on at least some of those parts which the prosecution does not propose to adduce.

141 (d) When the passages contain material which the prosecution is entitled to withhold from disclosure to the defence.

Prosecutors should also be aware that, where statements are to be tendered under the Criminal Justice Act 1967 s 9 (as amended) in the course of summary proceedings, there will be a need to prepare fresh statements excluding inadmissible or prejudicial material rather than using the striking out or bracketing method: Practice Direction (Criminal Proceedings: Consolidation) [2002] 3 All ER 904, [2002] 2 Cr App Rep 533 at iii.24.5, CA.

None of the above principles applies to oral statements of a defendant which are recorded in the witness statements of interviewing police officers, except in the circumstances referred to in head (b) supra. All this material should remain in its original state in the committal bundles, any editing being left to prosecuting counsel at the Crown Court (after discussion with defence counsel and, if appropriate, the trial judge: Practice Direction (Criminal Proceedings: Consolidation) [2002] 3 All ER 904, [2002] 2 Cr App Rep 533 at iii.24.6, CA).

Whenever a fresh statement is taken from a witness, a copy of the earlier, unedited statements of that witness will be given to the defence in accordance with the Attorney General's guidelines on the disclosure of unused material (see Practice Note [1982] 1 All ER 734) unless there are grounds under para 6 of the guidelines for withholding such disclosure: Practice Direction (Criminal Proceedings: Consolidation) [2002] 3 All ER 904, [2002] 2 Cr App Rep 533 at iii.24.7, CA.

16 Criminal Justice Act 1967 s 9(4)(a). If the prosecutor finds a defendant giving evidence which is inconsistent with evidence in such statements which have not been the subject of a notice under s 9(2)(d) (see head (4) in the text), he has the right under s 9(4) to apply for an adjournment so that the maker may be called to give evidence: Lister v Quaife [1983] 2 All ER 29, 75 Cr App Rep 313, DC.

17 Such application to a court other than a magistrates' court may be made before the hearing and on any such application the powers of the court are exercisable by a puisne judge of the High Court, a circuit judge, a district judge (magistrates' courts) or a recorder sitting alone: Criminal Justice Act 1967 s 9(5) (amended by the Courts Act 1971 s 56(1), Sch 8 Pt II para 49; and further amended to include a district judge (magistrates' courts) by the Courts Act 2003 s 65, Sch 4 para 1 as from a day to be appointed). At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed.

18 Criminal Justice Act 1967 s 9(4)(b). Justices allowing evidence under s 9(4) must observe the general rules as to the time within which evidence is called: French's Dairies (Sevenoaks) Ltd v Davis [1973] Crim LR 630, DC (justices, after retiring to consider finding, called maker of statement to give oral evidence: conviction quashed on appeal).

EVIDENCE/ (17) HEARSAY/1536. Admissibility of evidence by certificate or declaration.

1536. Admissibility of evidence by certificate or declaration.

There are numerous statutory provisions by which certificates or declarations are made admissible evidence (or in some cases 'sufficient proof') of any facts stated therein. The following are some of the more important examples.

In any criminal proceedings, a certificate purporting to be signed by a constable or a person having the prescribed qualifications<sup>1</sup>, and certifying that a plan or drawing exhibited thereto is a plan or drawing made by him of the place or object specified in the certificate, and that the plan or drawing is correctly drawn to a scale so specified, is evidence of the relative position of the things shown on the plan or drawing<sup>2</sup>.

In any proceedings in England and Wales for a specified offence<sup>3</sup> under the Road Traffic Act 1960 or the Road Traffic Offenders Act 1988, a certificate in the prescribed form<sup>4</sup> purporting to be signed by a constable<sup>5</sup> and certifying that a person specified in the certificate stated to the constable: (1) that a particular motor vehicle or mechanically propelled vehicle was being driven or used by, or belonged to, that person on a particular occasion; (2) that a particular motor vehicle or mechanically propelled vehicle on a particular occasion was used by, or belonged to, a firm and that he was, at the time of the statement, a partner in that firm; or (3) that a particular motor vehicle or mechanically propelled vehicle on a particular occasion was used by, or belonged to, a corporation and that he was, at the time of the statement, a director, officer or employee of that corporation, is admissible as evidence for the purpose of determining by whom the vehicle was being driven or used, or to whom it belonged, as the case may be, on that occasion<sup>6</sup>.

In proceedings for driving or being in charge of a motor vehicle when under the influence of drink or drugs<sup>7</sup>, or with an alcohol concentration above the prescribed limit<sup>8</sup>, evidence of the proportion of alcohol or a drug in a specimen of breath, blood or urine may<sup>9</sup> be given by the production of a document or documents purporting to be whichever of the following is appropriate, that is to say: (a) a statement automatically produced by the device by which the proportion of alcohol in a specimen of breath was measured and a certificate<sup>10</sup> signed by a constable that the statement relates to a specimen provided by the defendant at the date and time shown in the statement; and (b) a certificate signed by an authorised analyst as to the proportion of alcohol or any drug found in a specimen of blood or urine identified in the certificate<sup>11</sup>.

In any proceedings for the theft of anything in the course of transmission, whether by post or otherwise, or for handling stolen goods from such a theft, a statutory declaration made by any person that he dispatched or received or failed to receive any goods or postal packet, or that any goods or postal packet when dispatched or received by him were in a particular state or condition, is admissible as evidence of the facts stated in the declaration<sup>12</sup>. A statutory declaration of this sort is also admissible in proceedings for offences concerning unauthorised interference with mail or improper opening of mail bags or postal packets<sup>13</sup>.

In any proceedings for an offence under the Video Recordings Act 1984, a certificate purporting to be signed by a person authorised in that behalf by the Secretary of State and stating: (i) that he has examined: (A) the record maintained in pursuance of arrangements made by the designated authority, and (B) a video work (or part of a video work) contained in a video recording identified by the certificate; and (ii) that the record shows that, on the date specified in the certificate, no classification certificate had been issued in respect of the video work concerned, is admissible as evidence of the fact that, on that day, no classification certificate had been issued in respect of the video work concerned<sup>14</sup>.

Certificates may be used to prove the content and validity of byelaws made by local authorities<sup>15</sup>, to prove the payment or non payment of fixed penalties<sup>16</sup>, or to prove the issue or non issue of gaming or gaming machine licences<sup>17</sup>.

1 For these purposes, the prescribed qualifications are: (1) registration as an architect under the Architects Act 1997; or (2) membership of any of the following bodies, that is to say, the Royal Institution of Chartered Surveyors, the Institution of Civil Engineers, the Institution of Municipal Engineers and the Land Agents Society: Evidence by Certificate Rules 1961, SI 1961/248, r 1; Interpretation Act 1978 s 117(2).

2 Criminal Justice Act 1948 s 41(1). Such a certificate is admissible only where and to the extent to which oral evidence to the like effect would have been admissible: s 41(4) (s 41(3)-(5) amended by the Theft Act 1968 s 33(3), Sch 3 Pt III). Such a certificate is not admissible: (1) unless a copy has been served in the prescribed manner on the person charged with the offence not less than seven days before the hearing or trial; or (2) if the person charged serves notice in the prescribed form and manner on the prosecutor not later than three days before the hearing or trial requiring the attendance at the trial of the person who signed the certificate or declaration: Criminal Justice Act 1948 s 41(5) (as so amended). As to service of notices see the Evidence by Certificate Rules 1961, SI 1961/248, r 3. The court may in special circumstances allow further time for service: see the Criminal Justice Act 1948 s 41(5)(b) (as so amended).

3 The offences to which this provision applies are: (1) offences to which the Road Traffic Act 1960 s 232 (as amended) applies; and (2) the offences shown in the Road Traffic Offenders Act 1988 s 11(5), Sch 1 (as amended): Road Traffic Act 1960 s 242(1); Road Traffic Offenders Act 1988 s 11(5). See ROAD TRAFFIC vol 40(2) (2007 Reissue) PARA 1035.

4 For the prescribed form of certificate see the Evidence by Certificate Rules 1961, SI 1961/248, r 2, Schedule Form 1 (amended by SI 1962/2319) made under the Road Traffic Act 1960 s 242 and having effect under the Road Traffic Offenders Act 1988 s 11 (as amended) by virtue of the Road Traffic (Consequential Provisions) Act 1988 s 2(2).

5 For these purposes, 'constable' includes a traffic warden: Functions of Traffic Wardens Order 1970, SI 1970/1958, art 3(2), having effect under the Road Traffic Regulation Act 1984 ss 95(5), 96 and read in accordance with the Road Traffic (Consequential Provisions) Act 1988 s 2(4).

6 Road Traffic Act 1960 s 242(1) (amended by the Road Traffic Act 1962 s 51(1), Sch 4 Pt I); Road Traffic Offenders Act 1988 s 11(1) (amended by the Road Traffic Act 1991 s 48, Sch 4 para 84). Such a certificate is admissible only where and to the extent to which oral evidence to the like effect would have been admissible, and is not admissible: (1) unless a copy has been served in the prescribed manner on the person charged with the offence not less than seven days before the hearing or trial; or (2) if the person charged serves notice in the prescribed form and manner on the prosecutor not later than three days before the hearing or trial requiring the attendance at the trial of the person who signed the certificate or declaration: Road Traffic Act 1960 s 242(2), (3); Road Traffic Offenders Act 1988 s 11(2), (3). As to service of notices see the Evidence by Certificate Rules 1961, SI 1961/248, r 3.

7 Ie in proceedings under the Road Traffic Act 1988 s 3A (as added), s 4 (as amended): see ROAD TRAFFIC vol 40(2) (2007 Reissue) PARAS 974-975.

8 Ie in proceedings under ibid s 5: see ROAD TRAFFIC vol 40(2) (2007 Reissue) PARA 978.

9 Ie subject to the Road Traffic Offenders Act 1988 s 15(5), (5A) (as added), s 16(3) (as substituted and amended), s 16(4) (as amended): see ROAD TRAFFIC vol 40(2) (2007 Reissue) PARA 991.

10 The certificate may, but need not, be contained in the same document as the statement: ibid s 16(1)(a).

11 Ibid ss 15(1), 16(1) (both as amended): see ROAD TRAFFIC vol 40(2) (2007 Reissue) PARA 991.

12 Theft Act 1968 s 27(4). Such a declaration is admissible only to the extent to which oral evidence to the like effect would have been admissible in the proceedings and only if at least seven days before the hearing or trial a copy of it has been given to the person charged, and he has not, at least three days before the hearing or trial or within such further time as the court may in special circumstances allow, given the prosecutor written notice requiring the attendance at the hearing or trial of the person making the declaration: s 27(4)(a), (b).

The Theft Act 1968 s 27 is to be construed in accordance with s 24 (see PARA 303 ante): s 27(5). In order to render documentary evidence admissible the exact terms of the statutory requirements must be followed: R v Marley [1958] 2 All ER 359n, 42 Cr App Rep 218, CCA.

13 The Theft Act 1968 s 27(4) applies to proceedings for offences under the Postal Services Act 2000 ss 83, 84 (see POST OFFICE) as it applies to proceedings for theft of anything in the course of transmission by post: Postal Services Act 2000 s 109(2). Evidence that any article is in the course of transmission by post, or has been accepted by a postal operator for transmission by post, is sufficient evidence that the article is a postal packet on the prosecution of any offence under the Postal Services Act 2000: s 109(1).

A certificate given by or on behalf of a universal service provider to the effect that any box or receptacle is or was provided by the provider concerned for the purpose of receiving postal packets, or any class of postal packets, for onwards transmission in connection with the provision of a universal postal service, unless the contrary is shown, is sufficient proof in any legal proceedings of the facts stated: s 110.

14 Video Recordings Act 1984 s 19(1). Such a certificate may also be used as evidence that a classification certificate in terms of the document so identified was issued in respect of the video work concerned (see s 19(3)); or that the video work concerned differs in specified respects from another video work in respect of which a classification certificate was issued (see s 19(2)); or that a classification certificate has or has not been issued in respect of a video work having a particular title (see s 19(3A), (3B) (added by the Video Recordings Act 1993 s 4)).

No such certificate is admissible unless a copy of the certificate has, not less than seven days before the hearing, been served on the person charged with the offence (see the Video Recordings Act 1984 s 19(5)).

15 See the Local Government Act 1972 s 238 (as amended); and LOCAL GOVERNMENT vol 69 (2009) PARA 568. This may be done without proof of the handwriting or official position of any person purporting to sign the certificate: see s 238 (as amended).

1537. Judicial admissions.

A plea of guilty at the trial is an express and conclusive admission of the offence in respect of which the plea is made, for the purposes of that trial, and dispenses with the necessity of proving the facts alleged in that count of the indictment<sup>1</sup>.

Where a defendant is permitted to withdraw a guilty plea and contest the case<sup>2</sup>, the original guilty plea would ordinarily be admissible as a confession<sup>3</sup>, but its actual admission as evidence against the defendant would be subject to the power of the court or judge to exclude it, if it were concluded that its admission would have an unduly prejudicial effect on the fairness of the proceedings<sup>4</sup>.

Where the plea is one of not guilty, facts may be formally admitted by the defendant or the prosecutor for the purpose of the proceedings<sup>5</sup> or evidence may be given of confessions or admissions made by or on behalf of the defendant before the commencement of the proceedings<sup>6</sup>.

A plea in mitigation made by or on behalf of the defendant following conviction is not admissible at a re-trial as an admission or confession, even though it may appear to assume or concede the defendant's guilt<sup>7</sup>.

1538. Formal admissions.

Any fact of which oral evidence may be given in any criminal proceedings may be admitted for the purpose of those proceedings by or on behalf of the prosecutor or a defendant; and the admission by any party of any such fact is, as against that party, conclusive evidence in those proceedings of the fact admitted<sup>1</sup>.

An admission so made:

- 2249 (1) may be made before or at the proceedings<sup>2</sup>;
- 2250 (2) if made otherwise than in court, must be in writing<sup>3</sup>;
- 2251 (3) if made in writing by an individual, must purport to be signed by the person making it and, if so made by a body corporate, must purport to be signed by a director<sup>4</sup> or manager, or the secretary or clerk, or some other similar officer of the body corporate<sup>5</sup>;
- 2252 (4) if made on behalf of a defendant who is an individual, must be made by his counsel or solicitor<sup>6</sup>;
- 2253 (5) if made at any stage before the trial by a defendant who is an individual, must be approved by his counsel or solicitor, whether at the time it was made or subsequently, before or at the proceedings in question<sup>7</sup>.

1 Criminal Justice Act 1967 s 10(1). An admission under s 10 for the purpose of proceedings relating to any matter is to be treated as an admission for the purpose of any subsequent criminal proceedings relating to that matter, including any appeal or re-trial: s 10(3). With the leave of the court, an admission under s 10 may be withdrawn in the proceedings for the purpose of which it is made or any subsequent criminal proceedings relating to the same matter: s 10(4). It is not generally satisfactory for the defence to use this procedure to admit the facts as alleged in the opening speech for the prosecution: see R v Lewis (1971) 55 Cr App Rep 386, CA.

The prosecution may choose to make formal admissions which help the defence over a difficulty which they might otherwise face under the hearsay rule: R v Greenwood [2004] EWCA Crim 1388, [2005] 1 Cr App Rep 99, [2004] All ER (D) 17 (Jun). As to hearsay see PARA 1519 et seq ante.

As to the application of the Criminal Justice Act 1967 s 9 (as amended), s 10 to courts-martial see s 12 (amended by the Armed Forces Act 1996 ss 5, 35(2), Sch 1 para 99, Sch 7 Pt I); the Criminal Justice Act 1967 (Application to Courts-Martial) (Evidence) Regulations 1997, SI 1997/173; and ARMED FORCES vol 2(2) (Reissue) PARA 379.

2 Criminal Justice Act 1967 s 10(2)(a). If admissions are made in the course of a trial, the manner of making them should be such that what has been admitted appears clearly on the shorthand record: R v Lennard [1973] 2 All ER 831, 57 Cr App Rep 542, CA. It is immaterial whether the admission is made in the presence of the jury: R v Lewis [1989] Crim LR 61, CA.

Where, under the Criminal Justice Act 1967 s 10, a fact is admitted orally in court by or on behalf of the prosecutor or defendant for the purposes of the summary trial of an offence the court must cause the admission to be written down and signed by or on behalf of the party making the admission: CrimPR 37.4.

3 Criminal Justice Act 1967 s 10(2)(b). For the meaning of 'writing' see PARA 578 note 3 ante.

4 For these purposes, 'director', in relation to a body corporate which is established by or under any enactment for the purpose of carrying on under national ownership any industry or part of an industry or undertaking and whose affairs are managed by the members thereof, means a member of that body: ibid s 36(1).

5 Ibid s 10(2)(c).

6 Ibid s 10(2)(d).

7 Ibid s 10(2)(e).

EVIDENCE/(18) CONFESSIONS AND ADMISSIONS/1539. Statements made on behalf of the defendant.

1539. Statements made on behalf of the defendant.

At common law, a statement made by another person on the authority of the defendant is evidence against the defendant as much as if he had made the statement himself<sup>1</sup>. A defendant which is a body corporate may make admissions through or on the authority of its officers, directors or appointed agents<sup>2</sup>. The authority of that person to make such an admission on behalf of the defendant must be established but may in appropriate cases be inferred from the circumstances<sup>3</sup>. Such statements are not confessions and therefore are not subject to the specific statutory provisions which restrict the admissibility of confessions that may have been obtained by oppression etc<sup>4</sup>.

Admissions made by a defendant's lawyers during a pre-trial hearing or on a plea and directions questionnaire are not intended to have legal force and are not admissible as evidence against him at the trial<sup>5</sup>.

1 R v Mallory (1884) 13 QBD 33, CCR; R v Turner (1975) 61 Cr App Rep 67. This rule is preserved by the Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 118(1), as is the rule that where the defendant has referred investigators to a third person for information on a particular matter, that person's statement or answer may be admissible against him (see R v Mallory supra). As to formal admissions made for the purpose of the proceedings see PARA 1538 ante.

2 R v Turner (1975) 61 Cr App Rep 67, CA (authority may be inferred where barrister speaks in court on client's behalf); R v Downer (1880) 14 Cox CC 486, CCR (letter written by a solicitor 'in consequence of ' an interview with the defendant was not equivalent to a letter written by the solicitor on the instructions of the defendant, and was therefore not evidence against him); R v Evans [1981] Crim LR 699, CA (admissions by solicitor's clerk not binding without proof of authority); Edwards v Brookes (Milk) Ltd [1963] 3 All ER 62, [1963] 1 WLR 795 (manager of milk depot had implied authority to make admissions to a weights and measures inspector concerning the sale of undeclared milk cartons). EVIDENCE/(18) CONFESSIONS AND ADMISSIONS/1540. Confessions by defendants: general principles.

1540. Confessions by defendants: general principles.

The term 'confession' includes any statement wholly or partly adverse to the person who made it, whether made to a person in authority or not and whether made in words or otherwise<sup>1</sup>. A confession made by a defendant may be given in evidence against him<sup>2</sup>, or given in evidence for another person (a co-defendant) charged in the same proceedings<sup>3</sup>, in so far as it is relevant to any matter in issue in the proceedings and is not excluded by the court in pursuance of one or more of the following provisions:

- 2254 (1) if, in any proceedings where the prosecution proposes to give in evidence a confession made by a defendant person, it is represented to the court<sup>4</sup> that the confession was or may have been obtained: (a) by oppression<sup>5</sup> of the person who made it; or (b) in consequence of anything said or done<sup>6</sup> which was likely, in the circumstances existing at the time, to render unreliable<sup>7</sup> any confession which might be made by him in consequence thereof, the court may not allow the confession to be given in evidence against him, except in so far as the prosecution proves to the court beyond reasonable doubt that the confession, notwithstanding that it may be true, was not so obtained<sup>8</sup>; and
- 2255 (2) if, in any proceedings where a co-defendant proposes to give in evidence a confession made by a defendant person, it is represented to the court that the confession was or may have been obtained (a) by oppression of the person who made it; or (b) in consequence of anything said or done which was likely, in the circumstances existing at the time, to render unreliable any confession which might be made by him in consequence thereof, the court may not allow the confession to be given in evidence for the co-defendant, except in so far as it is proved to the court on the balance of probabilities that the confession (notwithstanding that it may be true) was not so obtained<sup>9</sup>.

Nothing in the above provisions prejudices the power of a court to exclude evidence at its discretion<sup>10</sup>.

An admission or confession made (otherwise than in the course of giving oral evidence at the instant trial) by a person who is not a defendant was inadmissible as hearsay at common law<sup>11</sup>; but statutory reform of the hearsay rule may now in some cases permit such confessions to be proved in evidence<sup>12</sup>.

1 Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 82(1). This may include an admission of liability made in the course of civil proceedings: R v Morris [2006] All ER (D) 154 (Jun), CA. As to statements that are only partly adverse to the maker see further PARA 1541 post. A statement which, when made, is on its face exculpatory does not become a confession merely because it is inconsistent with the defendant's defence in court: R v Sat-Bhambra (1988) 88 Cr App Rep 55, [1988] Crim LR 453, CA; R v Z [2005] UKHL 22, [2005] 2 AC 467, sub nom R v Hasan [2005] 4 All ER 685, reversing R v Z [2003] EWCA Crim 191, [2003] 1 WLR 1489, [2003] 2 Cr App Rep 173. See also R v Pearce (1979) 69 Cr App Rep 365 at 370, CA, per Lloyd J: 'A denial does not become an admission because it is inconsistent with another denial'. Nor is a statement by the defendant a confession if it is incriminating only on the basis of its manifest or admitted falsity: Mawaz Khan v R [1967] 1 AC 454, [1967] 1 All ER 80, PC (demonstrably false alibi not a confession, because not tendered by the prosecution as evidence of truth).

A videotaped reconstruction of a murder by the defendant has been held to be a confession at common law: Li Shu-Ling v R [1989] AC 270, [1988] 3 All ER 138, PC. The same result would appear to follow under the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984, even where no words are used.

2 Ibid s 76(1). Nothing in Pt VII (ss 69-72) (as amended) (see PARA 1464 ante) prejudices the admissibility of a confession made by a defendant: s 76(7). At common law there was nothing to prevent a conviction on confession evidence alone: R v Sullivan (1887) 16 Cox CC 347; R v Mallinson [1977] Crim LR 161, CA. The same result would appear to follow under the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984.

3 See ibid s 76A(1) (added by the Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 128(1)). See also R v Myers [1998] AC 124, [1997] 4 All ER 314, HL; R v Lawless [2003] EWCA Crim 271, [2003] All ER (D) 183 (Feb).

4 As to the procedure to be followed when a confession is challenged see PARA 1543 post. A mere suggestion in cross-examination that the confession is inadmissible is not a 'representation' for this purpose: R v Liverpool Juvenile Court, ex p R [1988] QB 1, [1987] 2 All ER 668, DC.

5 For these purposes, 'oppression' includes torture, inhuman or degrading treatment, and the use or threat of violence, whether or not amounting to torture: Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 76(8). Other conduct may also amount to oppression. The term should be given its dictionary meaning of 'exercise of authority or power in a burdensome, harsh or wrongful manner; unjust or cruel treatment of subjects, inferiors etc; the imposition of unreasonable or unjust burdens': R v Fulling [1987] QB 426 at 432, [1987] 2 All ER 65 at 69, 85 Cr App Rep 136 at 142, CA, per Lord Lane CJ. See also R v Mushtaq [2005] UKHL 25 at [64], [2005] 3 All ER 885 at [64] per Lord Carswell: oppression includes 'questioning which by its nature, duration or other circumstances (including the fact of custody) excites hopes (such as the hope of release) or fears, or so affects the mind of the subject that his will crumbles and he speaks when otherwise he would have stayed silent'; (but note that his lordship was using the term 'oppression' in his opinion as a compendious term to include all of the exclusionary matters set out in the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 76(2)(a), (b) (see R v Mushtaq supra at [63]). See also R v Emmerson (1990) 92 Cr App Rep 284, CA; R v Paris (1992) 97 Cr App Rep 99, CA.

The character, age and experience or antecedents of the defendant may be relevant considerations when determining whether interview techniques falling short of violence or threats of violence amounted to oppression: R v Seelig [1991] 4 All ER 429, [1992] 1 WLR 148, CA (intelligent, sophisticated and experienced merchant banker interviewed concerning allegedly criminal share support operation); R v Smith [1994] 1 WLR 1396, 99 Cr App Rep 233, CA. See also at common law R v Gowan [1982] Crim LR 821, CA (experienced professional criminals must expect any police interrogation to be vigorous).

Oppression was a ground of exclusion of confession evidence at common law, but the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 is to be regarded as a new code for the admission of such evidence and the 'artificially wide' definition of the term at common law is no longer to be followed: R v Fulling supra at 432, 69 and 142 per Lord Lane CJ. Much of the conduct previously regarded as oppressive may now lead to exclusion under the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 76(2) on the ground of unreliability (see note 6 infra): R v Fulling supra. See also R v Davison [1988] Crim LR 442; R v Hughes [1988] Crim LR 519, CA.

Oppression need not lead to the exclusion of confession evidence if it is proved that it had no causal link to the confession itself (eg a threat of violence that the defendant knew could not or would not be carried out, or a threat that had been withdrawn or removed before the defendant confessed).

6 Ie excluding things said or done by the defendant himself: R v Goldenberg (1988) 88 Cr App Rep 285, CA. The fact that the defendant may have had mixed motives for making the confession (such as hope of an earlier release on police bail) cannot be taken to make his confession inadmissible (R v Rennie [1982] 1 All ER 385, 74 Cr App Rep 207, CA; approved in R v Crampton [1991] Crim LR 277, CA).

7 It is clear that the issue is not whether a particular confession is in fact unreliable or likely to be untrue. Instead, the focus is on the potential dangers of anything that was said or done. Breach of Code C: Code of Practice for the Detention, Treatment and Questioning of Persons by Police Officers (see PARA 908 et seq ante) may render a confession potentially unreliable: see R v Doolan [1988] Crim LR 747, CA. See also DPP v Blake [1989] 1 WLR 432, 89 Cr App Rep 179, DC (breach of 'spirit' of the Code led to exclusion of confession). Breaches of the Code (eg through not properly recording interviews) may also make it harder for the prosecution to prove admissibility where the facts relating to the making of that confession are in dispute. However, breaches of the Code, or of the provisions of the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 relating to the treatment of persons in custody, do not necessarily lead to exclusion of evidence: R v Delaney (1988) 88 Cr App Rep 338, CA; R v Parris (1988) 89 Cr App Rep 68, CA; and see further PARA 1545 post. See also R v Harvey [1988] Crim LR 241; R v Everett [1988] Crim LR 826, CA; R v Waters [1989] Crim LR 62, CA.

The 'circumstances' which are to be taken into account under the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 76(2) (b) (see head (1)(b) in the text) include the mental, physical and emotional condition of the defendant at the time: R v Everett supra; R v Crampton [1991] Crim LR 277, CA; R v McGovern (1990) 92 Cr App Rep 228, CA; R v Walker [1998] Crim LR 211, CA; Re Proulx [2001] 1 All ER 57, [2000] Crim LR 997, DC. See also R v Delaney supra. As to the detention, treatment and questioning of persons in custody see generally para 938 et seq ante.

8 Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 76(2). In any proceedings where the prosecution proposes to give in evidence a confession made by a defendant, the court may of its own motion require the prosecution to prove, as a condition of allowing it to do so, that the confession was not obtained as mentioned in s 76(2): s 76(3).

Statements made or documents produced by or on behalf of a person are not inadmissible in any criminal proceedings against the person in question for any form of fraudulent conduct in connection with or in relation to tax; or any proceedings against him for the recovery of any tax due from him, or any proceedings for a penalty or on appeal against the determination of a penalty by reason only that it has been drawn to his attention that: (1) where serious tax fraud has been committed the Commissioners for Her Majesty's Revenue and Customs may accept a money settlement and that they will accept such a settlement, and will not pursue a criminal prosecution, if he makes a full confession of all tax irregularities; or (2) that the extent to which he is helpful and volunteers information is a factor that will be taken into account in determining the amount of any penalty; and that he was or may have been induced thereby to make the statements or produce the documents: Taxes Management Act 1970 s 105 (amended by the Finance Act 1989 ss 149(5), 168(5); and the Finance Act 2003 s 206); Commissioners for Revenue and Customs Act 2005 s 50(2). See further INCOME TAXATION vol 23(2) (Reissue) PARA 1717. As to the Commissioners for Revenue and Customs see PARA 354 note 2 ante.

9 Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 76A(2) (added by the Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 128(1)). As to the meanings of 'oppression', 'anything said or done' and 'unreliable' see notes 5-7 supra. Note that the burden of proof imposed under the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 76A(2) (as added) is lower than that imposed on the prosecution under s 76(2) (ie balance of probabilities rather than beyond reasonable doubt), and may be discharged with the help of prosecution evidence as well as by evidence adduced by the co-defendant. It follows that an unsuccessful prosecution attempt to satisfy the burden imposed under s 76(2) may nevertheless suffice to discharge the lesser burden imposed under s 76A(2) (as added), and a co-defendant may then take advantage of this when running a 'cut-throat defence' in which he blames the defendant for the offence.

1540 Confessions by defendants: general principles

NOTE 3--Where a co-accused does not stand trial with a defendant but has pleaded guilty, the confession of the co-accused cannot be used as evidence at that defendant's trial: R v Finch [2007] EWCA Crim 36, [2007] All ER (D) (Jan) 46.

NOTE 8--Where a very long time has passed before a fresh judicial consideration of the admissibility of a confession, the confession should be judged by current evidential standards: R v Nolan [2006] All ER (D) 98 (Nov).

EVIDENCE/(18) CONFESSIONS AND ADMISSIONS/1541. Mixed and self-serving statements.

1541. Mixed and self-serving statements.

Where a statement made out of court by a defendant is partly self-serving and partly adverse or self-incriminating, the prosecution may not put the incriminating parts in evidence<sup>1</sup> whilst excluding those parts which are favourable to the defendant<sup>2</sup>.

Where a 'mixed'<sup>3</sup> statement is put before a jury, the jury should be directed that the whole of the statement is to be taken into account in deciding where the truth lies. Where appropriate, the trial judge should point out that the incriminating parts may be more likely to be true, whereas excuses may carry less weight<sup>4</sup>.

A statement which is purely self-serving is not ordinarily admissible as evidence of the truth of the facts stated<sup>5</sup>, although courts now have a discretion under the so-called 'safety valve' principle to admit any hearsay statement if satisfied that it is in the interests of justice for it to be admissible<sup>6</sup>. A self-serving statement may alternatively be admitted in order to show the attitude of the defendant at the time when he made it. This principle is not limited to statements made on the first encounter with the police<sup>7</sup>. Although in practice statements made to the police are often given in evidence by the prosecution even when they are self-serving, there may be occasions where the defendant produces a carefully prepared written statement to the police, with a view to its being made a part of the prosecution case. Such a statement should not be admitted in evidence<sup>8</sup>.

1 A statement which is partly adverse to the maker is admissible against him as a confession under the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 ss 76(1), 76A(1) (as added), subject to the conditions imposed by ss 76(2), 76A(2) (as added): see PARA 1540 ante.

EVIDENCE/(18) CONFESSIONS AND ADMISSIONS/1542. Evidence of defendant on previous occasions.

1542. Evidence of defendant on previous occasions.

Any admissions made by a defendant when giving evidence on a former occasion as a witness is evidence against him, if properly proved<sup>1</sup>, unless there is some statutory provision rendering such evidence inadmissible in other proceedings<sup>2</sup>. Thus, for example, depositions of a defendant who is called as a witness at a coroner's inquisition are evidence against him at his trial<sup>3</sup>, and the admissions of a defendant at his trial are admissible against him on a re-trial<sup>4</sup>.

1 Such statements were admissible at common law, and may also now be admissible as confessions under the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 76(1), unless inadmissible under ss 76(2), 76A(2) (as added): see PARA 1540 et seq ante.

2 Where the normal privilege against self-incrimination is abrogated in specified proceedings, restrictions are now imposed to restrict or prevent the use in any later criminal trial of any admissions thereby obtained under compulsion. The unrestricted use of such admissions would infringe the defendant's right to a fair trial under the Convention for the Protection of Human Rights and Fundamental Freedoms (Rome, 4 November 1950; TS 71 (1953); Cmd 8969) art 6: Saunders v United Kingdom (1996) 23 EHRR 313, [1998] 1 BCLC 362, ECtHR. EVIDENCE/(18) CONFESSIONS AND ADMISSIONS/1543. Confessions: determining admissibility.

1543. Confessions: determining admissibility.

If objection is taken to the admissibility of a confession<sup>1</sup>, or if the judge of his own motion considers that the question of admissibility should be examined<sup>2</sup>, the judge must hold a trial within a trial in the absence of the jury<sup>3</sup> at which he must hear evidence on the voir dire as to the circumstances in which the confession was made<sup>4</sup>; and he must then rule on the basis of that evidence whether or not the confession should be admitted<sup>5</sup>. The prosecution has the onus of satisfying the judge beyond reasonable doubt that the confession is admissible, although a co-defendant may be able to rely on such a confession if admissibility is proved only on the balance of probabilities<sup>6</sup>.

The truth of the alleged confession is not directly relevant at a trial within a trial, but at common law the authorities were divided as to whether the judge might nevertheless hear evidence as to truth or falsity of any elements of the confession when determining the question of admissibility, and in particular whether the defendant was required to answer on the voir dire questions as to his possible involvement in the alleged offence<sup>7</sup>. Under the current statutory regime it is generally assumed that a trial within a trial may not address or consider the guilt or innocence of the defendant<sup>8</sup>; and it is expressly provided that a confession may be inadmissible even where obviously it is true<sup>9</sup>.

If the judge rules that the confession may be admitted in evidence, the defendant may continue to argue (this time before the jury) that the confession was obtained in circumstances rendering it inadmissible<sup>10</sup>. If there is evidence before the jury to support this argument<sup>11</sup>, the jury must then be directed to disregard the confession unless satisfied (to whichever standard of proof is appropriate) that it was not so obtained<sup>12</sup>. The jury must not be told that the judge has already considered such matters and ruled the confession admissible<sup>13</sup>.

If the jury is thus satisfied as to admissibility, or if the issue is not raised before them, it must then decide whether it is satisfied (again, to whichever standard of proof is appropriate) that the confession is true<sup>14</sup>. In deciding this the jury may need to consider whether there are any circumstances which cast doubt upon its reliability, and should be directed towards any features of the case which may have a bearing on the issue. These may include the circumstances in which the confession was made, the contents of the confession itself, and whether the defendant appears to have admitted matters which are improbable or cannot be true. The jury must be reminded of any specific weaknesses or obvious inaccuracies in the confession evidence which may reflect upon its overall reliability<sup>15</sup>.

A judge has no statutory power to reconsider his ruling on admissibility once the confession in question has been given in evidence, but at common law he does retain the power to take whatever measures may be necessary to prevent an injustice, which may in some cases involve discharging the jury<sup>16</sup>.

If the judge rules a confession inadmissible following a trial within a trial, the jury should ordinarily be told nothing about it<sup>17</sup>.

1 Admissibility is to be decided in accordance with the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 76 (as amended), s 76A (as added); see PARA 1540 ante.

2 In accordance with ibid ss 76(3), 76A(3) (as added); see PARA 1540 ante.

See also R v Voisin [1918] 1 KB 531 at 538, 13 Cr App Rep 89 at 94, CCA; Minter v Priest [1930] AC 558 at 581-582, HL, per Lord Atkin. The issue must be determined as one of fact and causation. On appeal, the trial judge's findings should not be disturbed merely because of difficulties in reconciling them with different findings of fact, on apparently similar evidence, in other reported cases: see DPP v Ping Lin supra; R v Rennie [1982] 1 All ER 385, 74 Cr App Rep 207, CA. Underlying the basic rules concerning the admissibility of confessions is the need to be fair to the defendant: see R v Middleton [1975] QB 191, 59 Cr App Rep 18, CA. As to proof of facts, knowledge of which has been obtained by means of inadmissible confessions see PARA 1548 post.

Where counsel wishes to challenge a confession by means of a trial within a trial, he ought not to refer specifically to the confession in front of the jury, but ought merely to indicate that he would like the jury to be withdrawn for a certain matter to be determined in its absence: Mitchell v R [1998] AC 695, [1998] 2 Cr App Rep 35, PC.

4 The defendant may give evidence on the voir dire as to the issue of admissibility: see R v Cowell [1940] 2 KB 49, 27 Cr App Rep 191, CCA. In so doing, he is not obliged to testify as to any matters concerning the circumstances of the alleged offence itself: Wong Kam-Ming v R [1980] AC 247, 69 Cr App Rep 47, PC; R v Mushtaq [2005] UKHL 25, [2005] 3 All ER 885 at 1195, [2005] 1 WLR 1513.

At common law, the rule was that in most cases when a confession was challenged a trial within a trial should ensue: R v Middleton [1975] QB 191 at 197, 59 Cr App Rep 18 at 22, CA, per Edmund Davies LJ. However, it was possible for the defence to elect to forgo the trial within a trial for tactical reasons, and to elect to challenge the admissibility of the confession for the first time before the jury: Ajodha v The State [1982] AC 204, 73 Cr App Rep 129, PC; R v Airey [1985] Crim LR 305, CA. It is not clear whether this option survives the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 76 (as amended) (see PARA 1540 ante), but if so there is no reported case of it being exercised. In R v Liverpool Juvenile Court, ex p R [1988] QB 1 at 10, [1987] 2 All ER 668 at 673, DC, it was suggested that, in relation to summary trial, the option was still open, but the option is not mentioned in R v Mushtaq [2005] UKHL 25, [2005] 3 All ER 885, [2005] 1 WLR 1513.

The rule that a trial within a trial must be held where the defendant so desires under the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 76 (as amended) is applicable to summary trials: R v Liverpool Juvenile Court, ex p R supra. Cf the position at common law, where it was thought that trials within trials were unsuitable for magistrates' courts: F (an Infant) v Chief Constable of Kent [1982] Crim LR 682, DC. The common law position continues to prevail with regard to questions of admissibility of evidence other than that raised by the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 76 (as amended): see eg Vel v Chief Constable of North Wales (1987) 151 JP 510, sub nom Vel v Owen [1987] Crim LR 496, DC (trial within a trial not required in summary proceedings where confession challenged under the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 78 (as amended) (exclusion of unfair evidence) (see PARA 1365 ante)); see also Halawa v Federation Against Copyright Theft [1995] 1 Cr App Rep 21, [1995] Crim LR 409, DC.

A trial within a trial may enable a trial judge to decide not only whether confession evidence is admissible, but whether he should in fact admit it or exclude it under the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 78 (as amended): see PARA 1545 post. A trial within a trial is inappropriate where the defence case is that no confession was made: Ajodha v The State supra. Where, however, a defendant denies having made a confession, but also argues that the alleged confession would in any event be inadmissible, the judge must first consider the admissibility issue and, where the alleged confession is judged to be admissible, the question whether the confession was actually made should then be addressed: Thongjai v R; Chun-Kong v R [1998] AC 54, [1997] 3 WLR 667, PC.

5 The defendant is entitled to a ruling: Sparks v R [1964] AC 964 at 982, [1964] 1 All ER 727 at 735, PC. See also R v Richards [1967] 1 All ER 829, 51 Cr App Rep 266, CA; R v Francis, R v Murphy (1959) 43 Cr App Rep 174, CCA.

6 Contrast the different standards of proof imposed under the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 76(2) and s 76A(2) (as added): see PARA 1540 ante.

Where a court is determining the admissibility of evidence, or is considering whether to exercise its discretion to exclude admissible evidence, any relevant provisions of a Code of Practice issued under the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 must be taken into account (see s 67(11) (amended by the Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 332, Sch 37 Pt 1)), but breach of the Codes of Practice does not lead to automatic exclusion of evidence obtained in consequence: R v Delaney (1988) 88 Cr App Rep 338 at 341, CA; R v Parris (1988) 89 Cr App Rep 68, CA; R v Keenan [1990] 2 QB 54 at 67, [1989] 3 All ER 598 at 609, CA, per Hodgson J.

7 Contrast R v Hammond [1941] 3 All ER 318, 28 Cr App Rep 84, CCA (in which it was held that such evidence was relevant and admissible on the voir dire) with Wong Kam-ming v R [1980] AC 247, 69 Cr App Rep

47, PC (in which it was held (Lord Hailsham LC dissenting) that such evidence was irrelevant and inadmissible). In practice, Wong Kam-ming v R supra (although a Privy Council ruling) was generally considered to have altered the law as stated in R v Hammond supra. See R v Brophy [1982] AC 476, 73 Cr App Rep 287, HL. However, in certain cases it was relevant for the defendant to volunteer an admission of guilt on the voir dire in order to challenge admissibility, and where it was so relevant, the admission thus made could not be given in evidence against him at the trial: R v Brophy supra. It is not clear whether this latter principle survives the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984, as such an admission would appear to constitute an admissible confession under s 76 (as amended) (see PARA 1540 ante).

8 Wong Kam-ming v R [1980] AC 247, 69 Cr App Rep 47, PC (see note 7 supra) was cited with apparent approval in R v Mushtaq [2005] UKHL 25 at [38], [2005] 3 All ER 885 at [38], [2005] 1 WLR 1513 at [38] per Lord Rodger of Earlsferry.

9 See PARA 1540 ante.

10 R v Murray [1951] 1 KB 391, 34 Cr App Rep 203, CCA; R v Mushtaq [2005] UKHL 25 [2005] 3 All ER 885, [2005] 1 WLR 1513.

11 The jury does not need to be directed to consider the issue of admissibility unless there is evidence before it on which it might find in favour of the defendant. Suggestions made by counsel in cross-examination do not suffice for this purpose: R v Mushtaq [2005] UKHL 25, [2005] 3 All ER 885, [2005] 1 WLR 1513.

12 R v Bass [1953] 1 QB 680, [1953] 1 All ER 1064, CCA; R v Mushtaq [2005] UKHL 25 at [47]-[48], [2005] 3 All ER 885 at [47]-[48], [2005] 1 WLR 1513 at [47]-[48] per Lord Rodger of Earlsferry, disapproving Chan Wei-Keung v R [1967] 2 AC 160, 51 Cr App Rep 257, PC, in which it was said that the jury was not concerned with issues of admissibility. Other cases impliedly overruled in R v Mushtaq supra include R v Burgess [1968] 2 QB 112, 52 Cr App Rep 258, CA; R v Owenell [1969] 1 QB 17, 52 Cr App Rep 167, CA. It would be incompatible with the defendant's right to a fair trial under the Convention for the Protection of Human Rights and Fundamental Freedoms (Rome, 4 November 1950; TS 71 (1953); Cmd 8969) art 6(1) for a jury to be invited to convict in reliance upon a confession, notwithstanding that they may consider that confession to have obtained by oppression etc: R v Mushtaq supra. The Convention is commonly referred to as the European Convention on Human Rights and is enshrined in the Human Rights Act 1998 Sch 1: see CONSTITUTIONAL LAW AND HUMAN RIGHTS vol 8(2) (Reissue) PARA 122 et seq.

14 The jury may rely on a confession by the defendant for the purpose of establishing the innocence of a co-defendant on whose behalf it has been admitted if merely satisfied of its truth on a balance of probabilities (see the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 76A(2) (as added); and PARA 1540 ante), but must at the same time be directed not to convict the defendant on the basis of that confession unless sure (ie satisfied beyond reasonable doubt) of his guilt. See PARA 1540 ante.

A previous inconsistent statement of the defendant, made while giving evidence to dispute the admissibility of a confession at the trial within a trial, may be put to him in cross-examination at the trial only if the disputed confession is admitted in evidence: Wong Kam-ming v R [1980] AC 247, 69 Cr App Rep 47, PC.

EVIDENCE/(18) CONFESSIONS AND ADMISSIONS/1544. Confessions by mentally handicapped persons.

1544. Confessions by mentally handicapped persons.

Without prejudice to the general duty of the court at a trial on indictment with a jury to direct the jury on any matter on which it appears to the court appropriate to do so, where at such a trial: (1) the case against the defendant depends wholly or substantially on a confession<sup>1</sup> by him; and (2) the court is satisfied that he is mentally handicapped<sup>2</sup> and that the confession was not made in the presence of an independent person<sup>3</sup>, the court must warn the jury that there is special need for caution before convicting the defendant in reliance on the confession<sup>4</sup>, and must explain that the need arises because of the circumstances mentioned in heads (1) and (2) above<sup>5</sup>.

In any case where at the summary trial of a person for an offence it appears to the court that such a warning would be required if the trial were on indictment with a jury, the court must treat the case as one in which there is a special need for caution before convicting the defendant on his confession<sup>6</sup>.

Where the prosecution case depends wholly upon one or more confessions made by a defendant who suffers from a significant degree of mental handicap; and the confessions are unconvincing to a point where a jury properly directed could not properly convict upon them, the trial judge (if he has not already excluded the confessions) must withdraw the case from the jury and direct an acquittal<sup>7</sup>.

1 As to the meaning of 'confession' see PARA 1540 ante.

2 For these purposes, 'mentally handicapped', in relation to a person, means that he is in a state of arrested or incomplete development of mind which includes significant impairment of intelligence and social functioning: Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 77(3). See R v Kenny [1994] Crim LR 284, CA. See also R v Ham (1995) 36 BMLR 169, CA (wrong definition of 'mentally handicapped' applied and opinions of police officers, who were not experts, improperly taken into account).

3 For these purposes, 'independent person' does not include a police officer or a person employed for, or engaged on, police purposes: Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 77(3). 'Police purposes', in relation to a police area, includes the purposes of special constables appointed for that area, of police cadets undergoing training with a view to becoming members of the police force maintained for that area and of civilians employed for the purposes of that force or of any such special constables or cadets: Police Act 1996 s 101(2); definition applied by the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 77(3). A solicitor may be an independent person for the purposes of s 77 (as amended): R v Lewis [1996] Crim LR 260, CA.

In its application to Her Majesty's Revenue and Customs, the definition of 'independent person' in the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 77(3) includes, in addition to the persons mentioned therein, an officer or any other person acting under the authority of the Commissioners for Her Majesty's Revenue and Customs: Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 (Application to Customs and Excise) Order 1985, SI 1985/1800, art 10; Commissioners for Revenue and Customs Act 2005 s 50(2).

4 As to the special rules applicable to the interviewing of a mentally handicapped suspect see Code C: Code of Practice for the Detention, Treatment and Questioning of Persons by Police Officers Annex E; and PARA 940 ante.

5 Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 77(1) (s 77(1), (2) amended, s 77(2A) added, by the Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 331, Sch 36 para 48). In any case where at the trial on indictment without a jury of a person for an offence it appears to the court that a warning under the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 77(1) (as amended) would be required if the trial were with a jury, the court must treat the case as one in which there is a special need for caution before convicting the accused on his confession: s 77(2A) (as so added).

The required direction under s 77(1) is not a matter of prudence but is ordinarily an essential part of a fair summing up: R v Lamont [1989] Crim LR 813, CA. The judge is not, however, obliged to give the direction where the prosecution case does not substantially rely upon the confession evidence: R v Campbell [1995] 1 Cr App Rep 522, [1995] Crim LR 157, CA; R v Bailey [1995] 2 Cr App Rep 262, [1995] Crim LR 723, CA.

The need to give such a warning will only arise in respect of a confession admitted in evidence ie one which has already satisfied the test for admissibility in the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 76 (as amended) (see PARA 1540 ante) and has not been excluded by the court by virtue of its discretion under s 78 (as amended) (see PARA 1365 ante), but it is possible that the jury will take a different view as to reliability etc from that taken by the trial judge. If the Court of Appeal considers that the judge ought to have ruled the confession inadmissible in the first place (eg because the manner of interrogation was likely to result in an unreliable confession, given the defendant's mental condition (see s 76(2)(b) (see PARA 1540 ante)) a conviction must ordinarily be quashed notwithstanding an impeccable direction under s 77 (as amended): R v Moss (1990) 91 Cr App Rep 371, CA.

6 Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 77(2) (as amended: see note 5 supra). Nothing in s 77 (as amended) prejudices any power of the court to exclude evidence, whether by preventing questions from being put or otherwise, at its discretion: s 82(3).

7 R v McKenzie [1993] 1 WLR 453, 96 Cr App Rep 98, CA, applying R v Galbraith [1981] 2 All ER 1060, 73 Cr App Rep 124, CA.

Halsbury's Laws of England/CRIMINAL LAW, EVIDENCE AND PROCEDURE (VOLUME 11(1) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1-620; VOLUME 11(2) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 621-1049; VOLUME 11(3) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1050-1557; VOLUME 11(4) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1558-2180)/20. EVIDENCE/(18) CONFESSIONS AND ADMISSIONS/1545. Discretionary exclusion of confessions.

1545. Discretionary exclusion of confessions.

The trial judge or court has the power, both at common law<sup>1</sup> and by statute<sup>2</sup>, to exclude a confession which otherwise satisfies the statutory tests governing admissibility. In practice the statutory power is more extensive and the common law power is now rarely exercised<sup>3</sup>.

Where police officers or other investigators have infringed or ignored statutory provisions<sup>4</sup> or provisions of the relevant Codes of Practice governing the questioning or treatment of suspects<sup>5</sup> or the recording of interviews<sup>6</sup>, the exclusion of any confession evidence obtained in consequence may (but need not automatically) follow<sup>7</sup>.

Although the statutory power is formally cast in the form of a discretion ('the court may') the objective criterion whether 'the evidence would have such an adverse effect on the fairness of the proceedings' in truth imports a judgment whether in the light of the statutory criterion of fairness the court ought to admit the evidence<sup>8</sup>. It is nevertheless a discretionary power in the sense that the court must often weigh competing considerations in the balance<sup>9</sup>, and also in the sense that the judge's discretion, if properly exercised and not perverse, cannot be overturned on appeal merely because the appellate court, having taken the same factors into consideration, might have exercised that discretion differently<sup>10</sup>.

In exercising the power to exclude, courts and judges must now have regard to the provisions of the Convention for the Protection of Human Rights and Fundamental Freedoms<sup>11</sup>, and this is likely to be of crucial importance where police undercover operations or informers are used to gather or solicit admissions or confessions<sup>12</sup>.

Neither the statutory nor the common law power to exclude may be used to prevent a defendant from calling or eliciting evidence as to a legally admissible confession made by a co-defendant, should that confession tend to assist the defendant's own case<sup>13</sup>.

1 The Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 82(3) preserves the common law powers of the court to exclude evidence at its discretion. As to the ambit of the common law powers of the court see PARA 1365 ante.

2 See ibid s 78(1); and PARA 1365 ante. In R v Mason [1987] 3 All ER 481, [1988] 1 WLR 139, CA, the Court of Appeal rejected an argument that the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 78 (as amended) was inapplicable to confession evidence, and it has been used in that context on many occasions since.

3 As to the rare circumstances in which recourse to the common law power may still be necessary see R v Sat-Bhambra (1988) 88 Cr App Rep 55, [1988] Crim LR 453, CA (see PARA 1365 note 4 ante).

4 These include in particular the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 58 (as amended) which governs a suspect's right to legal advice. See PARA 953 ante.

5 See Code C: Code of Practice for the Detention, Treatment and Questioning of Persons by Police Officers; and PARA 908 et seq ante.

6 See Code E: the Code of Practice on Audio Recording Interviews with Suspects (see PARA 971 et seq ante) and Code F: Code of Practice on Visual Recording with Sound of Interviews with Suspects (see PARA 986 et seq ante).

7 Where a court is determining the admissibility of evidence, or is considering whether to exercise its discretion to exclude admissible evidence, any relevant provisions of a Code of Practice issued under the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 must be taken into account: see s 67(11). As to the exercise of the discretion to exclude see R v Walsh (1989) 91 Cr App Rep 161 at 163, [1989] Crim LR 822, CA, per Saville J: 'If there are significant and substantial breaches of [the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984] s 58 or the provisions of [Code C], then prima facie at least the standards of fairness set by Parliament have not been met. So far as a defendant is concerned, it seems to us also to follow that to admit evidence against him which has been obtained in circumstances where these standards have not been met, cannot but have an adverse effect on the fairness of the proceedings. This does not mean . . . that in every case of a significant or substantial breach of s 58 or the Code of Practice the evidence concerned will automatically be excluded. Section 78 does not so provide. The task of the court is not merely to consider whether there would be an adverse effect on the fairness of the proceedings, but such an adverse effect that justice requires the evidence to be excluded'.

See also R v Delaney (1988) 88 Cr App Rep 338 at 341, CA; R v Parris (1988) 89 Cr App Rep 68, CA. The deliberate breach in bad faith of the right to legal advice (see the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 58 (as amended); and PARA 953 ante) will almost certainly result in exclusion, and the breach of the same right without bad faith may well do so (R v Alladice (1988) 87 Cr App Rep 380, [1988] Crim LR 608, CA) as may significant and substantial breaches whether in bad faith or not (see R v Walsh supra). See also R v Samuel [1988] QB 615, 87 Cr App Rep 232, CA; R v Absolam (1988) 88 Cr App Rep 332, [1988] Crim LR 748, CA; R v Maguire [1989] Crim LR 815, CA; R v Canale [1990] 2 All ER 187, 91 Cr App Rep 1, CA. Significant and substantial breaches of the interviewing rules of Code C: Code of Practice for the Detention, Treatment and Questioning of Persons by Police Officers (see PARA 908 et seq ante), which also applies (inter alia) to officers of Revenue and Customs and inspectors, frequently results in the exclusion of evidence obtained in consequence: R v Keenan [1990] 2 QB 54, [1989] 3 All ER 598, CA; R v Weekes (1993) 97 Cr App Rep 222, [1993] Crim LR 211, CA; R v Kirk [1999] 4 All ER 698, [2000] 1 WLR 567, CA; R v Gill [2003] EWCA Crim 2256, [2003] 4 All ER 681, [2004] 1 WLR 469; but see also R v Senior [2004] EWCA Crim 454, [2004] 3 All ER 9, [2004] 2 Cr App Rep 215. EVIDENCE/(18) CONFESSIONS AND ADMISSIONS/1546. Editing of confessions.

1546. Editing of confessions.

An admissible confession may require to be edited so as to protect the defendant<sup>1</sup> or a co-defendant<sup>2</sup> from any unfair prejudice that might be caused through inappropriate references to other criminal activities, previous convictions, etc. A defendant may, however, object to any editing which may damage his own case, even if the unedited version may be inadmissible against (or unfairly prejudicial to) a co-defendant<sup>3</sup>.

When a suspect is interviewed about more offences than are eventually made the subject of committal charges, a fresh statement should be prepared and signed omitting all questions and answers about the uncharged offences unless either they might appropriately be taken into consideration or evidence about those offences is admissible on the charges preferred, such as evidence of system<sup>4</sup>.

EVIDENCE/(18) CONFESSIONS AND ADMISSIONS/1547. Inadmissible confessions as previous inconsistent statements.

1547. Inadmissible confessions as previous inconsistent statements.

At common law, it was established that the prosecution could not be permitted to use or refer to an inadmissible confession even as a previous inconsistent statement with which to cross-examine the defendant and impugn his credibility if he testified<sup>1</sup>. A previous inconsistent statement of the defendant, made while giving evidence to dispute the admissibility of a confession at a trial within a trial, is likewise inadmissible unless the original confession is ruled admissible following the trial within a trial<sup>2</sup>.

In contrast, a co-defendant was permitted to use an excluded confession for that purpose<sup>3</sup>, but this right now appears to have been abolished under provisions which bring the powers of the co-defendant broadly into line with that of the prosecution<sup>4</sup>.

1 R v Treacy [1944] 2 All ER 229, 30 Cr App Rep 93, CCA. The same principle applies in favour of a co-defendant of the maker of an involuntary statement: R v Rice [1963] 1 QB 857, 47 Cr App Rep 79, CCA. Thus, while information derived from such a statement may be used as a tool to extract from its maker in the form of evidence on oath all that he has formerly said about a co-defendant, the fact that the information was provided in a statement may not be revealed to the jury: R v Rice supra at 868-869 and 86 per Winn J.

EVIDENCE/(18) CONFESSIONS AND ADMISSIONS/1548. Facts discovered as a result of inadmissible confessions.

1548. Facts discovered as a result of inadmissible confessions.

The fact that a confession<sup>1</sup> is wholly or partly inadmissible<sup>2</sup> in law does not affect the admissibility in evidence: (1) of any facts discovered as a result of the confession; or (2) where the confession is relevant as showing that the defendant speaks, writes or expresses himself in a particular way, of so much of the confession as is necessary to show that he does so<sup>3</sup>.

Evidence is not admissible to show that a fact was discovered as a result of a statement made by a defendant person if it was so discovered: (a) as a result of a confession which is wholly inadmissible in law; or (b) as a result of a confession partly so inadmissible, if the fact is discovered as a result of the inadmissible part; unless evidence of how it was discovered is given by the defendant or on his behalf<sup>4</sup>.

1 As to the meaning of 'confession' see PARA 1540 ante.

2 It is excluded in pursuance of the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 76 (as amended) or s 76A (as added): see PARA 1540 ante.

3 Ibid ss 76(4), 76A(4) (s 76A added by the Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 128). These provisions follow the rule at common law as to the discovery of facts consequent upon a confession: see R v Warickshall (1783) 1 Leach 263; R v Griffin (1809) Russ & Ry 151, CCR. See also Kuruma, Son of Kaniu v R [1955] AC 197, [1955] 1 All ER 236, PC; King v R [1969] 1 AC 304, 52 Cr App Rep 353, PC. Cf R v Jones (1809) Russ & Ry 152; R v Jenkins (1822) Russ & Ry 492, CCR. As to the admissibility of a confession showing how the defendant misspells particular words see R v Voisin [1918] 1 KB 531, 13 Cr App Rep 89, CCA; R v Nottle [2004] EWCA Crim 599, [2004] All ER (D) 442 (Mar).

It is possible that in some cases the admission of evidence discovered as a result of an inadmissible confession would have such a prejudicial effect on the fairness of the proceedings that the court or judge should exclude it under the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 78 (as amended) (see PARA 1365 ante), although there does not appear to be any reported case in which this possibility has been explored. Nothing in Pt VIII (ss 73-82) (as amended) prejudices the power of the court to exclude evidence, whether by preventing questions from being put or otherwise, at its discretion: s 82(3).

4 Ibid ss 76(5), (6), 76A(5), (6) (as added: see note 3 supra). See also R v Berriman (1854) 6 Cox CC 388; Lam Chi-ming v R [1991] 2 AC 212, [1991] 3 All ER 172, PC. These provisions do not apply to cases in which confession evidence is excluded only as a matter of judicial discretion.

Halsbury's Laws of England/CRIMINAL LAW, EVIDENCE AND PROCEDURE (VOLUME 11(1) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1-620; VOLUME 11(2) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 621-1049; VOLUME 11(3) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1050-1557; VOLUME 11(4) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1558-2180)/20. EVIDENCE/(18) CONFESSIONS AND ADMISSIONS/1549. Confession by one of two or more defendants.

1549. Confession by one of two or more defendants.

Where two or more persons are accused of an offence, and one of them makes a statement amounting to a confession, that confession (unless made in the other's presence and effectively assented to by him<sup>1</sup>) can be directly admissible only against the defendant who made it<sup>2</sup>. If the other defendant was not present when the statement was made the jury must be reminded of this and warned that, because he had had no opportunity to contradict it, it must be disregarded when considering the case against that other defendant<sup>3</sup>. Anything said by a defendant in evidence in chief or in cross-examination may, however, be treated as evidence for all purposes and may where relevant be used to implicate a co-defendant, whether it amounts to an admission of joint liability or an allegation that the co-defendant was solely responsible<sup>4</sup>.

A confession may nevertheless be used to secure the conviction of a co-defendant in one of two ways. First, information derived from a defendant's confession may be used to extract from him, if he testifies, all that he has formerly said about a co-defendant<sup>5</sup>. Secondly, cases may arise in which the case against a defendant requires or depends upon proof of the guilt of a co-defendant, notably where the defendant is charged with being a secondary party to the co-defendant's offence<sup>6</sup>, or with handling the proceeds of the co-defendant's theft<sup>7</sup>. A confession by the co-defendant may in such cases be relied upon to establish the guilt of that co-defendant, even though this may be the key to the conviction of the defendant himself<sup>8</sup>.

1 As to this possibility see R v Coll [2005] EWCA Crim 3675, [2005] All ER (D) 82 (Nov); and PARA 1551 post.

2 This is implicit in the wording of the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 76(1): see PARA 1540 ante. See also at common law R v Boroski (1682) 9 State Tr 1 at 23; R v Pearson (1908) 72 JP 449, 1 Cr App Rep 77, CCA; R v Davis (1913) 9 Cr App Rep 66, CCA; R v Rudd (1948) 32 Cr App Rep 138, CCA; R v Gunewardene [1951] 2 KB 600, 35 Cr App Rep 80, CCA; R v Moore (1956) 40 Cr App Rep 50, CCA; R v Daniel and Watson [1973] Crim LR 627, CA; R v Campbell and Williams [1993] Crim LR 448, CA. See also R v Gray and Evans [1998] Crim LR 570, CA (where a defendant's interview with police is ruled inadmissible as against that defendant, it may not be used in the cross-examination of a co-defendant in a way which suggests to a jury that it is admissible).

3 As to the form of direction to the jury where such evidence is admitted see R v Gunewardene [1951] 2 KB 600 at 610-611, [1951] 2 All ER 290 at 295, CCA, per Lord Goddard CJ: 'If no separate trial is ordered it is the duty of the judge to impress on the jury that the statement of one prisoner not made on oath in the course of the trial is not evidence against the other and must be entirely disregarded.' See also Judicial Studies Board, Specimen Direction No 32.

Joint trials in cases involving joint liability are generally to be preferred despite any such complications: R v Randall [2003] UKHL 69 at [16], [2004] 1 All ER 467 at [16], [2004] 1 WLR 56 at [16] per Lord Steyn; R v Hayter [2005] UKHL 6, [2005] 2 All ER 209, [2005] 2 Cr App Rep 37.

A defendant may confess as to his own acts, knowledge or intentions but he cannot 'confess' as to the acts of other persons which he has not seen and of which he can only have knowledge by hearsay: Surujpaul (called Dick) v R [1958] 3 All ER 300, 42 Cr App Rep 266, PC; A-G's Reference (No 4 of 1979) [1981] 1 All ER 1193, 71 Cr App Rep 341, CA; R v Spinks [1982] 1 All ER 587, 74 Cr App Rep 263, CA.

Where at common law a statement incriminating the defendant had been made by an accomplice and, after the defendant had been charged and cautioned, the statement was read to the defendant, his subsequent voluntary statement was admissible against him: R v Hirst (1896) 18 Cox CC 374. ## (19) INFERENCES FROM A DEFENDANT'S SILENCE OR NON-DISCLOSURE

1550. Inferences at common law and by statute.

At common law, a suspect or person charged with an offence has a 'right to silence' and accordingly has no duty to assist the police with their inquiries or to answer questions when interviewed<sup>1</sup>. A defendant likewise is under no obligation to testify at his own trial. By statute, however, inferences may in certain circumstances be drawn by a judge, court or jury from a defendant's failure to testify or from his failure to disclose alleged facts or answer certain types of question when interviewed<sup>2</sup>. In particular, inferences may be drawn from:

- 2256 (1) a defendant's failure when questioned under caution to mention facts later relied upon by him in court<sup>3</sup>;
- 2257 (2) a defendant's failure or refusal when questioned under caution following arrest to account for objects, substances or marks found on his person, clothing, footwear, etc, or in his possession or at the scene of his arrest<sup>4</sup>;
- 2258 (3) a defendant's failure or refusal when questioned under caution following arrest to account for his being found by a constable at a particular place at or about the time of the alleged offence<sup>5</sup>; and
- 2259 (4) a defendant's failure to testify at his trial<sup>6</sup>.

Furthermore, a defendant who is sent for trial on indictment is now required to disclose the essential elements of his case in advance of the trial by means of a defence statement<sup>7</sup>. Although a defendant cannot be compelled to comply with the relevant requirements or to present a defence at trial that is consistent with his defence statement, inferences may again be drawn from any significant failures or deficiencies in that respect<sup>8</sup>.

Even at common law, a suspect's failure to deny an allegation made in his presence may be construed as a tacit admission of guilt on his part, but only if the accusation was made in circumstances where an innocent person might have been expected to refute or deny it<sup>9</sup>. This principle remains important because it may in some cases be possible to draw such inferences at common law where no such inference could be drawn by statute.

1 The right to silence forms one part of a suspect's privilege against self-incrimination: see PARA 1476 ante.

2 Such inferences as appear proper may also be drawn where the appropriate consent to the taking of an intimate sample from a person has been refused without good cause: see the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 62(10) (as amended); and PARA 1028 ante.

EVIDENCE/(19) INFERENCES FROM A DEFENDANT'S SILENCE OR NON-DISCLOSURE/1551. Defendant's reaction to statements or accusations in his presence.

1551. Defendant's reaction to statements or accusations in his presence.

At common law, a statement made in the presence and hearing of the defendant may (depending on the defendant's reaction to it) be admissible in evidence in criminal proceedings, not as evidence in its own right, but in order to show that by his reaction the defendant effectively accepted that statement so as to make it his own admission<sup>1</sup>, or that he reacted in some other way that may be considered incriminating<sup>2</sup>. If he accepts the statement only in part, it becomes his statement only to the extent that he accepts it<sup>3</sup>. If there is no evidence from which a jury could reasonably find that the defendant accepted the truth of any part of the statement, there can then be no logical basis for the admission of the statement, and if it has already been admitted the jury should be told to disregard it<sup>4</sup>.

Where an allegation is made against the defendant in such a way and in such circumstances that an innocent person would be expected to repudiate the accusation, and nothing is said in reply, the defendant's failure to respond may be evidence that he accepts or admits the accusation<sup>5</sup>. But where the circumstances are such that no reply can reasonably be expected it would be unfair to permit any adverse inferences to be drawn from the defendant's silence<sup>6</sup>. Where the defendant is questioned under caution by police officers, legislation now governs the circumstances in which inferences may be drawn from the defendant's failure to answer specific questions or to disclose facts later relied upon in his defence<sup>7</sup>.

If, after a detainee has been charged with or informed that he may be prosecuted for an offence, an officer wants to tell him about any written statement or interview with another person relating to such an offence, the detainee must either be handed a true copy of the written statement or the content of the interview record brought to his attention. Nothing must be done to invite any reply or comment except to: (1) caution the detainee, 'You do not have to say anything, but anything you do say may be given in evidence'; and (2) remind the detainee about his right to legal advice<sup>8</sup>.

If the detainee cannot read, the document may be read to him; and if he is a juvenile, mentally disordered or otherwise mentally vulnerable, the appropriate adult must also be given a copy, or the interview record must be brought to his attention<sup>9</sup>.

EVIDENCE/(19) INFERENCES FROM A DEFENDANT'S SILENCE OR NON-DISCLOSURE/1552.

Defendant's failure when questioned under caution to mention facts later relied upon in court.

1552. Defendant's failure when questioned under caution to mention facts later relied upon in court.

Where, in any proceedings against a person for an offence, evidence is given that the defendant at any time before he was charged with the offence, on being questioned under caution by a constable trying to discover whether or by whom the offence had been committed<sup>1</sup>, failed to mention any fact<sup>2</sup> relied on in his defence in those proceedings<sup>3</sup>, or on being charged with the offence or officially informed<sup>4</sup> that he might be prosecuted for it, failed to mention any such fact, being a fact which in the circumstances existing at the time the defendant could reasonably have been expected to mention when so questioned, charged or informed, as the case may be<sup>5</sup>, such inferences as appear proper may be drawn from the failure<sup>6</sup>.

Such inferences may be drawn:

- 2260 (1) by a judge, in deciding whether to grant an application to dismiss charges against the defendant<sup>7</sup>;
- 2261 (2) by a court, in determining whether there is a case to answer<sup>8</sup>;
- 2262 (3) by a court or jury, in determining whether the defendant is guilty of the offence charged<sup>9</sup>.

Where the defendant was at an authorised place of detention<sup>10</sup> at the time of the failure, no such inference may be drawn unless the defendant had been allowed an opportunity to consult a solicitor prior to being questioned, charged or informed<sup>11</sup>.

Inferences may in some cases be drawn even where the defendant's failure to mention the fact in question was in accordance with the instructions of his legal adviser<sup>12</sup>, but it is appropriate to draw such inferences only where it is clear that the defendant was sheltering behind that advice, rather than merely submitting reluctantly to it or accepting it without question<sup>13</sup>. Where the defendant gives or the defence calls or elicits evidence as to the reasons for any such legal advice that was given, this may be treated as a waiver of legal professional privilege, and the defendant or his legal adviser may (if either testifies) be cross-examined as to the basis of that advice and as to any matters that were discussed between them<sup>14</sup>.

Evidence tending to establish the defendant's failure may be given before or after evidence tending to establish the fact which he is alleged to have failed to mention<sup>15</sup>.

Nothing in these provisions prejudices the operation of a provision of any enactment which provides (in whatever words) that any answer or evidence given by a person in specified circumstances is not admissible in evidence against him or some other person in any proceedings or class of proceedings<sup>16</sup> or prejudices any power of a court, in any proceedings, to exclude evidence (whether by preventing questions being put or otherwise) at its discretion<sup>17</sup>.

These rules apply with some modifications to proceedings before courts-martial or other service courts<sup>18</sup>.

1 The Criminal Justice and Public Order Act 1994 s 34 (as amended) applies in relation to questioning by persons other than constables charged with the duty of investigating offences or charging offenders as it applies in relation to questioning by constables; and 'officially informed' means informed by a constable or any such person: s 34(4). The provisions of s 34 (as amended) do not prejudice the admissibility in evidence of the silence or other reaction of the defendant in the face of anything said in his presence relating to the conduct in respect of which he is charged, in so far as evidence thereof would otherwise be admissible, or preclude the drawing of any inference from any such silence or other reaction of the defendant which could otherwise properly be drawn: s 34(5).

As to the form of caution that must be administered before inferences may be drawn under s 34 (as amended) see Code C: Code of Practice for the Detention, Treatment and Questioning of Persons by Police Officers para 10.5. Where the defendant refuses to leave his cell or enter the interview room, he may then be questioned under caution in his cell; but no inferences may properly be drawn under the Criminal Justice and Public Order Act 1994 s 34 (as amended) if he is not questioned at all: R v Johnson [2004] EWCA Crim 2520, [2005] All ER (D) 245 (Jan).

2 Where the defendant declines to answer questions in interview, but does nevertheless mention or disclose the fact in question by other means (eg in a prepared statement), this may prevent any inference from being drawn under the Criminal Justice and Public Order Act 1994 s 34 (as amended): R v Ali [2001] EWCA Crim 863, [2001] All ER (D) 16 (Apr); R v Knight [2003] EWCA Crim 1977, [2004] 1 WLR 340, [2003] Crim LR 799. Where the defendant produced a prepared statement in a police interview but refused to answer police questions, the judge should compare the statement with the evidence that the defendant has called or given at trial to see if there is any fact relied upon that he did not mention in his prepared statement. A specific direction is required in respect of any such fact from which the jury may be entitled to draw an inference against the defendant: R v Turner [2003] EWCA Crim 3108, [2004] 1 All ER 1025, [2004] 1 Cr App Rep 305.

Where the defendant merely speculates or offers a theory at trial as to a possible explanation for admitted facts, his failure to do so when first questioned cannot be the basis for the drawing of any inference under the Criminal Justice and Public Order Act 1994 s 34 (as amended): R v Nickolson [1999] Crim LR 61, CA; considered in R v Webber [2004] UKHL 01 at [22], [2004] 1 All ER 770 at [22], [2004] 1 Cr App Rep 513 at [22] per Lord Bingham of Cornhill.

3 Where a defendant calls no evidence, there will not ordinarily be any scope for the drawing of inferences under this principle (R v Bowers (1998) 163 JP 33, [1998] Crim LR 817, CA; R v Moshaid [1998] Crim LR 420, CA) but a defendant may 'rely' on a fact if that fact is suggested by his advocate and specifically and positively put in cross-examination to witnesses for the prosecution, even if those witnesses deny it and no positive evidence of it is called by the defence: R v Webber [2004] UKHL 01, [2004] 1 All ER 770, [2004] 1 Cr App Rep 513. If, however, the truth of the fact in question is not in dispute, it will not be appropriate for any inferences to be drawn from a defendant's initial failure to mention it: R v Webber supra.

If the prosecution accepts that a defendant has not relied on any facts not mentioned at the time of questioning, the judge must ordinarily direct the jury that no adverse inferences can be drawn from the defendant's silence when questioned by the police (R v McGarry [1998] 3 All ER 805, [1999] 1 WLR 1500, CA), but it may be sensible for the judge to raise with counsel whether such a direction is desirable or necessary (R v Thomas (Scott) [2002] EWCA Crim 1308; R v Brizzalari [2004] EWCA Crim 310, [2004] All ER (D) 325 (Feb)).

4 For the meaning of 'officially informed' see note 1 supra.

5 As to the meaning of 'in the circumstances' see R v Argent [1997] 2 Cr App Rep 27, [1997] Crim LR 346, CA; R v Gill [2001] 1 Cr App Rep 160, [2000] Crim LR 922, [2000] All ER (D) 1036, CA. What the defendant may reasonably be expected to mention must depend, in part at least, on what the police have at that stage disclosed to him. He cannot for example be expected to mention an alibi unless he has been told when (and perhaps where) the offence is supposed to have been committed. See also R v Goodsir [2006] EWCA Crim 852, [2006] All ER (D) 326 (Mar) (adverse inference could be drawn from defendant's silence when charged with dangerous driving, even though he was not questioned directly regarding his driving).

6 Criminal Justice and Public Order Act 1994 s 34(1). Juries may more readily understand an invitation to draw 'conclusions' rather than inferences: see Judicial Studies Board, Specimen Direction No 40. The most likely inference or conclusion may be that the fact in question is a later fabrication, but other inferences may sometimes be possible, depending on the circumstances: R v Beckles, R v Montague [1999] Crim LR 148, CA; R v Milford [2000] EWCA Crim 84, [2001] Crim LR 330; R v Daniel [1998] 2 Cr App Rep 373, [1998] Crim LR 818, CA. Another equally damaging inference might be that the defendant was unwilling to disclose eg his alibi defence until he had briefed or persuaded the necessary witnesses: cf R v Beckles, R v Montague supra.

Where it is open to a court or jury to draw such an inference, it does not follow that the court or jury must draw it. On the contrary, the jury must be directed not to do so unless satisfied that the explanation for the defendant's failure was that he then had no innocent explanation to offer at the time in relation to this aspect of the case: Condron v United Kingdom (2000) 31 EHRR 1, [2000] Crim LR 679, ECtHR.

Where it appears that the defendant was advised by his lawyer not to answer questions or comment at his interview, it may be harder for a court or jury to know what inferences, if any, may properly be drawn. See the text and notes 12-13 infra.

Juries should not be invited to draw inferences on the basis of circular logic (eg where 'the question whether the fact not revealed in the interview was or might have been true was the issue in the case, the resolution of which would determine the verdict': R v Mountford [1999] Crim LR 575, CA, per Henry LJ) but such cases will rarely arise (R v Chenia [2002] EWCA Crim 2345, [2004] 1 All ER 543, [2003] 2 Cr App Rep 83) and it has been doubted whether R v Mountford supra was itself such a case (see R v Webber [2004] UKHL 01 at [26], [2004] 1 All ER 770 at [26], [2004] 1 Cr App Rep 513 at [26] per Lord Bingham of Cornhill).

The mischief at which the Criminal Justice and Public Order Act 1994 s 34 (as amended) is primarily directed is the positive defence following a 'no comment' interview and/or the 'ambush' defence. Whilst s 34 (as amended) has a wider potential application than this, the Court of Appeal has counselled against the further complicating of trials and summings-up by invoking this provision unless the merits of the individual case require that that should be done: R v Brizzalari [2004] EWCA Crim 310 at [57], [2004] All ER (D) 325 (Feb) at [57] per Hedley LJ, giving the judgment of the court.

7 Criminal Justice and Public Order Act 1994 s 34(2)(b) (amended in relation to cases sent for trial under the Crime and Disorder Act 1998 ss 51, 51A(3)(d) (as added) as from 9 May 2005 and as from a day to be appointed for other purposes, by the Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 41, Sch 3 Pt 2 para 64(1), (2)(b)). Such an application is made under the Crime and Disorder Act 1998 s 52(6), Sch 3 para 2 (as amended): see PARA 1138 ante. A judge may not refuse such an application solely on an inference drawn from such a failure as is mentioned in the Criminal Justice and Public Order Act 1994 s 34(2) (as amended): s 38(4).

Until a day to be appointed, inferences may also be drawn by a magistrates' court inquiring into the offence as examining justices: s 34(2)(a) (substituted by the Criminal Procedure and Investigations Act 1996 s 44(3), (7); prospectively repealed by the Criminal Justice Act 2003 ss 41, 332, Sch 3 Pt 2 para 64(1), (2)(a), Sch 37 Pt 4). At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed.

8 Criminal Justice and Public Order Act 1994 s 34(2)(c). See note 9 infra.

9 Ibid s 34(2)(d). A reference to an offence charged includes a reference to any other offence of which the defendant could lawfully be convicted on that charge: s 38(2). However, a person may not have the proceedings against him transferred to the Crown Court for trial, have a case to answer or be convicted of an offence solely on an inference drawn from such a failure or refusal as is mentioned in s 34(2) (as amended): s 38(3). Indeed, the balance of authority on s 34 (as amended) suggests that a jury should be directed not to draw any inferences against a defendant unless there is a case for him to answer independently of any such inference: see R v Milford [2000] EWCA Crim 84, [2001] Crim LR 330; Condon v United Kingdom (2000) 8 BHRC 290, 31 EHRR 1, ECtHR; R v Gill [2001] 1 Cr App Rep 160, [2000] Crim LR 922, [2000] All ER (D) 1036, CA; R v Francom [2001] 1 Cr App Rep 237, [2000] All ER (D) 1131, CA; R v Bromfield [2002] EWCA Crim 195, [2002] All ER (D) 118 (Feb); R v Chenia [2002] EWCA Crim 2345, [2004] 1 All ER 543, [2003] 2 Cr App Rep 83; R v Petkar [2003] EWCA Crim 2668, [2004] 1 Cr App Rep 270, [2003] All ER (D) 278 (Oct).

10 'Authorised place of detention' means a police station or any other place prescribed for the purposes of the Criminal Justice and Public Order Act 1994 s 34(2A) (as added) by order made by the Secretary of State; and the power to make such an order is exercisable by statutory instrument, subject to annulment in pursuance of a resolution of either House of Parliament: s 38(2A) (added by the Youth Justice and Criminal Evidence Act 1999 s 58). At the date at which this volume states the law no place had been prescribed for these purposes.

14 Privilege is not necessarily waived where the defendant explains his failure to disclose in interview facts now relied upon in his defence by stating that he was advised by his solicitor not to answer police questions (R v Robinson [2003] EWCA Crim 2219, [2003] All ER (D) 479 (Jul)) but this in itself is unlikely to prevent inferences being drawn against him under the Criminal Justice and Public Order Act 1994 s 34 (as amended). If, however, the reasons for this advice are revealed, this may be construed as a waiver of privilege and may enable the prosecution to cross-examine the defendant or his solicitor concerning discussions between them: R v Roble [1997] Crim LR 449, CA. Evidence given at a trial within a trial may involve waiver of privilege at the trial proper: R v Bowden [1999] 4 All ER 43, [1999] 2 Cr App Rep 176, CA; Condon v United Kingdom (2000) 8 BHRC 290, 31 EHRR 1, ECtHR; R v Loizou [2006] EWCA Crim 1719.

EVIDENCE/(19) INFERENCES FROM A DEFENDANT'S SILENCE OR NON-DISCLOSURE/1553.
Defendant's failure or refusal to account for objects, substances or marks.

1553. Defendant's failure or refusal to account for objects, substances or marks.

Where: (1) a person is arrested by a constable<sup>1</sup> and there is: (a) on his person, (b) in or on his clothing or footwear, (c) otherwise in his possession, or (d) in any place in which he is at the time of his arrest<sup>2</sup>, any object, substance or mark, or there is any mark on any such object<sup>3</sup>; (2) that or another constable investigating the case reasonably believes that the presence of the object, substance or mark may be attributable to the participation of the person arrested in the commission of an offence specified by the constable<sup>4</sup>; (3) the constable informs the person arrested that he so believes, and requests him to account for the presence of the object, substance or mark<sup>5</sup>; and (4) the person fails or refuses to do so<sup>6</sup>, then if, in any proceedings against the person for the offence so specified, evidence of those matters is given, such inferences as appear proper<sup>7</sup> may be drawn from the failure or refusal<sup>8</sup>.

Such inferences may be drawn:

- 2263 (i) by a judge, in deciding whether to grant an application to dismiss charges against the defendant<sup>9</sup>;
- 2264 (ii) by a court, in determining whether there is a case to answer<sup>10</sup>;
- 2265 (iii) by a court or jury, in determining whether the defendant is guilty of the offence charged<sup>11</sup>.

Where the defendant was at an authorised place of detention at the time of the failure or refusal, no such inference may be drawn unless the defendant had been allowed an opportunity to consult a solicitor prior to being questioned, charged or informed<sup>12</sup>.

No such inference may be drawn unless the defendant was told in ordinary language by the constable when making the request to account for the presence of the object, substance or mark what the effect of those provisions would be if he failed or refused to comply with the request<sup>13</sup>. However, they do not preclude the drawing of any inference from a failure or refusal of the defendant to account for the presence of an object, substance or mark or from the condition of clothing or footwear which could otherwise<sup>14</sup> properly be drawn<sup>15</sup>.

Nothing in these provisions prejudices the operation of a provision of any enactment which provides (in whatever words) that any answer or evidence given by a person in specified circumstances is not admissible in evidence against him or some other person in any proceedings or class of proceedings<sup>16</sup> or prejudices any power of a court, in any proceedings, to exclude evidence (whether by preventing questions being put or otherwise) at its discretion<sup>17</sup>.

These rules apply with some modifications to proceedings before courts-martial or other service courts<sup>18</sup>.

1 As to arrest and police powers of arrest see PARA 908 et seq ante.

2 'Place' includes any building or part of a building, any vehicle, vessel, aircraft or hovercraft and any other place whatsoever: Criminal Justice and Public Order Act 1994 s 38(1). The inferences that may be drawn on the basis of this rule (ie under s 36 (as amended)) are not applicable to cases in which objects, marks etc are found otherwise than in the circumstances or places specified (eg where the defendant's knife is found at the scene of the crime, but the defendant is arrested elsewhere).

3 Ibid s 36(1)(a). Inferences may be drawn from the condition of clothing or footwear in the same way as from a substance or mark thereon: see s 36(3).

4 Ibid s 36(1)(b). This does not mean that the constable must specify the precise terms of the offence, by specific reference to statutory provisions. Parliament did not intend anything so elaborate: R v Compton [2002] EWCA Crim 2835, [2002] All ER (D) 149 (Dec).

5 Criminal Justice and Public Order Act 1994 s 36(1)(c). A suitably designated investigating officer may also exercise this power: see the Police Reform Act 2002 s 38(6), Sch 4 para 23; and POLICE vol 36(1) (2007 Reissue) PARA 529.

6 Criminal Justice and Public Order Act 1994 s 36(1)(d).

7 It may be easier for a jury to understand an invitation to draw 'conclusions' rather than inferences in this context: see Judicial Studies Board, Specimen Direction No 41.

8 Criminal Justice and Public Order Act 1994 s 36(1). A jury must be told that it can only hold against the defendant a failure to give an explanation if sure that he had no acceptable explanation to offer: R v Compton [2002] EWCA Crim 2835, [2002] All ER (D) 149 (Dec). Where the defendant later does put forward an explanation and relies on this at trial, inferences may also be drawn under the Criminal Justice and Public Order Act 1994 s 34 (as amended) (see PARA 1552 ante).

In practice, any inferences drawn under s 36 (as amended) from a defendant's failure to account for objects, substances or marks will often add little to inferences that may be drawn at common law from the discovery of the objects, substances or marks themselves (and which may be drawn even in circumstances to which s 36 (as amended) has no application, or in cases where the requirements of s 36 (as amended) are not satisfied). Thus, at common law inferences may properly be drawn from the fact that the defendant was found in possession of recently stolen property or of large sums of bank notes contaminated by abnormal traces of cocaine, even if for some reason no statutory inferences may be drawn from his failure to account for such matters under the Criminal Justice and Public Order Act 1994 s 36 (as amended). In appropriate cases, it may be permissible for a court or jury to convict a defendant wholly on the basis of such evidence. The main value of s 36 (as amended) to a prosecutor is likely to be in a case where the objects, substances or marks found are not obviously incriminating, but may appear so in light of the defendant's failure or refusal to account for them when required to do so.

9 Ibid s 36(2)(b) (amended in relation to cases sent for trial under the Crime and Disorder Act 1998 ss 51, 51A(3)(d) (as added) as from 9 May 2005 and, for other purposes amended by the Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 41, Sch 3 Pt 2 para 64(1), (3)(b) as from a day to be appointed). Such an application is made under the Crime and Disorder Act 1998 s 52(6), Sch 3 para 2 (as amended): see PARA 1138 ante. A judge may not refuse such an application solely on an inference drawn from such a failure as is mentioned in the Criminal Justice and Public Order Act 1994 s 36(2) (as amended): s 38(4).

Until a day to be appointed, inferences may also be drawn by a magistrates' court inquiring into the offence as examining justices: s 36(2)(a) (substituted by the Criminal Procedure and Investigations Act 1996 s 44(3), (7); prospectively repealed by the Criminal Justice Act 2003 ss 41, 332, Sch 3 Pt 2 para 64(1), (2)(a), Sch 37 Pt 4). At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed.

10 Criminal Justice and Public Order Act 1994 s 36(2)(c). See note 11 infra.

11 Ibid s 36(2)(d). A reference to an offence charged includes a reference to any other offence of which the defendant could lawfully be convicted on that charge: s 38(2).

A person may not have the proceedings against him transferred to the Crown Court for trial, have a case to answer or be convicted of an offence solely on an inference drawn from such a failure or refusal as is mentioned in s 36(2) (as amended): s 38(3). Indeed, the balance of authority suggests that a jury should be directed not to draw any inferences against a defendant on the basis of any inferences under ss 34-37 (as amended) unless there is a case for him to answer independently of any such inference: see the cases cited at para 1552 note 9 ante. In cases falling within s 36 (as amended) or s 37 (as amended), however, it will generally be possible for inferences (including direct inferences of guilt) to be drawn from the original facts for which the defendant has failed to account. See note 8 supra.

12 See ibid s 36(4A) (added by the Youth Justice and Criminal Evidence Act 1999 s 58(1), (3)). See Murray v United Kingdom (1996) 22 EHRR 29, ECtHR; and Code C: Code of Practice for the Detention, Treatment and Questioning of Persons by Police Officers Annex C (see PARA 908 et seq ante). 'Authorised place of detention' means a police station or any other place prescribed for the purposes of the Criminal Justice and Public Order Act 1994 s 36(4A) (as added) by order made by the Secretary of State: s 38(2A) (added by the Youth Justice and Criminal Evidence Act 1999 s 58(1), (5)). At the date at which this volume states the law no place had been prescribed for these purposes.

Where it would be wrong for any adverse inference to be drawn from a defendant's failure or refusal, it may well be sensible for the judge to raise with counsel whether a positive direction not to draw any adverse inference is desirable or necessary (cf R v Thomas (Scott) [2002] EWCA Crim 1308; R v Brizzalari [2004] EWCA Crim 310, [2004] All ER (D) 325 (Feb)).

Where: (1) a person arrested by a constable<sup>1</sup> was found by him at a place<sup>2</sup> at or about the time the offence for which he was arrested is alleged to have been committed<sup>3</sup>; (2) that or another constable investigating the offence reasonably believes that the presence of the person at that place and at that time may be attributable to his participation in the commission of the offence<sup>4</sup>; (3) the constable informs the person that he so believes, and requests him to account for that presence<sup>5</sup>; and (4) the person fails or refuses to do so<sup>6</sup>, then if, in any proceedings against the person for the offence, evidence of those matters is given, such inferences<sup>7</sup> as appear proper may be drawn from the failure or refusal<sup>8</sup>.

Such inferences may be drawn:

NOTE 18--SI 1997/16 replaced: Criminal Justice and Public Order Act 1994 (Application to the Armed Forces) Order 2009, SI 2009/990.

EVIDENCE/(19) INFERENCES FROM A DEFENDANT'S SILENCE OR NON-DISCLOSURE/1555.

Failure of defendant to testify at trial.

1555. Failure of defendant to testify at trial.

At the trial of any person for an offence the defendant may be called as a witness only on his own application<sup>1</sup>, but unless: (1) his guilt is not in issue<sup>2</sup>; or (2) it appears to the court that his physical or mental condition makes it undesirable for him to give evidence<sup>3</sup>, if he fails to testify or, having been sworn, without good cause refuses to answer any question, the court or jury, in determining whether he is guilty of the offence charged<sup>4</sup>, may draw such inferences as appear proper from his failure or refusal<sup>5</sup>.

A defendant may not have a case to answer or be convicted of an offence solely on an inference drawn from such a failure or refusal<sup>6</sup>; but where there is a case for the defendant to answer on a charge of causing or allowing the death of a child or vulnerable adult<sup>7</sup>, and the court or jury is permitted, in relation to that offence, to draw such inferences as appear proper from the defendant's failure to give evidence or refusal to answer a question<sup>8</sup>, the court or jury may also draw such inferences in determining whether he is guilty of an offence of murder or manslaughter which is charged in the same proceedings<sup>9</sup> or of any other offence of which he could lawfully be convicted on the charge of murder or manslaughter<sup>10</sup>, even if there would otherwise be no case for him to answer in relation to that offence<sup>11</sup>.

Unless:

- 2269 (a) the defendant's guilt is not in issue or it appears to the court that his physical or mental condition makes it undesirable for him to give evidence; or
- 2270 (b) at the conclusion of the evidence for the prosecution, the defendant's legal representative informs the court that the defendant will give evidence or (where he is unrepresented) the court ascertains from him that he will give evidence<sup>12</sup>, the following procedure must be followed<sup>13</sup>. The court must, at the conclusion of the evidence for the prosecution, satisfy itself (in the case of proceedings on indictment with a jury, in the presence of the jury) that the defendant is aware that the stage has been reached at which evidence can be given for the defence and that he can, if he wishes, give evidence and that, if he chooses not to give evidence, or having been sworn, without good cause refuses to answer any question, it will be permissible for the court or jury to draw such inferences as appear proper from his failure to give evidence or his refusal, without good cause, to answer any question<sup>14</sup>.

These provisions do not render the defendant compellable to give evidence on his own behalf, and he is accordingly not guilty of contempt of court by reason of a failure to do so<sup>15</sup>. For these purposes, a person who, having been sworn, refuses to answer any question must be taken to do so without good cause unless he is entitled to refuse to answer the question by virtue of any enactment, whenever passed or made, or on the ground of privilege, or the court in the exercise of its general discretion excuses him from answering it<sup>16</sup>.

Nothing in these provisions prejudices the operation of a provision of any enactment which provides (in whatever words) that any answer or evidence given by a person in specified circumstances is not admissible in evidence against him or some other person in any proceedings or class of proceedings<sup>17</sup> or prejudices any power of a court, in any proceedings, to exclude evidence (whether by preventing questions being put or otherwise) at its discretion<sup>18</sup>.

These rules apply with some modifications to proceedings before courts-martial or other service courts<sup>19</sup>.

1 Criminal Evidence Act 1898 s 1(1) (amended and renumbered by the Youth Justice and Criminal Evidence Act 1999 s 67(1), (3), Sch 4 para 1, Sch 6). See PARA 1402 ante.

2 Criminal Justice and Public Order Act 1994 s 35(1)(a) (amended by the Crime and Disorder Act 1998 ss 35(a), 120(2), Sch 10).

3 Criminal Justice and Public Order Act 1994 s 35(1)(b) (amended by the Crime and Disorder Act 1998 ss 35(a), 120(2), Sch 10). It is for the judge in a given case to determine (if necessary by conducting a trial within a trial) whether or not it is undesirable for a defendant to give evidence and appellate courts should be slow to interfere: R v Friend [1997] 2 All ER 1011, [1997] 1 WLR 1433, CA.

Where it would be wrong for any adverse inference to be drawn from a defendant's failure, it may well be sensible for the judge to raise with counsel whether a positive direction not to draw any adverse inference is desirable or necessary (cf R v Thomas (Scott) [2002] EWCA Crim 1308; R v Brizzalari [2004] EWCA Crim 310, [2004] All ER (D) 325 (Feb)).

4 A reference to an offence charged includes a reference to any other offence of which the defendant could lawfully be convicted on that charge: Criminal Justice and Public Order Act 1994 s 38(2).

5 Ibid s 35(3). This rule is not confined to exceptional cases and does not affect or interfere with the presumption of innocence: R v Cowan [1996] QB 373, [1995] 4 All ER 939, [1996] 1 Cr App Rep 1, CA; R v Napper [1996] Crim LR 591, (1995) 161 JP 16, CA. Where the defendant has reason to fear cross-examination on collateral issues if he should testify, that is no reason for denying the application of the Criminal Justice and Public Order Act 1994 s 35 (as amended) if he does not: R v Becouarn [2005] UKHL 55, [2005] 4 All ER 673. As to the form of direction that should be given to a jury where it is open to the jury to draw an inference under the Criminal Justice and Public Order Act 1994 s 35 (as amended) see R v Cowan supra; R v Birchall [1999] Crim LR 311, CA; R v Whitehead [2006] EWCA Crim 1486, [2006] All ER (D) 267 (Jun); Judicial Studies Board, Specimen Direction No 39.

If the defendant fails to give evidence at trial following the judge's direction to the jury that he is capable of doing so, the jury, in determining the issue of guilt, is entitled under the Criminal Justice and Public Order Act 1994 s 35(3) to draw such inferences as appear proper from that failure and can take account of medical or other evidence directed to that issue: R v Friend [1997] 2 All ER 1011, [1997] 1 WLR 1433, CA. The defence may invite the jury not to draw any such inference, but there must be evidence to support that invitation. If there is none, submissions by counsel are no substitute. The judge should stop defence counsel, if necessary during his or her final speech, from seeking to give such reasons in the course of a submission: See R v Cowan supra.

Where arraignment was prior to 10 April 1995 (as may still occasionally be the case where re-trials have been ordered) no such inferences may be drawn and the jury must be directed that the defendant's failure to testify 'does nothing to establish his guilt'.

It should be the invariable practice of counsel to record any decision of a defendant not to give evidence, signed by the defendant himself, indicating, clearly, that the decision had been made of his own free will, and that in reaching that decision he has borne in mind advice tendered by counsel: R v Bevan (1993) 98 Cr App Rep 354, 157 JP 1121, CA; R v Chatroodi [2001] EWCA Crim 585, [2001] All ER (D) 259 (Feb); Ebanks v R [2006] UKPC 16, [2006] 1 WLR 1827.

8 Ie in accordance with the Criminal Justice and Public Order Act 1994 s 35(3): see the text to notes 4-5 supra.

9 Domestic Violence, Crime and Victims Act 2004 s 6(2)(a).

10 Ibid s 6(2)(b).

11 Ibid s 6(2). The charge of murder or manslaughter is not to be dismissed under the Crime and Disorder Act 1998 s 52(6), Sch 3 para 2 (see PARA 1138 ante) unless the offence under the Domestic Violence, Crime and Victims Act 2004 s 5 is dismissed: s 6(3). At the defendant's trial the question whether there is a case for the defendant to answer on the charge of murder or manslaughter is not to be considered before the close of all the evidence (or, if at some earlier time he ceases to be charged with the s 5 offence, before that earlier time): s 6(4).

12 Criminal Justice and Public Order Act 1994 s 35(1). 'Legal representative' means an authorised advocate or authorised litigator, as defined by the Courts and Legal Services Act 1990 s 119(1) (see LEGAL PROFESSIONS vol 65 (2008) PARAS 497-498); Criminal Justice and Public Order Act 1994 s 38(1).

13 See ibid s 35(2) (as amended).

14 Ibid s 35(2) (amended by the Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 331, Sch 36 paras 62, 63). As to the precise form of words to be used see the Practice Direction (Criminal Proceedings: Consolidation) [2002] 3 All ER 904, [2002] 2 Cr App Rep 533 at IV.44, CA; and Judicial Studies Board, Specimen Direction No 38. Where the defendant is legally represented, and the court is not informed that the defendant will give evidence, the representative should be asked in front of the jury: 'Have you advised your client that the stage has now been reached at which he may give evidence and, if he chooses not to do so or, having been sworn, without good cause refuses to answer any question, the jury may draw such inferences as appear proper from his failure to do so?' If the representative replies to the judge that the defendant has been so advised, then the case must proceed. If counsel replies that the defendant has not been advised of these consequences then the judge must direct the representative to advise his client of the consequences (ie, that if he chooses not to give evidence, or having been sworn, without good cause refuses to answer any questions, it will be permissible for the jury to draw such inferences as appear proper from his failure to give evidence or his refusal, without good cause, to answer any question) and should adjourn briefly for this purpose before proceeding further.

Where the defendant is not represented the judge must at the conclusion of the evidence for the prosecution and in the presence of the jury say to him: 'You have heard the evidence against you. Now is the time for you to make your defence. You may give evidence on oath, and be cross-examined like any other witness. If you do not give evidence or, having been sworn, without good cause refuse to answer any question the jury may draw such inferences as appear proper. That means they may hold it against you. You may also call any witness or witnesses whom you have arranged to attend court. Afterwards you may also, if you wish, address the jury by arguing your case from the dock. But you cannot at that stage give evidence. Do you now intend to give evidence?'

Where magistrates fail to warn a defendant of the consequences of remaining silent, there is an irregularity in the proceedings, but any subsequent conviction will not be unsafe if no adverse inference was in fact drawn: Radford v Kent County Council (1998) 162 JP 697, DC. See also R v Gough (Stephen) [2001] EWCA Crim 2545, [2002] 2 Cr App Rep 121 (jury could not draw adverse inferences where defendant absconded before warning as to consequences of remaining silent).

15 Criminal Justice and Public Order Act 1994 s 35(4). This does not prevent a defendant from being in contempt if, having been sworn, he refuses without good cause to answer any question. As to the duty of the defendant to answer questions that might require him to incriminate himself in respect of the offence charged see the Criminal Evidence Act 1898 s 1(2) (as amended); and PARA 1477 ante. As to contempt of court by witnesses who refuse to answer lawful questions see CONTEMPT OF COURT vol 9(1) (Reissue) PARA 455.

16 Criminal Justice and Public Order Act 1994 s 35(5). As to privilege see PARA 1474 et seq ante.

17 Ibid s 38(5). This applies to proceedings however described, and whether civil or criminal: s 38(5). The reference to giving evidence is a reference to giving evidence in any manner, whether by furnishing information, making discovery, producing documents or otherwise: s 38(5).

18 Ibid s 38(6).

19 See ibid s 39(1), (2) (amended by the Armed Forces Act 2001 s 38, Sch 7 Pt 1); and the Criminal Justice and Public Order Act 1994 (Application to the Armed Forces) Order 1997, SI 1997/16 (amended by SI 2006/2326).

1555 Failure of defendant to testify at trial

NOTES 3, 5--Difficulties that defendant has in giving evidence are matters to be taken into account by judge in assessing reliability of his evidence: R v Tabbakh [2009] EWCA Crim 464, (2009) 173 JP 201.

NOTE 12--'Legal representative' now means a person who, for the purposes of the Legal Services Act 2007, is an authorised person in relation to an activity which constitutes the exercise of a right of audience or the conduct of litigation (within the meaning of that Act) (see LEGAL PROFESSIONS vol 65 (2008) PARA 512): Criminal Justice and Public Order Act 1994 s 38(1) (definition amended by Legal Services Act 2007 Sch 21 para 116).

1556. Failure to call spouse or other possible witnesses.

The failure of the spouse or civil partner of a defendant to give evidence in the proceedings must not be made the subject of any comment by the prosecution<sup>1</sup>, but breach of the prohibition will not necessarily lead to the quashing of a conviction<sup>2</sup>.

EVIDENCE/(19) INFERENCES FROM A DEFENDANT'S SILENCE OR NON-DISCLOSURE/1557. Direction as to defendant's failures.

1557. Direction as to defendant's failures.

The judge must in his summing up include where appropriate directions as to what inferences, if any, may be drawn by the jury in respect of certain failures or defaults by the defendant, namely: (1) total or partial failure to testify in his defence<sup>1</sup>; (2) failure to mention, when questioned under caution by a constable or charged, facts later relied upon in his defence<sup>2</sup>; (3) failure or refusal, when questioned under caution following arrest by a constable, to account for objects, substances or marks (including marks on objects) found on him or on his clothing or footwear or otherwise in his possession or at any place where he was at the time of his arrest<sup>3</sup>; (4) failure or refusal, when found at a place at or about the time of the alleged offence, arrested by a constable and questioned under caution in respect of that offence, to account for his presence at that place<sup>4</sup>; (5) failure to call particular witnesses in support of the defence<sup>5</sup>; and (6) failure to comply with statutory pre-trial disclosure requirements, or to put forward a defence consistent with the one disclosed<sup>6</sup>. Guidance as to the form of such directions is provided in Specimen Directions issued by the Judicial Studies Board<sup>7</sup>.

But the s 34 direction has to be treated with more care and more literally than many of the other directions because it has been drawn up specifically to accommodate s 34 to this country's obligations in international law and under the Human Rights Act 1998 in regard to the European Convention on Human Rights'. SENTENCE/(8) YOUNG OFFENDERS/(i) In general/1702. Local provision of youth justice services.

(8) YOUNG OFFENDERS

(i) In general

UPDATE

1701 In general

Material relating to this paragraph has been revised and published under the title SENTENCING AND DISPOSITION OF OFFENDERS vol 92 (2010).

1702. Local provision of youth justice services.

It is the duty of each local authority<sup>1</sup>, acting in co-operation with the persons and bodies mentioned below, to secure that, to such extent as is appropriate for its area, all youth justice services are available there<sup>2</sup>. It is the duty of every chief officer of police<sup>3</sup> or police authority<sup>4</sup> any part of whose police area<sup>5</sup> lies within the local authority's area<sup>6</sup>, and every local probation board, strategic health authority, health authority or primary care trust any part of whose area lies within that area<sup>7</sup>, to co-operate in the discharge by the local authority of this duty<sup>8</sup>.

The local authority and every such person or body has power to make payments towards expenditure incurred in the provision of youth justice services either by making the payments directly<sup>9</sup> or by contributing to a fund, established and maintained by the local authority, out of which the payments may be made<sup>10</sup>.

- 2271 (1) the provision of persons to act as appropriate adults to safeguard the interests of children and young persons<sup>11</sup> detained or questioned by police officers<sup>12</sup>;
- 2272 (2) the assessment of children and young persons, and the provision of rehabilitation programmes for those who have been warned<sup>13</sup>;
- 2273 (3) the provision of support for children and young persons remanded or committed on bail while awaiting trial or sentence<sup>14</sup>;
- 2274 (4) the placement in local authority accommodation of children and young persons remanded or committed to such accommodation<sup>15</sup>;
- 2275 (5) the provision of reports or other information required by courts in criminal proceedings against children and young persons<sup>16</sup>;
- 2276 (6) the performance by youth offending teams<sup>17</sup> and members of such teams of specified functions<sup>18</sup>;
- 2277 (7) the provision of persons to act as responsible officers in relation to individual support orders<sup>19</sup>, parenting orders<sup>20</sup>, child safety orders<sup>21</sup>, reparation orders<sup>22</sup> and action plan orders<sup>23</sup>;
- 2278 (8) the supervision of young persons sentenced to a community order<sup>24</sup>;
- 2279 (9) the supervision of children and young persons sentenced to a detention and training order<sup>25</sup> or a supervision order<sup>26</sup>;
- 2280 (10) the post-release supervision of children and young persons<sup>27</sup>;

- 2281 (11) the performance of functions<sup>28</sup> by such persons as may be authorised<sup>29</sup> by the Secretary of State<sup>30</sup>; and 2282 (12) the implementation of referral orders<sup>31</sup>.

The Secretary of State may by order amend the definition of 'youth justice services' by extending, restricting or otherwise altering it<sup>32</sup>.

In carrying out any of its duties under these provisions, a local authority, a police authority, a local probation board, a strategic health authority, a health authority or a primary care trust must act in accordance with any guidance given by the Secretary of State<sup>33</sup>.

1 'Local authority', in relation to England, means a county council, a district council whose district does not form part of an area that has a county council, a London borough council or the Common Council of the City of London; and, in relation to Wales, means a county council or a county borough council: Crime and Disorder Act 1998 s 42(1). For these purposes, the Isles of Scilly form part of the county of Cornwall, and the Inner Temple and the Middle Temple form part of the City of London: s 42(2). Material relating to this paragraph has been revised and published under the title SENTENCING AND DISPOSITION OF OFFENDERS vol 92 (2010) PARA 316.

1818. Other disqualifications consequent on conviction.

On conviction for treason a person becomes, and (until he has suffered punishment<sup>1</sup> or received a free pardon from Her Majesty<sup>2</sup>) continues to be, incapable of holding any military, air force<sup>3</sup> or naval office or any civil office under the Crown or other public employment; or of being elected, sitting or voting as a member of either House of Parliament; or of exercising any right of suffrage<sup>4</sup>.

If any person at the time of his conviction for treason holds any military, air force<sup>1</sup> or naval office or any civil office under the Crown or other public employment or any place, office or emolument in any university, college or other corporation or is entitled to any pension or superannuation allowance payable by the public or out of any public fund, the office, employment or place becomes vacant and the pension, superannuation allowance or emolument ceases to be payable<sup>5</sup> unless he receives a free pardon from Her Majesty within two months after conviction or before the office, employment or place is filled<sup>6</sup>. Conviction of the sale or purchase of a public office renders a person permanently disqualified from holding that office; and on conviction of the common law offence of neglect of duty a public officer becomes disqualified from holding the office in question<sup>7</sup>.

A person is disqualified from being or being elected a member of a local authority or an elected mayor if, within five years before the day of his election or since his election, he has been convicted<sup>8</sup> of any offence and has had passed on him a sentence of imprisonment (suspended or not) for a period of not less than three months without the option of a fine<sup>9</sup>. While detained in a penal institution in pursuance of his sentence or unlawfully at large when he would otherwise be so detained, a convicted person is legally incapable of voting at any parliamentary or local government election<sup>10</sup>.

SENTENCE/(12) THE NATIONAL PROBATION SERVICE/1836. Transfer schemes.

(12) THE NATIONAL PROBATION SERVICE

1836. Transfer schemes.

The Secretary of State may by order make a scheme for the transfer<sup>1</sup>:

- 2300 (1) to the Secretary of State of any property<sup>2</sup> belonging to a probation committee, a local authority, the Official Solicitor or the Receiver for the Metropolitan Police District (the 'old employer')<sup>3</sup>;
- 2301 (2) to the Secretary of State of any liabilities to which the old employer is subject<sup>4</sup>;
- 2302 (3) of property or liabilities to a local probation board<sup>5</sup> after an initial transfer to the Secretary of State under head (1) or head (2) above<sup>6</sup>.

The Secretary of State may by order make a scheme<sup>7</sup> for the transfer to a local probation board of any eligible employee<sup>8</sup>. 'Eligible employee' means: (a) in relation to a local authority or the Official Solicitor or the Receiver for the Metropolitan Police district, a person who is employed under a contract of employment with the authority, the Official Solicitor or the Receiver for the Metropolitan Police district on work which would have been continued but for provisions<sup>9</sup> of the Criminal Justice and Court Services Act 2000; (b) in relation to a probation committee, a person other than a chief probation officer who is employed under a contract of employment with the committee<sup>10</sup>. A scheme may also provide for any person who is employed as chief probation officer under a contract of employment with a probation committee to be appointed as chief officer of a local probation board<sup>11</sup>. A scheme may apply to all or any description of eligible employees or persons so employed, or to any individual eligible employees or person so employed<sup>12</sup>.

The contract of employment of an employee transferred under a scheme<sup>13</sup> is not terminated by the transfer and has effect from the date of the transfer<sup>14</sup> as if originally made between the employee and the local probation board<sup>15</sup>. Where an employee is transferred under a scheme all the rights, powers, duties and liabilities of the old employer under or in connection with the contract of employment are transferred to the local probation board on the date of transfer and anything done before that date by or in relation to the old employer in respect of that contract or the employee is to be treated from that date as having been done by or in relation to the local probation board<sup>16</sup>. If the employee informs the old employer or the local probation board that he objects to the transfer, the above provisions<sup>17</sup> do not transfer his contract of employment, or the rights, powers duties and liabilities under or in connection with it, and the contract is terminated immediately before the date of transfer<sup>18</sup>. An employee is not to be treated for the purposes of the Employment Rights Act 1996<sup>19</sup> as having been dismissed by the old employer by reason of the transfer of his contract of employment under a scheme or the termination of his contract following such an objection<sup>20</sup>. Where an employee's contract of employment with a probation committee is not transferred under a scheme, it is terminated immediately before the date on which the committee ceases to exist and the employee is to be treated for the purposes of the Employment Rights Act 1996 as having been dismissed by the committee<sup>21</sup>. No right of an employee to terminate his contract of employment arises by reason only that the identity of his employer changes<sup>22</sup> unless the employee shows that in all the circumstances the change is a significant change and is to his detriment<sup>23</sup>.

Where a scheme<sup>24</sup> provides for a person who is employed as a chief probation officer under a contract of employment with a probation committee to be appointed as chief officer of a local probation board, the officer's period of employment with the committee counts as a period of employment in his Crown employment<sup>25</sup> and the appointment does not break the continuity of the employment<sup>26</sup>. The terms and conditions of the officer's contract of employment<sup>27</sup> have effect on and after his appointment as if they were terms and conditions of his Crown employment<sup>28</sup>. Where an officer is so transferred<sup>29</sup>, all the rights, powers, duties and liabilities of the probation committee under or in connection with the contract of employment are transferred to the local probation board on the date of transfer, and anything done before that date by or in relation to the probation committee in respect of that contract or the officer is to be treated from that date as having been done by or in relation to the local probation board<sup>30</sup>. The officer is not to be treated for the purposes of the Employment Rights Act 1996 as having been dismissed by the probation committee by reason of his appointment<sup>31</sup>. If the officer informs the probation committee or the Secretary of State that he objects to the appointment, the above provisions<sup>32</sup> do not apply<sup>33</sup>. Where the officer is not appointed as chief officer of the local probation board, whether because he objects to the appointment or for any other reason, his contract of employment is terminated immediately before the date on which the committee ceases to exist and he is to be treated for the purposes of the Employment Rights Act 1996 as having been dismissed by the committee<sup>34</sup>.

Where, by reason of the implementation or termination of any arrangements<sup>35</sup> any functions exercisable by any person (the 'former employer') become exercisable by another person (whether on behalf, or instead, of the former employer), the Secretary of State may by order<sup>36</sup> make a scheme for the transfer to the other person (the 'transferee') of any person (an 'employee') employed under a contract of employment with the transferor on work which would have continued but for the implementation or termination of the arrangements<sup>37</sup>. Such a scheme may apply to all or any description of employees, or to any individual employee; and may be made only if any directions about consultation given by the Secretary of State have been complied with in relation to each of the employees to be transferred in pursuance of the scheme<sup>38</sup>.

1 As to the contents of such schemes see the Criminal Justice and Court Services Act 2000 s 19, Sch 3 (amended by the Transfer of Functions (Children, Young Persons and Families) Order 2003, SI 2003/3191, arts 3(d), 6, Schedule para 4(1), (2)). As to the power of the Secretary of State to make orders under the Criminal Justice and Court Services Act 2000 see PARA 1833 note 2 ante. No instrument made or executed under or in pursuance of the scheme for the purposes of such a transfer or grant is to be treated as duly stamped unless: (1) it is stamped with the duty to which it would, but for s 19 (as amended) (see the text and notes 2-7 infra) be liable; or (2) it has, in accordance with the provisions of the Stamp Act 1891 s 12 (as substituted) (see STAMP DUTIES AND STAMP DUTY RESERVE TAX vol 44(1) (Reissue) PARA 1111), been stamped with a particular stamp denoting that it is not chargeable with any duty or that it has been duly stamped: Criminal Justice and Court Services Act 2000 s 19(3).

The Criminal Justice and Court Services Act 2000 s 21 (except s 21(5) and the definitions of 'scheme' and 'transferee') (see the text and notes 13-21 supra) applies to a scheme made by virtue of s 23 (as amended) as it applies to a scheme made by virtue of s 20 (as amended) (see the text and notes 7-12 supra), and as if 'old employer' and 'transferee' had the same meanings as in s 23 (as amended): see s 23(5).

(1) APPEAL BY DEFENDANT TO THE COURT OF APPEAL FOLLOWING TRIAL ON INDICTMENT

(i) Right to Appeal

A. APPEAL AGAINST CONVICTION, VERDICT OR FINDING

1837. Appeal on conviction on indictment.

The appeal<sup>4</sup> lies only: (1) with the leave of the Court of Appeal<sup>5</sup>; or (2) if the judge of the court of trial<sup>6</sup> grants a certificate<sup>7</sup> that the case is fit for appeal<sup>8</sup>.

Where a person is convicted before the Crown Court of a scheduled offence<sup>9</sup>, it is not open to him to appeal to the Court of Appeal against the conviction on the ground that the decision of the court which sent him to the Crown Court<sup>10</sup> for trial as to the value involved was mistaken<sup>11</sup>.

There is no right of appeal from a decision dismissing a criminal charge unless clearly given by statute<sup>12</sup>. The extension of a custody time limit<sup>13</sup> may not be called into question in any appeal against conviction<sup>14</sup>.

1 All proceedings on indictment in England and Wales are brought in the Crown Court: see PARA 1232 ante.

Appeal lies in respect of each conviction on each count of an indictment. Grounds of appeal must be submitted in respect of each conviction challenged: see CrimPR 68.3(2), (5). Notice of appeal or of an application for leave to appeal must be given by completing the prescribed form and serving it on a Crown Court officer: see CrimPR 68.3(1). The prescribed form is set out in Practice Direction (Criminal Proceedings: Consolidation) [2002] 3 All ER 904, [2002] 2 Cr App Rep 533, Annex D, CA; Amendment to the Consolidated Practice Direction (Forms for use in criminal proceedings) [2005] 2 All ER 916, [2005] 1 WLR 1479, Annex D, CA; Amendment to the Consolidated Criminal Practice Direction (Forms for use in criminal proceedings) [2006] 3 All ER 484, Annex D, CA.

2 The jurisdiction of the Court of Appeal is exercised by the criminal division of that Court: Supreme Court Act 1981 s 53(2)(a). As from a day to be appointed the Supreme Court Act 1981 is renamed the Senior Courts Act 1981: see the Constitutional Reform Act 2005 s 59(5), Sch 11 para 1. At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed. The jurisdiction of the former Court of Criminal Appeal was transferred to the criminal division of the Court of Appeal: see the Criminal Appeal Act 1966 s 1(2)(b)(ii) (repealed). It is considered that the practice of the Court of Criminal Appeal as developed and reported is applicable, with exceptions, to the Court of Appeal as constituted since 1966 and the cases decided by the former are therefore considered still to be relevant.

As to the composition, jurisdiction and sittings of the Criminal Division of the Court of Appeal see COURTS vol 10 (Reissue) PARAS 636, 640. Rule-making power is conferred on the Criminal Procedure Rule Committee: see the Courts Act 2003 s 69(2); and COURTS.

References in the Criminal Appeal Act 1968 Pts I, II (ss 1-43) (as amended) and s 44A (as added: see PARA 1977 post), s 51 (as amended) are to be construed as references to the criminal division of the Court of Appeal: Criminal Appeal Act 1968 s 45(1) (substituted by the Supreme Court Act 1981 s 152(1), Sch 5; and amended by the Criminal Appeal Act 1995 s 29(1), Sch 2 para 4(1), (5)(a); Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 331, Sch 36 paras 86, 89(a)).

3 Criminal Appeal Act 1968 s 1(1) (amended by the Magistrates' Courts Act 1980 s 154(1), Sch 7 para 71(a)). 'Conviction' does not include a finding by a jury in respect of the defendant's fitness to plead: R v Larkins (1911) 6 Cr App Rep 194, CCA. The court will entertain an appeal against conviction on the ground that a hearing of a preliminary issue with regard to fitness to plead was open to an objection of error in law so that the defendant should not have been tried on the indictment: R v Podola [1960] 1 QB 325, 43 Cr App Rep 220, CCA. As to appeal against a finding of unfitness to plead etc see PARA 1839 post; and as to the power of the Court of Appeal to substitute a finding of unfitness to plead etc on an appeal against conviction see PARA 1883 post.

Where leave to appeal is limited to some of the grounds of appeal, the Court of Appeal will not allow the other grounds to be argued without leave: R v Jackson (Stephen Shaun) [1999] 1 All ER 572, CA; R v Bullock [1998] 9 Archbold News 1, CA; R v Cox, R v Thomas [1999] 2 Cr App Rep 6, CA.

The Court of Appeal, being a creature of statute, has no jurisdiction other than that conferred upon it by statute: R v Jefferies [1969] 1 QB 120, 52 Cr App Rep 654, CA. For example, it cannot hear an application for leave to appeal against conviction in a case where it has previously determined such an application or appeal against conviction: R v Pinfold [1988] QB 462, 87 Cr App Rep 15, CA. See also R v Berry (No 2) [1991] 2 All ER 789, 92 Cr App Rep 147, CA (where appeal undertaken on a number of grounds but decided on only one both in the Court of Appeal and House of Lords, there is no jurisdiction to relist it for consideration of the remaining grounds). Save for the jurisdiction conferred by the Criminal Justice Act 1987 s 9(11) (see PARA 1921 post), the Criminal Justice Act 1988 s 159 (as amended) (see PARA 1934 post) and the Criminal Procedure and Investigations Act 1996 s 35(1) (as amended) (see PARA 1922 post), the Court of Appeal has no power to entertain an appeal on an interlocutory matter: R v Collins [1970] 1 QB 710, 54 Cr App Rep 19, CA. There is no jurisdiction to review the exercise of a discretion to discharge a jury and order a re-trial: R v Home Office, ex p Graham [1983] 1 WLR 1281, 78 Cr App Rep 124; and see R v Gorman [1987] 2 All ER 435, 85 Cr App Rep 121, CA.

As to appeals in cases where the convicted person has died see PARA 1977 post.

4 For these purposes, 'appeal' means an appeal under the Criminal Appeal Act 1968 Pt I (ss 1-32) (as amended) (see PARA 1838 et seq post); and 'appellant' has a corresponding meaning and includes a person who has given notice of application for leave to appeal: s 51(1).

5 Ibid s 1(2)(a) (s 1(2) substituted by the Criminal Appeal Act 1995 s 1(1)). Leave may be granted by the Court of Appeal or by a single judge of the court: see the Criminal Appeal Act 1968 s 31(1)(a), (2)(a) (as substituted and amended); and PARA 1854 post. As to the powers of a single judge see PARA 1854 post.

Leave to appeal is granted in respect of the conviction and not in respect of a particular ground put forward by the appellant.

Where leave to appeal has been granted, the Court of Appeal may not give a direction under s 29(1) that time spent in custody is not to be reckoned as part of sentence: see s 29(2)(a); and PARA 1845 post.

6 For these purposes, 'the court of trial', in relation to an appeal, means the court from which the appeal lies; and 'the judge of the court of trial' means, where the Crown Court comprises justices of the peace, the judge presiding: ibid s 51(1) (amended by the Courts Act 1971 s 56(1), Sch 8 para 57(3)).

7 The certificate of the judge of the court of trial under the Criminal Appeal Act 1968 ss 1(2), 12 (see PARA 1838 post), s 15(2) (see PARA 1839 post) that a case is a fit case for appeal must be in the form set out in Practice Direction (Criminal Proceedings: Consolidation) [2002] 3 All ER 904, [2002] 2 Cr App Rep 533, Annex D, CA; Amendment to the Consolidated Practice Direction (Forms for use in criminal proceedings) [2005] 2 All ER 916, [2005] 1 WLR 1479, Annex D, CA; CrimPR 68.2(1).

The certificate must be forwarded forthwith to the Registrar of Criminal Appeals, whether or not the person to whom the certificate relates has applied for a certificate, and a copy forwarded to that person or his legal representative: CrimPR 68.2(2), (3).

A certificate should not be granted lightly; it should not be granted merely because counsel asks for it, but only where the trial judge considers that there are sufficient grounds: R v Langley (1923) 17 Cr App Rep 199, CCA; R v Eyles (1963) 47 Cr App Rep 260, CCA. A trial judge ought only to grant such a certificate that a case is fit for appeal in very limited and exceptional circumstances, as the granting of leave to appeal against conviction ought generally to be exercised by members of the Court of Appeal: R v Bansal [1999] Crim LR 484, CA. There must be a particular and cogent ground of appeal; and a judge should not grant a certificate in regard to conviction on a ground where he considers the chance of a successful appeal is not substantial: Practice Direction (Criminal Proceedings: Consolidation) [2002] 3 All ER 904, [2002] 2 Cr App Rep 533 at IV.50.4, CA. As to the importance of adhering to Pt IV.50.4 see R v Day (1991) Times, 3 October, CA; R v Williams (Paul David) (1991) 156 JP 325, CA; R v Bansal [1991] Crim LR 484, CA.

Where such a certificate has been granted, the Court of Appeal may not give a direction under the Criminal Appeal Act 1968 s 29(1) that time spent in custody is not to be reckoned as part of sentence: see s 29(2)(b) (amended by the Criminal Justice Act 1988 s 170(1), Sch 15 paras 20, 27); and PARA 1845 post. Where such a certificate has been granted, bail pending appeal may be granted by the Crown Court: Supreme Court Act 1981 s 81(1)(f). As to the prospective renaming of the Supreme Court Act 1981 see note 2 supra. The procedure for granting bail pending appeal to the Court of Appeal, Criminal Division is described in the Guide to Proceedings in the Court of Appeal, Criminal Division (revised 1997, amended 2002). See also Practice Direction (Criminal Proceedings: Consolidation) [2002] 3 All ER 904, [2002] 2 Cr App Rep 533 at IV.50.1-IV.50.6, CA.

8 Criminal Appeal Act 1968 s 1(2)(b) (as substituted: see note 5 supra).

9 For these purposes, 'scheduled offence' and 'the value involved' have the same meaning as they have in the Magistrates' Courts Act 1980 s 22 (as amended) (certain offences against property to be tried summarily if value of property or damage is small: see PARA 1114 ante): Criminal Appeal Act 1968 s 1(4) (added by the Magistrates' Courts Act 1980 s 154(1), Sch 7 para 71).

10 The words 'sent him to the court' were substituted for the words 'committed him' by the Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 41, Sch 3 para 44(1), (2), but at the date at which this volume states the law this amendment only has effect in relation to cases sent for trial under the Crime and Disorder Act 1998 s 51 (as substituted) or s 51A(3)(d) (as added) (see PARAS 1132-1133 ante).

11 Criminal Appeal Act 1968 s 1(3) (added by the Magistrates' Courts Act 1980 Sch 7 para 71; amended and prospectively amended: see note 10 supra).

12 Benson v Northern Ireland Road Transport Board [1942] AC 520, [1942] 1 All ER 465, HL. No right of appeal is given to the prosecution against a verdict of acquittal. As to appeals by the prosecution against terminating rulings and evidentiary rulings see PARA 1898 et seq post. As to the powers of the Attorney General to refer to the Court of Appeal a point of law arising on an acquittal on indictment see PARA 1950 post; and as to appeal by a prosecutor from a decision at a preparatory hearing see PARAS 1921-1922 post.

In its jurisdiction in matters relating to trial on indictment the Crown Court is not subject to judicial review by the High Court: see the Supreme Court Act 1981 s 29(3); and PARA 2013 post. As to the prospective renaming of the Supreme Court Act 1981 see note 2 supra. As to whether an order of the Crown Court falls within such jurisdiction see PARA 2013 note 1 post.

13 le under the Prosecution of Offences Act 1985 s 22(3): see PARA 1152 ante.

APPEALS/(1) APPEAL BY DEFENDANT TO THE COURT OF APPEAL FOLLOWING TRIAL ON INDICTMENT/(ii) Effect of Appealing/1844. General rule.

(ii) Effect of Appealing

1844. General rule.

In general, the giving of notice of appeal does not suspend the operation of any sentence or order of the court of trial unless an enactment expressly so provides<sup>1</sup>.

<sup>1</sup> There is no general power of suspension in the Criminal Procedure Rules comparable to that found in the Criminal Appeal Rules 1908, SR & O 1908/227, r 11 (revoked). As to time spent in custody pending appeal see PARA 1845 post; and as to compensation and restitution orders see SENTENCING AND DISPOSITION OF OFFENDERS vol 92 (2010) PARAS 375 et seq, 388 et seq.

Halsbury's Laws of England/CRIMINAL LAW, EVIDENCE AND PROCEDURE (VOLUME 11(1) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1-620; VOLUME 11(2) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 621-1049; VOLUME 11(3) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1050-1557; VOLUME 11(4) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1558-2180)/22.

APPEALS/(1) APPEAL BY DEFENDANT TO THE COURT OF APPEAL FOLLOWING TRIAL ON INDICTMENT/(ii) Effect of Appealing/1845. Time spent in custody pending appeal.

1845. Time spent in custody pending appeal.

Subject to any direction which the Court of Appeal may give to the contrary, the time during which an appellant<sup>1</sup> is in custody pending the determination of his appeal is reckoned as part of the term of any sentence to which he is for the time being subject<sup>2</sup>. However, when an appellant is granted bail<sup>3</sup>, the time during which he is released on bail is to be disregarded in computing the term of any sentence to which he is for the time being subject<sup>4</sup>.

Where the court gives a contrary direction, it must state its reasons for doing so; and it may not give any such direction where:

- 2303 (1) leave to appeal has been granted<sup>5</sup>;
- 2304 (2) a certificate that the case is fit for appeal has been given by the judge of the court of trial<sup>6</sup>; or
- 2305 (3) the case has been referred<sup>7</sup> to the court by the Criminal Cases Review Commission<sup>8</sup>.

Unless the Court of Appeal otherwise directs, the term of any sentence passed by that court<sup>9</sup> in substitution for that passed on an appellant in proceedings below begins to run from the time when it would have begun to run if passed in the proceedings from which the appeal lies<sup>10</sup>.

1 For the meanings of 'appeal' and 'appellant' see PARA 1837 note 4 ante.

2 Criminal Appeal Act 1968 s 29(1). A person becomes an appellant on the day he gives notice of appeal or application for leave to appeal: see s 51(1). Those who contemplate putting in a notice of application for leave to appeal and their legal advisers should bear in mind that the single judge and the court may make such a direction, and should remember that it is useless to appeal without grounds and that grounds should be substantial and particularised; where an application devoid of merit has been refused by the single judge and a direction for loss of time has been made, the full court, on renewal of the application, may direct that additional time be lost if it thinks it right to do so: Practice Direction (Criminal Proceedings: Consolidation) [2002] 3 All ER 904, [2002] 2 Cr App Rep 533 at II.16.1, CA.

The power to give such a direction may be exercised by a single judge: Criminal Appeal Act 1968 s 31(2)(h). See further PARA 1854 post. Where the grounds of the application have been settled and signed by counsel, the single judge may refrain from giving a direction: see R v Howitt (1975) 61 Cr App Rep 327, CA. The fact that the application was made upon the advice of counsel may carry less weight with the full court where the application is renewed after refusal by the single judge: R v Gayle (1986) Times, 28 May, CA. For examples of the exercise of such jurisdiction see R v Westlake (1920) 15 Cr App Rep 100, CCA (court misled by appellant); R v Oswin and Oswin [1966] Crim LR 347, CCA (applications without merit refused by a single judge and renewed, despite warning, to full court); R v McCulloch [1970] Crim LR 399, CA (plea of guilty; application to extend time in which to appeal against conviction; application hopeless; direction by single judge; further direction given on renewed application); R v Penfold [1973] Crim LR 249, CA (impudent application to full court; appellant represented by counsel); R v Ahmed (1985) 80 Cr App Rep 295, CA (direction by single judge; dispute as to proper factual basis for sentencing and defendant's version of facts 'wholly fanciful').

The prescribed notice of appeal or of application for leave to appeal (see Practice Direction (Criminal Proceedings: Consolidation) [2002] 3 All ER 904, [2002] 2 Cr App Rep 533, Annex D, CA; Amendment to the Consolidated Practice Direction (Forms for use in criminal proceedings) [2005] 2 All ER 916, [2005] 1 WLR 1479, Annex D, CA) which must be signed by, or on behalf of, the appellant (see CrimPR 68.3(10)) includes a statement that he understands that such a direction may be given. Where the prescribed form is signed on the appellant's behalf by his legal adviser, and he is in custody, the Registrar of Criminal Appeals (see PARA 1851 et seq post) must, as soon as practicable after receiving the form from the Crown Court, send a copy to the appellant: CrimPR 68.3(11).

In Morrell and Morris v United Kingdom (1987) 10 EHRR 205, ECtHR it was held that neither the Convention for the Protection of Human Rights and Fundamental Freedoms (Rome, 4 November 1950; TS 71 (1953); Cmnd 8969) art 5 (right to liberty) nor art 6 (right to fair trial) was contravened by a direction under the Criminal Appeal Act 1968 s 29(1). The Convention is commonly referred to as the European Convention on Human Rights and is enshrined in the Human Rights Act 1998 Sch 1: see CONSTITUTIONAL LAW AND HUMAN RIGHTS vol 8(2) (Reissue) PARA 122 et seq.

(iii) Matters Antecedent to the Hearing of Appeals

1848. Leave to appeal.

Leave to appeal to the Court of Appeal from a conviction, finding of disability, verdict of not guilty by reason of insanity or sentence is necessary in all cases unless the trial judge or sentencing judge, as the case may be, certifies that the case is fit for appeal<sup>1</sup>.

<sup>1</sup> See PARAS 1837-1839 ante; SENTENCING AND DISPOSITION OF OFFENDERS VOL 92 (2010) PARA 44 et seq. Most applications for leave to appeal are dealt with by a single judge: see PARA 1854 post. Where leave is granted, the case is listed before the full court; and, if a representation order is granted, counsel will normally be assigned by the Registrar of Criminal Appeals. Where leave is refused, the appellant has the right to renew the application to the full court and such applications are normally dealt with without oral argument: see PARA 1855 post. Where an appellant does not require leave to appeal, a notice of application for leave to appeal is to be treated as a notice of appeal; and, where an appellant requires leave to appeal but serves only a notice of appeal, the notice of appeal is to be treated as an application for leave to appeal: CrimPR 68.3(12). For the prescribed form of notice and grounds of appeal and of application for leave to appeal see CrimPR 68.3(1)-(7), (10), (11) (see PARAS 1863-1864 post); and Practice Direction (Criminal Proceedings: Consolidation) [2002] 3 All ER 904, [2002] 2 Cr App Rep 533, Annex D, CA; Amendment to the Consolidated Practice Direction (Forms for use in criminal proceedings) [2005] 2 All ER 916, [2005] 1 WLR 1479, Annex D, CA; Amendment to the Consolidated Criminal Practice Direction (Forms for use in criminal proceedings) [2006] 3 All ER 484, Annex D, CA. Notices of appeal and of applications for leave to appeal must be served on the Crown Court at the centre where the proceedings took place. The Crown Court will then forward them to the Criminal Appeal Office together with the trial documents and any others which may be required: Practice Direction (Criminal Proceedings: Consolidation) [2002] 3 All ER 904, [2002] 2 Cr App Rep 533 at I.14.1, CA.

The certificate of the trial judge under the Criminal Appeal Act 1968 ss 1(2), 12 or 15(2) (see PARAS 1837-1839 ante) that a case is a fit case for appeal must be in the form set out in Practice Direction (Criminal Proceedings: Consolidation) [2002] 3 All ER 904, [2002] 2 Cr App Rep 533, Annex D, CA; Amendment to the Consolidated Practice Direction (Forms for use in criminal proceedings) [2005] 2 All ER 916, [2005] 1 WLR 1479, Annex D, CA; CrimPR 68.2(1). The certificate must be forwarded forthwith to the Registrar of Criminal Appeals, whether or not the person to whom the certificate relates has applied for a certificate: CrimPR 68.2(2). A copy of the certificate must be forwarded forthwith to the person to whom the certificate relates or to his legal representative: CrimPR 68.2(3).

1850. Direction to Director of Public Prosecutions to appear.

It is the duty of the Director of Public Prosecutions to appear for the prosecution, when directed by the court to do so on any appeal<sup>1</sup> to the criminal division of the Court of Appeal<sup>2</sup>.

<sup>2</sup> See the Prosecution of Offences Act 1985 s 3(2)(f)(ii). See further PARA 1080 ante. It is not usual for the prosecution to be represented on appeals against sentence. However, the increasing complexity of sentencing law and procedure makes it desirable for the prosecution to be represented more frequently than previously: R v Dempster (1987) 85 Cr App Rep 176, CA. ### 1851. Powers of court exercisable by Registrar of Criminal Appeals.

The Registrar of Criminal Appeals may exercise the following powers of the Court of Appeal in respect of appeals to that court in criminal cases<sup>1</sup>:

- 2306 (1) to extend the time within which notice of appeal or of application for leave to appeal may be given<sup>2</sup>;
- 2307 (2) to order a witness to attend for examination<sup>3</sup>;
- 2308 (3) to vary the conditions of bail granted to an appellant by the Court of Appeal or the Crown Court<sup>4</sup>; and
- 2309 (4) to make orders for the production of any document, exhibit or other thing connected with the proceedings, the production of which appears necessary for the determination of the case<sup>5</sup>.

No variation of the conditions of bail granted to an appellant may be made by the Registrar unless he is satisfied that the respondent<sup>6</sup> does not object to the variation; but, subject to this, the powers specified above are to be exercised by the Registrar in the same manner as by the Court of Appeal and subject to the same provisions<sup>7</sup>.

1852. Determination of renewed application by a single judge.

If the Registrar of Criminal Appeals refuses an application on the part of an appellant<sup>1</sup> to exercise in his favour any of the powers vested in him<sup>2</sup>, the appellant is entitled to have the application determined by a single judge<sup>3</sup>. The appellant must serve a notice within 14 days, or such longer period as the Registrar, a single judge or the court may fix (before or after the expiry of the 14-day period), from the date on which the Registrar serves on him notice of the refusal<sup>4</sup>.

1853. Procedural directions; powers of single judge and Registrar.

The power of the Court of Appeal, on an appeal or on an application to it for leave to appeal<sup>1</sup>, to determine an application for procedural directions<sup>2</sup> may be exercised by a single judge, or by the Registrar of Criminal Appeals<sup>3</sup>.

A single judge may give such procedural directions as he thinks fit:

- 2310 (1) when determining such an application<sup>4</sup>;
- 2311 (2) on a reference from the Registrar<sup>5</sup>;
- 2312 (3) of his own motion, when he is exercising, or considering whether to exercise, any power of his in relation to the application or appeal<sup>6</sup>.

The Registrar may give such procedural directions as he thinks fit when determining such an application<sup>7</sup>; or of his own motion<sup>8</sup>.

If a single judge gives, or refuses to give, procedural directions, the Court of Appeal may, on an application to it<sup>9</sup> confirm, set aside or vary any procedural directions given by the single judge, and give such procedural directions as it thinks fit<sup>10</sup>.

If the Registrar gives, or refuses to give, procedural directions, a single judge may, on an application to him<sup>11</sup>, confirm, set aside or vary any procedural directions given by the Registrar, and give such procedural directions as he thinks fit<sup>12</sup>.

Where an appellant or respondent so appeals against procedural directions<sup>13</sup> he must do so within 14 days, or such longer period as the Registrar, a single judge or the court may fix (before or after the expiry of the 14-day period), from the date on which the Registrar serves on him notice of the procedural directions<sup>14</sup>.

For these purposes, 'appellant' includes a person who has given notice of application for leave to appeal under any of the provisions mentioned in s 31B(5) (as added) (see note 1 supra); and 'respondent' includes a person who will be a respondent if leave to appeal is granted: s 31C(6) (as so added).

1854. Powers of court exercisable by a single judge.

APPEALS/(1) APPEAL BY DEFENDANT TO THE COURT OF APPEAL FOLLOWING TRIAL ON INDICTMENT/(iii) Matters Antecedent to the Hearing of Appeals/1855. Determination of application by the full court.

1855. Determination of application by the full court.

If a single judge refuses an application on the part of an appellant<sup>1</sup> to exercise in his favour any of the powers vested in him<sup>2</sup>, the appellant is entitled to have the application determined by the Court of Appeal<sup>3</sup>. The appellant must serve a notice within 14 days, or such longer period as the Registrar of Criminal Appeals, a single judge, or the court may fix (before or after the expiry of the 14-day period), from the date on which the Registrar serves on him notice of the refusal<sup>4</sup>.

Where an appellant may renew to the court an application for the exercise of a power conferred on a single judge<sup>5</sup>, but he does not do so within the period fixed for doing so or an extended period for doing so, then his application is to be treated as having been refused by the court<sup>6</sup>.

1 For the meaning of 'appellant' see PARA 1837 note 4 ante.

2 Ie under the Criminal Appeal Act 1968 s 31(2) (as amended): see PARA 1854 ante.

3 Ibid s 31(3). As to the composition of the court see the Supreme Court Act 1981 s 55 (as amended); and COURTS vol 10 (Reissue) PARA 636. As from a day to be appointed the Supreme Court Act 1981 is renamed the Senior Courts Act 1981: see the Constitutional Reform Act 2005 s 59(5), Sch 11 para 1. At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed. An application on a secondary matter such as bail or legal aid arises out of a primary application for leave to appeal against conviction or sentence and hence may not be renewed unless at least one primary application for leave to appeal against conviction or sentence still exists.

4 See CrimPR 68.6(1). The Registrar of Criminal Appeals must, as soon as practicable, serve notice of any determination by any judge of the court under the Criminal Appeal Act 1968 s 31 (as amended): CrimPR 68.29(1). The general rule is that an application for an extension of the 14-day period will be considered at the same time as the further application itself: CrimPR 68.6(1).

CrimPR 68.6, 68.29 applies, with the necessary modifications, for the purpose of having an application determined by the court in pursuance of the Criminal Appeal Act 1968 s 44 (as amended) (see PARA 1972 post): see CrimPR 74.1(5), (6). Good reasons must exist, however, for the power to extend the 14-day period to be exercised: R v Doherty [1971] 3 All ER 622n, 55 Cr App Rep 548, CA; R v Sullivan (1972) 56 Cr App Rep 541, CA. Delay in obtaining legal advice is not a sufficient reason to extend the time (R v Hatfield [1971] Crim LR 700, CA) but positively misleading advice may be a sufficient excuse (R v Doherty supra). If counsel intends to appear pro bono on a renewed application, he should inform the Criminal Appeal Office within 14 days of notification of refusal by the single judge: R v Dowling (1995) Times, 20 October, CA. If extension of time is refused by the judge of the court, there is no right to have the application for extension of time in which to renew determined by the full court since CrimPR 68.6 contains no such provision. As to notice of determination of the court see further PARA 1894 post.

The full court may, for the purpose of hearing a renewed application, be composed of two judges: see the Supreme Court Act 1981 s 55(4). One judgment only is given by the judge presiding over the court or by such other member of the court as he directs: see s 59. As to the prospective renaming of the Supreme Court Act 1981 see note 3 supra. If the judges are not unanimous, leave to appeal is granted: see the Report of the Interdepartmental Committee on the Court of Criminal Appeal 1965 (Cmd 2755) PARA 19.

5 Ie a power conferred by the Criminal Appeal Act 1968 s 31 (as amended).

6 CrimPR 68.6(2). This does not have the effect of precluding the full court from determining whether an extension of time for service ought to be granted: R v Dixon (Leon) [1999] 3 All ER 889, [2000] 1 Cr App Rep 173, CA.

APPEALS/(1) APPEAL BY DEFENDANT TO THE COURT OF APPEAL FOLLOWING TRIAL ON INDICTMENT/(iv) Procedure/1856. Preparation of the case for hearing.

(iv) Procedure

1856. Preparation of the case for hearing.

The Registrar of Criminal Appeals must: (1) take all necessary steps for obtaining a hearing of any appeal<sup>1</sup> or application of which notice is given to him and which is not referred and dismissed<sup>2</sup> summarily<sup>3</sup>; and (2) obtain and lay before the Court of Appeal in proper form all documents, exhibits and other things which appear necessary for the proper determination of the appeal or application<sup>4</sup>.

1 For the meaning of 'appeal' see PARA 1837 note 4 ante.

2 le referred and dismissed summarily under the Criminal Appeal Act 1968 s 20 (as substituted): see PARA 1875 post.

3 Criminal Appeal Act 1968 s 21(1)(a). The Registrar must give as long notice in advance as reasonably possible of the date on which the court will hear any appeal or application by an appellant to: (1) the appellant; (2) any person having custody of the appellant; and (3) any other interested party whom the court requires to be represented at the hearing: CrimPR 68.23(2). CrimPR 68.23(2) does not apply, however, to proceedings before a judge of the court under the Criminal Appeal Act 1968 s 31 (as amended) (see PARA 1854 ante): CrimPR 68.23(3). For the meaning of 'appellant' for these purposes see PARA 1837 note 4 ante. 'Interested party' means a person or organisation who is not the prosecutor or defendant but who has some other legal interest in a criminal case: CrimPR 2.4, glossary.

4 Criminal Appeal Act 1968 s 21(1)(b). The Registrar may require the court of trial to furnish the court with any assistance or information which it may require for the purpose of exercising its jurisdiction: CrimPR 68.23(1). Upon receiving notice of appeal or application, the Crown Court supplies to the Registrar the trial documents. Where the application is for leave to appeal against sentence only, the Crown Court will also order on behalf of the Registrar a transcript of the trial judge's sentencing remarks to be delivered to the Registrar.

Whenever an interpreter has been used for a defendant in the Crown Court, the barrister or solicitor responsible for signing the application for leave to appeal against the sentence or conviction should make clear the need for an interpreter in the Court of Appeal: R v Kadiu (2004) Times, 18 February, CA.

CrimPR 68.23 applies, with the necessary modifications, in relation to an appeal under the Criminal Appeal Act 1968 Pt II (ss 33-44) (as amended) (see PARA 1966 et seq post) or under the Administration of Justice Act 1960 s 13 (as amended) (see PARA 1920 post) as it applies in relation to an appeal under the Criminal Appeal Act 1968 Pt I (ss 1-32) (as amended) (see PARA 1837 et seq ante): CrimPR 74.1(7).

On a conviction on indictment or on a coroner's inquisition a court officer of the court of trial must, subject to any directions of the trial judge, make arrangements<sup>1</sup> for any exhibit at the trial, which in his opinion may be required for the purposes of an appeal against conviction, to be kept in the custody of the court, or given into the custody of the person producing it at the trial or any other person for retention, until the expiration of 35 days from the date of conviction<sup>2</sup>.

Where an appellant has given notice of appeal, or of an application for leave to appeal, against conviction<sup>3</sup>, the Registrar of Criminal Appeals must inform a court officer of the notice, and must give directions concerning the continued retention in custody of any exhibit which appears necessary for the proper determination of the appeal or application<sup>4</sup>.

Where the Court of Appeal orders an appellant to be re-tried<sup>5</sup>, it must make arrangements<sup>6</sup> pending the re-trial for the continued retention in custody of exhibits<sup>7</sup>.

APPEALS/(1) APPEAL BY DEFENDANT TO THE COURT OF APPEAL FOLLOWING TRIAL ON INDICTMENT/(iv) Procedure/1863. Notice of appeal or of application for leave to appeal.

1863. Notice of appeal or of application for leave to appeal.

A person who wishes to appeal<sup>1</sup> to the Court of Appeal or to obtain the leave of that court to appeal, must give notice of appeal or, as the case may be, notice of application for leave to appeal, in such manner as may be directed<sup>2</sup>.

Notice of appeal, or of application for leave to appeal, must be given within 28 days from the date of the conviction, verdict or finding appealed against, or in the case of appeal against sentence<sup>3</sup>, from the date on which sentence was passed or, in the case of an order made or treated as made on conviction, from the date of the making of the order<sup>4</sup>.

The time for giving such notice may be extended, either before or after it expires, by the Court of Appeal<sup>5</sup>.

1     le under the Criminal Appeal Act 1968 Pt I (ss 1-32) (as amended): see PARA 1837 et seq ante. An application for leave to appeal by a defendant who has absconded and is still unlawfully at large is not thereby to be treated as ineffective by the Registrar or dismissed for the reason that, by absconding, the applicant has put it out of his power to instruct his solicitors to initiate proceedings. A single judge or the court is entitled (but not bound) to conclude that solicitors who submit the application have the actual or implied authority to do so: R v Charles (Jerome); R v Tucker (Lee) [2001] EWCA Crim 129, [2001] 2 Cr App Rep 233 (R v Jones [1971] 2 QB 456, 55 Cr App Rep 321, CA, not followed).

2     Criminal Appeal Act 1968 s 18(1). Notice of appeal or of an application for leave to appeal under Pt I (as amended) or notice of appeal under the Administration of Justice Act 1960 s 13 (as amended) (as required by the Criminal Appeal Act 1968 s 18A (as added); see PARA 1920 post) must be given by completing the form set out in Practice Direction (Criminal Proceedings: Consolidation) [2002] 3 All ER 904, [2002] 2 Cr App Rep 533, Annex D, CA; Amendment to the Consolidated Practice Direction (Forms for use in criminal proceedings) [2005] 2 All ER 916, [2005] 1 WLR 1479, Annex D, CA, and serving it on a Crown Court officer: CrimPR 68.3(1). A notice of appeal or of an application for leave to appeal must be accompanied by a notice in the form set out in Practice Direction (Criminal Proceedings: Consolidation) [2002] 3 All ER 904, [2002] 2 Cr App Rep 533, Annex D, CA; Amendment to the Consolidated Practice Direction (Forms for use in criminal proceedings) [2005] 2 All ER 916, [2005] 1 WLR 1479, Annex D, CA; Amendment to the Consolidated Criminal Practice Direction (Forms for use in criminal proceedings) [2006] 3 All ER 484, Annex D, containing the grounds of the appeal or application: CrimPR 68.3(2). As to grounds of appeal see PARA 1864 post. The form to which CrimPR 68.3 relates must be signed by, or on behalf of, the appellant: CrimPR 68.3(10). If a form is not signed by the appellant and the appellant is in custody, the Registrar must, as soon as practicable after receiving the form from the Crown Court, send a copy of it to the appellant: CrimPR 68.3(11). As to notice of an application for bail pending appeal see PARA 1193 note 4 ante. As to service of documents see PARA 1862 ante; and as to the importance of complying with the above procedure see R v Suggett (1985) 81 Cr App Rep 243, CA.

3     For the meaning of 'sentence' see SENTENCING AND DISPOSITION OF OFFENDERS vol 92 (2010) PARA 45

4     Criminal Appeal Act 1968 s 18(2). In the case of an appeal against conviction, time runs from the date of conviction, and not from the date of sentence: R v Leonard L [1998] 2 Cr App Rep 326, (sub nom R v Long (Leonard) 161 JP 769), CA. Where a sentence or other order is varied under the Powers of Criminal Courts (Sentencing) Act 2000 s 155 (see PARA 1357 ante), the sentence or other order is to be regarded as imposed or made on the day on which it is so varied: see s 155(6)(a).

Where: (1) a sentence has been imposed on any person under the Powers of Criminal Courts (Sentencing) Act 2000 s 110 (see PARA 772 ante) or s 111 (see PARA 294 ante); and (2) any previous conviction of his without which s 110 or s 111 would not have applied has been subsequently set aside on appeal, then notwithstanding anything in the Criminal Appeal Act 1968 s 18, notice of appeal against the sentence may be given at any time within 28 days from the date on which the previous conviction was set aside: Powers of Criminal Courts (Sentencing) Act 2000 s 112 (amended by the Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 332, Sch 37 Pt 7).

Where: (a) a sentence has been imposed on any person under the Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 225 (see SENTENCING AND DISPOSITION OF OFFENDERS vol 92 (2010) PARAS 73-74, 80, 87) or s 227 (see SENTENCING AND DISPOSITION OF OFFENDERS vol 92 (2010) PARAS 75, 88); and (b) any previous conviction of his without which the court would not have been required to make the assumption mentioned in s 229(3) has been subsequently set aside on appeal, then notwithstanding anything in the Criminal Appeal Act 1968 s 18, notice of appeal against the sentence may be given at any time within 28 days from the date on which the previous conviction was set aside: Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 231.

As from a day to be appointed, where a case in the Crown Court has been conducted or continued without a jury and the court convicts a defendant, the reference in the Criminal Appeal Act 1968 s 18(2) to the date of conviction is to be read as a reference to the date of judgment stating the reasons for the conviction: Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 48(5)(b) (in force, at the date at which this volume states the law, for certain purposes only: see PARA 1284 note 1 ante).

5 Criminal Appeal Act 1968 s 18(3). See PARA 1865 post. The power to extend the time is exercisable by a single judge: see s 31(2)(b); and PARA 1854 ante.

APPEALS/(1) APPEAL BY DEFENDANT TO THE COURT OF APPEAL FOLLOWING TRIAL ON INDICTMENT/(iv) Procedure/1864. Statement of grounds of appeal.

1864. Statement of grounds of appeal.

A notice of appeal or of an application for leave to appeal<sup>1</sup> must be accompanied by a notice<sup>2</sup> containing the grounds of the appeal or application<sup>3</sup>. Such a notice must include notice: (1) of any application to be made to the court for a declaration of incompatibility<sup>4</sup>; or (2) of any issue for the court to decide which may lead to the court making such a declaration<sup>5</sup>. Where grounds have been settled by counsel, they must be signed by counsel and attached to the notice of appeal or of the application for leave to appeal<sup>6</sup>. Sufficient particulars must be given to enable the Registrar and subsequently the Court of Appeal to identify clearly the matters relied upon<sup>7</sup>. Where the appellant was represented at trial by counsel who settles the grounds of appeal, particulars should be given without waiting for a transcript of the trial<sup>8</sup>. The grounds of appeal enable the Registrar of Criminal Appeals to order the transcript necessary for the purposes of the appeal or application<sup>9</sup>. Upon receipt of the transcript the Registrar may require counsel to perfect the grounds in the light of the transcript<sup>10</sup>.

A notice unsupported by grounds is ineffective<sup>11</sup>.

The grounds of an appeal or application may, with the consent of the court, be varied or amplified within such time as the court may allow<sup>12</sup>.

1 As to notice of appeal or of application for leave to appeal see PARA 1863 ante.

2 The notice must be in the form set out in Practice Direction (Criminal Proceedings: Consolidation) [2002] 3 All ER 904, [2002] 2 Cr App Rep 533, Annex D, CA; Amendment to the Consolidated Practice Direction (Forms for use in criminal proceedings) [2005] 2 All ER 916, [2005] 1 WLR 1479, Annex D, CA; Amendment to the Consolidated Criminal Practice Direction (Forms for use in criminal proceedings) [2006] 3 All ER 484, Annex D, CA.

3 CrimPR 68.3(2). If the appellant has been convicted of more than one offence, the notice must specify the convictions or sentences against which the appellant is appealing or applying for leave to appeal: CrimPR 68.3(5). An appellant who is appealing or applying for leave to appeal against conviction must specify in the form (see note 2 supra) any exhibit produced at the trial which he wishes to be kept in custody for the purposes of his appeal: CrimPR 68.3(9). As to custody of the exhibits see PARA 1858 ante.

The form must be signed by or on behalf of the appellant: CrimPR 68.3(10). If a form is not signed by the appellant and the appellant is in custody, the Registrar must, as soon as practicable after receiving the form from the Crown Court, send a copy of it to the appellant: CrimPR 68.3(11).

4 CrimPR 68.3(3)(a). A declaration of incompatibility means a declaration under the Human Rights Act 1998 s 4: see PARA 1892 post.

5 CrimPR 68.3(3)(b). Where the grounds of appeal or application include notice in accordance with CrimPR 68.3(3)(b), a copy of the notice must be served on the prosecutor by the appellant: CrimPR 68.3(4).

6 Advocates should not settle grounds or support them with written advice unless they consider that they are properly arguable. Grounds should be carefully drafted and properly particularised. Advocates should not assume that the court will entertain any ground of appeal not set out and properly particularised. Should leave to amend the grounds be granted it is most unlikely that further grounds will be entertained: Practice Direction (Criminal Proceedings: Consolidation) [2002] 3 All ER 904, [2002] 2 Cr App Rep 533 at II.15.1, CA. A copy of the Advocate's positive advice about the merits should be attached as part of the grounds: Practice Direction (Criminal Proceedings: Consolidation) [2002] 3 All ER 904, [2002] 2 Cr App Rep 533 at II.15.2, CA. In certain cases counsel may not be able to confirm that his grounds of appeal are reasonable without, for example, a transcript or other further information. In this event grounds should be accompanied by a 'Note to the Registrar' setting out the matters upon which assistance is required: A Guide to Proceedings in the Court of Appeal Criminal Division (1997) PARA 2.1.

7 See A Guide to Proceedings in the Court of Appeal Criminal Division (1997) PARA 2.2; R v Bremner and Joy (20 December 1984, unreported), CA.

8 R v Adler (1923) 17 Cr App Rep 105, CCA; R v Ellson [1962] 1 All ER 417n, [1962] 1 WLR 312, CCA; R v Kooner [1972] Crim LR 420, CA.

9 Only transcript essential for the proper conduct of the appeal should be requested. Counsel are likely to be criticised by the court for seeking excessive quantities of transcript (see R v Campbell (1981) Times, 21 July, CA; R v Lifely (1990) Times, 16 July, CA) and in certain circumstances the costs of unnecessary transcript can be ordered to be paid by the appellant: A Guide to Proceedings in the Court of Appeal Criminal Division (1997) PARA 3.3.

10 The Registrar will almost certainly do so where application is made for leave to appeal against conviction. Counsel who wish to perfect their grounds in any event should give an indication to that effect in the form of a Note to the Registrar to accompany the grounds: A Guide to Proceedings in the Court of Appeal Criminal Division (1997) PARA 4.1. Perfected grounds should consist of a fresh document, superseding the original grounds of appeal, with references by page number and letter to all relevant passages in the transcript; authorities relied on should be cited, where possible using Criminal Appeal Report references, and documents mentioned in the grounds should be identified clearly and an indication given if each member of the court will require a copy: A Guide to Proceedings in the Court of Appeal Criminal Division (1997) PARA 4.4. As to the importance of complying with para 4 see R v Howell (1984) 78 Cr App Rep 195, CA.

If, having considered the transcript, counsel is of the opinion that the appeal or application should be abandoned, he should set out his reasons to his instructing solicitors. He should inform the Registrar that he has done so; but a copy of his advice should not be sent to the Registrar: A Guide to Proceedings in the Court of Appeal Criminal Division (1997) PARA 4.5. Solicitors should send a copy of counsel's advice to the appellant and obtain his instructions, at the same time explaining that, if the appellant persists with his application, the court may consider whether to give a direction that time spent in custody should be lost: A Guide to Proceedings in the Court of Appeal Criminal Division (1997) PARA 4.5. As to the giving of such directions see PARA 1845 ante; and as to abandonment of appeals see PARA 1876 post.

12 CrimPR 68.3(6). As to applications at the last moment before the hearing before the court see R v Willmott (1933) 24 Cr App Rep 54, CCA; R v Antoniadis [1973] Crim LR 572, CA.

In appeals against conviction advocates for the appellant and for the prosecution authority must lodge skeleton arguments with the Registrar and their counterpart after notification that leave to appeal is granted: see further Practice Direction (Criminal Proceedings: Consolidation) [2002] 3 All ER 904, [2002] 2 Cr App Rep 533 at II.17.1-II.17.5, CA.

APPEALS/(1) APPEAL BY DEFENDANT TO THE COURT OF APPEAL FOLLOWING TRIAL ON INDICTMENT/(iv) Procedure/1865. Extensions of time.

1865. Extensions of time.

The time for giving notice of appeal or of application for leave to appeal may be extended, either before or after it expires, by the Court of Appeal<sup>1</sup>. Substantial reasons for the delay are, however, required, and the longer the delay the stronger must be the reasons<sup>2</sup>.

The court will not usually grant an extension of time where the law on which the conviction was based has since been overruled; it is a matter of discretion: R v Ramsden [1972] Crim LR 547, CA; R v Hawkins (Paul Nigel) supra; R v Benjafield, R v Leal, R v Milford, R v Rezvi [2001] 2 All ER 609, [2001] 2 Cr App Rep 87, CA (point not considered on appeal [2002] UKHL 2, [2003] 1 AC 1099, [2002] 1 All ER 815); R v Kansal (No 2) [2001] EWCA Crim 1260, [2002] 2 AC 69, [2001] 3 WLR 751 (point not considered on appeal [2001] UKHL 62, [2002] 2 AC 69, [2002] 1 All ER 257).

If an application for extension of time is refused by a single judge, it may be renewed to the full court: see PARA 1855 ante.

1866. Production of documents on appeal.

If the Court of Appeal thinks it necessary or expedient in the interests of justice, the Court of Appeal may<sup>1</sup> order the production of any document, exhibit or other thing connected with the proceedings, the production of which appears to it necessary for the determination of the case<sup>2</sup>.

1867. Additional evidence on appeal.

If the Court of Appeal thinks it necessary or expedient in the interests of justice, it may<sup>1</sup>:

2346 (1) order any witness who would have been compellable in the proceedings from which the appeal<sup>2</sup> lies to attend for examination and be examined before the court, whether or not he was called in those proceedings<sup>3</sup>;

In considering whether to receive any evidence, the Court of Appeal must have regard in particular to:

2348 (a) whether the evidence appears to the court to be capable of belief<sup>7</sup>;

2349 (b) whether it appears to the court that the evidence may afford any ground for allowing the appeal<sup>8</sup>;

2350 (c) whether the evidence would have been admissible in the proceedings from which the appeal lies on an issue<sup>9</sup> which is the subject of the appeal<sup>10</sup>; and

2351 (d) whether there is a reasonable explanation for the failure to adduce the evidence in those proceedings<sup>11</sup>.

A party to an appeal who applies for leave to call a witness may also apply for leave<sup>12</sup> for the evidence of that witness to be given through a live television link where the witness is a specified vulnerable person<sup>13</sup> and the offence is a specified<sup>14</sup> offence<sup>15</sup>. Such an application must be made at the same time as the application for leave to call the witness or at any time thereafter, but no less than 14 days before the date fixed for the hearing of the appeal except with the leave of the court<sup>16</sup>. An application so made is determined without a hearing, unless the court otherwise directs; and the Registrar must notify the applicant and the other parties of the time and place of any such hearing<sup>17</sup>.

A party to an appeal who applies for leave to call a witness may also apply for leave<sup>18</sup> for the evidence of that witness to be given through a live television link where the witness is outside the United Kingdom<sup>19</sup>. Such an application must be made at the same time as the application for leave to call the witness or at any time thereafter, but no less than 14 days before the date fixed for the hearing of the appeal except with the leave of the court<sup>20</sup>. An application so made is determined without a hearing, unless the court otherwise directs, and the Registrar must notify the applicant and the other parties of the time and place of any such hearing<sup>21</sup>.

1. le for the purposes of an appeal under the Criminal Appeal Act 1968 Pt I (ss 1-32) (as amended) (see PARA 1837 et seq ante): Criminal Appeal Act 1968 s 23(1) (amended by the Criminal Appeal Act 1995 s 29(1), Sch 2 para 4(1), (3)). The discovery of 'fresh' evidence after the determination of an appeal does not allow the court to reconsider the propriety of the conviction etc, unless the court becomes seised of the case by way of reference by the Secretary of State: R v Pinfold [1988] QB 462, 87 Cr App Rep 15, CA. The court may examine such material as it thinks fit in order to ascertain whether to exercise its powers under the Criminal Appeal Act 1968 s 23(1): R v Callaghan [1988] 1 All ER 257, 86 Cr App Rep 181, CA.

2 For the meaning of 'appeal' see PARA 1837 note 4 ante.

3 Criminal Appeal Act 1968 s 23(1)(b). Notice of an application for an order under s 23(1)(b) or (c) must be in the form set out in Practice Direction (Criminal Proceedings: Consolidation) [2002] 3 All ER 904, [2002] 2 Cr App Rep 533, Annex D, CA; Amendment to the Consolidated Practice Direction (Forms for use in criminal proceedings) [2005] 2 All ER 916, [2005] 1 WLR 1479, Annex D, CA and must be served on the Registrar of Criminal Appeals, save that where a notice of application is given together with a notice of appeal or notice of application for leave to appeal, it must be served on the Crown Court officer: CrimPR 68.15(1). Alternatively, application may be made to the court orally: CrimPR 68.15(2). An order of the court to a person to attend for examination as a witness must be in the form set out in Practice Direction (Criminal Proceedings: Consolidation) [2002] 3 All ER 904, [2002] 2 Cr App Rep 533, Annex D, CA; Amendment to the Consolidated Practice Direction (Forms for use in criminal proceedings) [2005] 2 All ER 916, [2005] 1 WLR 1479, Annex D, CA and must specify the time and place of attendance: CrimPR 68.16(1). Such an order may be made by a single judge: see PARA 1854 ante. The court may order the arrest of a witness who fails to attend: see R v Moylan (1969) as reported in 119 NLJ 462, CA.

As to the examination of a witness before an officer of the court see PARA 1871 post.

4 Criminal Appeal Act 1968 s 23(1)(c) (substituted by the Criminal Appeal Act 1995 s 4(1)(a)). As to notice of the application see note 3 supra.

5 For the meaning of 'appellant' see PARA 1837 note 4 ante.

6 Criminal Appeal Act 1968 s 23(1), (3) (amended by the Criminal Appeal Act 1995 ss 4(1)(c), 29, Sch 3). The court may consider a judgment in other proceedings where the judge has considered issues identical or similar to those in the case before the jury or which bear on those issues: R v D (David), R v Philip (J) [1996] QB 283, [1996] 1 Cr App Rep 455, CA; R v B [1999] 1 Archbold News 2, CA.

Evidence will not be received if it would not afford any ground for allowing the appeal or if it is inadmissible: R v Lattimore (1975) 62 Cr App Rep 53, CA. Save in the most exceptional circumstances, the court will not receive evidence to advance a different case from that run at the trial: R v Abrol (11 July 1983, unreported), CA. Also see R v Arnold (1996) 31 BMLR 24, CA (new evidence as to appellant's mental health not referable to proven facts, and therefore not admissible); R v Gilfoyle [1996] 3 All ER 883, [1996] 1 Cr App Rep 302, CA (evidence ruled inadmissible at trial received on appeal because relevant and admissible; decided before substitution of the Criminal Appeal Act 1968 s 23(1)(c)). It is permissible to cross-examine a witness about any relevant finding of fact by a court, but caution is required in relation to what is and is not findings by the Court of Appeal: R v Twitchell [2000] 1 Cr App Rep 373, (1999) Times, 10 November, CA.

7 Criminal Appeal Act 1968 s 23(2)(a) (s 23(2) substituted by the Criminal Appeal Act 1995 s 4(1)(b)).

8 Criminal Appeal Act 1968 s 23(2)(b) (as substituted: see note 7 supra).

9 'On an issue' means on an issue which was raised at the trial and is the subject of the appeal: R v Melville [1976] 1 All ER 395 at 399, 62 Cr App Rep 100 at 104, CA.

10 Criminal Appeal Act 1968 s 23(2)(c) (as substituted: see note 7 supra).

11 Ibid s 23(2)(d) (as substituted: see note 7 supra). The court may order the appellant to be re-tried if the interests of justice so require: see PARA 1896 post. Provided that consideration has been given to the above criteria, fresh evidence may be admitted even if none of the criteria have been satisfied: R v Sales [2000] 2 Cr App Rep 431, CA. The court may receive evidence which has only become available to the prosecution after the conclusion of the trial (R v Craven [2001] 2 Cr App Rep 12, CA); including evidence whose purpose is not to rebut fresh evidence called by the appellant (R v Hanratty [2002] EWCA Crim 1141, [2002] 3 All ER 534, [2002] 2 Cr App Rep 419). The overriding consideration of the court in deciding whether to admit fresh evidence is whether the evidence will assist it to achieve justice; justice can equally be achieved by upholding a conviction if it is safe or setting it aside if it is unsafe: R v Hanratty supra. On an application to call fresh evidence, the court must be provided in advance with all information relevant under the Criminal Appeal Act 1968 s 23(2)(d) (as substituted); where a lengthy or complicated explanation is necessary, it is usually appropriate for the court to be provided with an affidavit or signed statement from the appellant or his solicitor setting out the matters relied on: R v Trevor [1998] Crim LR 652, CA. Where fresh evidence is proffered to the Court of Appeal from a witness which has a different effect from that which he has previously given, or from a witness who did not give evidence at the trial, affidavit evidence from all involved in relation to the taking of the new statement must be supplied: R v Gogana (1999) Times, 12 July, CA (different effect); R v James [2000] Crim LR 571, CA (witness did not give evidence at trial). A re-trial will not necessarily be ordered because the evidence is different from that given at the trial: R v Flower, R v Siggins, R v Flower [1966] 1 QB 146, 50 Cr App Rep 22, CCA ((1) a court may, and no doubt ordinarily will, simply quash the conviction and not order a re-trial if it is satisfied not only that evidence is true but is also conclusive to the appeal; (2) if it is satisfied that that evidence is true but not that it is conclusive it may order a re-trial; (3) if it is not satisfied that that evidence is true, but nevertheless thinks that it might be accepted by a jury, a court would generally order a re-trial; (4) if the court positively disbelieves the additional evidence, a re-trial will not generally be ordered, because the additional evidence is worthless, and the court will proceed to deal with the appeal as though no additional evidence had been tendered). See also R v Collins (1950) 34 Cr App Rep 146, CCA; R v Chionye (1988) 89 Cr App Rep 285, CA.

In order to provide a reasonable explanation for the failure to adduce the evidence at the trial the appellant must satisfy the court that with reasonable diligence the evidence could not have been obtained for the trial: R v Beresford (1971) 56 Cr App Rep 143, CA; R v Nabarro [1972] Crim LR 497, CA; a tactical decision not to call evidence at the trial is not a reasonable explanation for failure to adduce it: R v Hampton, R v Brown [2004] EWCA Crim 2139, (2004) Times, 13 October. For examples of reasonable explanations for not adducing the evidence at the trial see R v Murphy (1921) 15 Cr App Rep 181, CCA (evidence not available at trial); R v Knox (1927) 20 Cr App Rep 96, CCA; R v Ditch (1969) 53 Cr App Rep 627, CA (post-trial confession of co-defendant clearing appellant); R v Conway (1979) 70 Cr App Rep 4, CA (statements by prosecution witnesses inconsistent with evidence at trial); R v Williams, R v Smith [1995] 1 Cr App Rep 74, CA (evidence of discreditable conduct by police officers after trial).

As to the approach to be taken by the court where the evidence relates to a matter which arose after the conviction see R v Twitchell [2000] 1 Cr App Rep 373, CA.

On an application to call evidence on appeal, the court should be informed of all the relevant facts in order to consider whether there was a reasonable explanation for the failure to adduce the evidence at the time of the trial: R v T (1998) Times, 30 June, CA. The existence or non-existence of a reasonable explanation is only one factor to be taken into account in deciding whether it is necessary or expedient in the interests of justice to admit the evidence: R v Cairns [2000] Crim LR 473, CA.

As to the court's receiving fresh evidence from an expert witness, such evidence is admissible even though the requirement in the Criminal Appeal Act 1968 s 23(2)(a) (as substituted) that the evidence should appear to be capable of belief applies more aptly to factual evidence than to expert opinion, which may or may not be acceptable or persuasive but which is unlikely to be thought to be incapable of belief in any ordinary sense. The giving of a reasonable explanation for failure to adduce the evidence before the jury again applies more aptly to factual evidence of which a party was unaware, or could not adduce, than to expert evidence, since if one expert is unavailable to testify at a trial a party would ordinarily be expected to call another unless circumstances prevented this. Expert witnesses, although inevitably varying in standing and experience, are interchangeable in a way in which factual witnesses are not. It would clearly subvert the trial process if a defendant, convicted at trial, were to be generally free to mount on appeal an expert case which, if sound, could and should have been advanced before the jury: R v Jones (Steven) [1997] 1 Cr App Rep 86, CA. Also see R v Hobson [1998] 1 Cr App Rep 31, CA; R v Borthwick [1998] Crim LR 274, CA (fresh expert evidence admitted); cf R v Andrews (Jane) [2003] EWCA Crim 2750, [2004] Crim LR 376 (fresh expert evidence not admitted).

Evidence of what happened at the trial of matters relating to an alleged irregularity at it may be admitted under the Criminal Appeal Act 1968 s 23(1) (as amended): see R v Allaway (1922) 17 Cr App Rep 15, CCA; R v Clewer (1953) 37 Cr App Rep 37, CCA; R v Hircok, R v Farmer, R v Leggett [1970] 1 QB 67, 53 Cr App Rep 51, CA; R v Smith (Winston) (1975) 61 Cr App Rep 128, CA; R v Kemble [1990] 3 All ER 116, 91 Cr App Rep 178, CA. The court will not make inquiries or hear evidence about bias or impropriety among the jury (Ellis v Deheer [1922] 2 KB 113, CA; R v Thompson [1962] 1 All ER 65, 46 Cr App Rep 72, CCA; R v Miah, R v Akhtar [1997] 2 Cr App Rep 12, CA; R v Qureshi [2001] EWCA Crim 1807, [2002] 1 WLR 518, [2002] 1 Cr App Rep 433); even if the evidence, if admitted, would provide a prima facie case of partiality (R v Mirza, R v Connor and Rollock [2004] UKHL 02, [2004] 1 AC 1118, [2004] 1 All ER 925).

In so far as decisions before the Criminal Appeal Act 1964 (repealed) were decided on the basis that the court had no power to order the defendant to be tried again save where the original trial was a nullity (see PARA 1895 post), they are now of doubtful value.

12    le under the Criminal Justice Act 1988 s 32(1)(b) (ss 32(1)(b), (2), 32A repealed except in relation to proceedings before Service courts: see the Youth Justice and Criminal Evidence Act 1999 s 67(3), (4), Sch 6, Sch 7 para 3; and the Youth Justice and Criminal Evidence Act 1999 (Commencement No 7) Order 2002, SI 2002/1739).

149 (3)    a person who is to be cross-examined following the admission under the Criminal Justice Act 1988 s 32A (repealed (see note 12 supra); see PARA 1414 ante) of a video recording of testimony from him (CrimPR 68.18(1)(b)(iii)), 14 Ie an offence specified in the Criminal Justice Act 1988 s 32(2) (repealed: see note 12 supra): CrimPR 68.18(1)(a). See note 13 supra.

15 CrimPR 68.18(1). An application under CrimPR 68.18(1) must be made by serving a notice in writing on the Registrar stating: (1) the grounds of the application; (2) the date of birth of the witness; (3) the name of the witness; and (4) the name, occupation and relationship, if any, to the witness of any person proposed to accompany the witness and the grounds for believing that person should accompany the witness: CrimPR 68.18(2). The Registrar must, as soon as practicable after receiving such an application, send a copy of the notice to the other parties to the appeal: CrimPR 68.18(4). Without prejudice to CrimPR 68.29 (see PARA 1894 post), the Registrar must notify all the parties and the person who is to accompany the witness, if known, of the decision of the court in relation to such an application; and, where leave is granted, the notification must state the name of the witness, and, if known, the name, occupation and relationship, if any, to the witness of the person who is to accompany the witness: CrimPR 68.18(6). A witness giving evidence through a television link pursuant to leave granted in accordance with this rule must be accompanied by a person acceptable to the Court and, unless the Court otherwise directs, by no other person: CrimPR 68.18(7).

The purpose referred to in CrimPR 68.19(2)(d) (see head (4) supra) is that of answering any questions the court may put, before or after the evidence of the witness is given, as to the circumstances in which the evidence is given, including questions about any persons who are present when the evidence is given and any matters which may affect the giving of the evidence: CrimPR 68.19(3). The Registrar must, as soon as practicable after receiving an application under CrimPR 68.19(1), send a copy of the notice to the other parties to the appeal: CrimPR 68.19(5). Without prejudice to CrimPR 68.29 (see PARA 1894 post), the Registrar must notify all the parties of the decision of the court in relation to an application under CrimPR 68.19(1), and, where leave is granted, the notification must state the name of the witness and, where applicable, the name and occupation of any person specified by the court for the purpose set out in CrimPR 68.19(3): CrimPR 68.19(7).

APPEALS/(1) APPEAL BY DEFENDANT TO THE COURT OF APPEAL FOLLOWING TRIAL ON INDICTMENT/(iv) Procedure/1869. Power to order investigations.

1869. Power to order investigations.

On an appeal against conviction or an application for leave to appeal against conviction<sup>1</sup> the Court of Appeal may direct the Criminal Cases Review Commission<sup>2</sup> to investigate and report to the Court on any matter if it appears to the Court that<sup>3</sup>:

- 2352 (1) in the case of an appeal, the matter is relevant to the determination of the appeal and ought, if possible, to be resolved before the appeal is determined<sup>4</sup>;
- 2353 (2) in the case of an application for leave to appeal, the matter is relevant to the determination of the application and ought, if possible, to be resolved before the application is determined<sup>5</sup>;
- 2354 (3) an investigation of the matter by the Commission is likely to result in the Court being able to resolve it<sup>6</sup>; and
- 2355 (4) the matter cannot be resolved by the Court without an investigation by the Commission<sup>7</sup>.

Such a direction may not be given by a single judge notwithstanding that, in the case of an application for leave to appeal, the application may be determined<sup>8</sup> by a single judge<sup>9</sup>.

Copies of such a direction must be made available to the appellant and the respondent<sup>10</sup>.

Where the Commission has reported to the Court of Appeal on any matter which it has been directed<sup>11</sup> to investigate, the court:

- 2356 (a) must notify the appellant and the respondent that the Commission has reported; and
- 2357 (b) may make available to the appellant and the respondent the report of the Commission and any statements, opinions and reports which accompanied it<sup>12</sup>.

APPEALS/(1) APPEAL BY DEFENDANT TO THE COURT OF APPEAL FOLLOWING TRIAL ON INDICTMENT/(iv) Procedure/1870. Investigations for Court of Appeal by Criminal Cases Review Commission.

1870. Investigations for Court of Appeal by Criminal Cases Review Commission.

Where, on an appeal against conviction, a direction is given by the Court of Appeal<sup>1</sup> to the Criminal Cases Review Commission<sup>2</sup>, the Commission must investigate the matter specified in the direction in such manner as it thinks fit<sup>3</sup>. Where, in investigating a matter specified in such a direction, it appears to the Commission that another matter (a 'related matter') which is relevant to the determination of the appeal or application for leave to appeal by the Court of Appeal ought, if possible, to be resolved before the appeal or application for leave to appeal is determined by that Court, and an investigation of the related matter is likely to result in the Court's being able to resolve it, the Commission may also investigate the related matter<sup>4</sup>. The Commission must keep the Court of Appeal informed as to the progress of the investigation of any matter specified in a direction<sup>5</sup>, and if it decides to investigate any related matter, must notify the Court of Appeal of its decision and keep the court informed as to the progress of the investigation<sup>6</sup>.

The Commission must report to the Court of Appeal on the investigation of any matter specified in a direction when it completes the investigation of that matter and of any related matter investigated by it, or it is directed to do so by the Court of Appeal, whichever happens first<sup>7</sup>. Such a report must include details of any inquiries made by or for the Commission in the investigation of the matter specified in the direction or any related matter investigated by it<sup>8</sup>; and must be accompanied by any statements and opinions received by the Commission in the investigation of the matter specified in the direction or any related matter investigated by it, and by any reports so received<sup>9</sup>.

At any time before the determination of an appeal or application for leave to appeal<sup>1</sup>, the Court of Appeal may make an order<sup>2</sup> referring a question to the European Court of Justice for a preliminary ruling<sup>3</sup>; and, where such an order is made<sup>4</sup>, no appeal or application for leave to appeal may, unless the court otherwise orders, be determined until the European Court has given a preliminary ruling on the question referred to it<sup>5</sup>.

APPEALS/(1) APPEAL BY DEFENDANT TO THE COURT OF APPEAL FOLLOWING TRIAL ON INDICTMENT/(iv) Procedure/1874. Right of appellant to be present at hearing.

1874. Right of appellant to be present at hearing.

An appellant<sup>1</sup> is entitled to be present, if he wishes, on the hearing of his appeal, although he may be in custody<sup>2</sup>. A person in custody is not entitled to be present, however:

- 2358 (1) where his appeal is on some ground involving a question of law alone<sup>3</sup>;
- 2359 (2) on an application by him for leave to appeal<sup>4</sup>;
- 2360 (3) on any proceedings preliminary or incidental to an appeal<sup>5</sup>; or
- 2361 (4) where he is in custody in consequence of a verdict of not guilty by reason of insanity or of a finding of disability<sup>6</sup>, unless the Court of Appeal gives him leave to be present<sup>7</sup>.

The power of the Court of Appeal to pass sentence on a person may be exercised although he is for any reason not present<sup>8</sup>.

1 For the meaning of 'appellant' see PARA 1837 note 4 ante.

2 Criminal Appeal Act 1968 s 22(1). As to the hearing of an appeal when the appellant has escaped from custody see R v Flower (Richard), R v Siggins, R v Flower (Eric) [1966] 1 QB 146, 50 Cr App Rep 22, CCA. As to the presence of the appellant at the hearing of an appeal to the House of Lords (or, as from a day to be appointed, the Supreme Court) see PARA 1971 post.

3 Criminal Appeal Act 1968 s 22(2)(a).

4 Ibid s 22(2)(b). See R v Spruce, R v Anwar [2005] EWCA Crim 1090, [2006] 1 Cr App Rep (S) 62, (2005) Times, 5 May (on a renewed application for leave to appeal against sentence, the court not only granted leave but went on to allow the appeal in the appellant's absence; held that, where a defendant's appeal against sentence was allowed on a renewed application, matter could be re-listed at appellant's request for re-consideration in his presence by the same court but court's decision would not be varied at such a second hearing unless there was an entirely fresh matter with an important bearing on sentence).

5 Criminal Appeal Act 1968 s 22(2)(c).

6 Ibid s 22(2)(d).

7 Ibid s 22(2). Application for leave to be present may be made to a single judge: see PARA 1854 ante. An application for such leave must be in the form set out in Practice Direction (Criminal Proceedings: Consolidation) [2002] 3 All ER 904, [2002] 2 Cr App Rep 533, Annex D, CA; Amendment to the Consolidated Practice Direction (Forms for use in criminal proceedings) [2005] 2 All ER 916, [2005] 1 WLR 1479, Annex D, CA and must be served on the Registrar of Criminal Appeals; except that where such a notice of application is given together with a notice of appeal or notice of application for leave to appeal (see PARA 1848 ante), it must be served on a Crown Court officer: CrimPR 68.26(1). Alternatively, application may be made orally to the court: CrimPR 68.26(2).

8 Criminal Appeal Act 1968 s 22(3). If the nature of the sentence requires the presence of the appellant, eg in those cases where a community sentence requires the offender's consent, the court may adjourn so that he may be present or it may require counsel to explain the effect of the order. The Registrar must give as long notice in advance as reasonably possible of the date on which the court will hear any appeal or application by an appellant to: (1) the appellant; (2) any person having custody of him; and (3) any other interested party whom the court requires to be represented at the hearing, except in the case of proceedings before a single judge under the Criminal Appeal Act 1968 s 31 (as amended) (see PARA 1854 ante): CrimPR 68.23.

As to an appellant who has escaped from custody or who, having been granted bail pending the hearing (see PARA 1193 ante) fails to surrender to custody for the hearing of the appeal or application, the normal practice is to adjourn the appeal or application, or to dismiss it according to the justice of the case: R v Flower [1966] 1 QB 146, (1965) 50 Cr App Rep 22, CCA (escape from custody); R v Whiting (1987) 85 Cr App Rep 78, CA (failure to surrender to bail); R v Carter (Eula) (1993) 98 Cr App Rep 106, CA (failure to surrender to bail). However, the Court of Appeal has a discretion, in exceptional circumstances, to hear an appeal where an appellant has escaped from custody: R v Gooch [1998] 1 WLR 1100, [1998] 2 Cr App Rep 130, CA.

UPDATE

1874 Right of appellant to be present at hearing

TEXT AND NOTES--The Court of Appeal may give a live link direction in relation to a hearing at which the appellant is expected to be in custody but is entitled to be present, by virtue of the 1968 Act s 22(1) or leave given under s 22(2), at any time before the beginning of that hearing: s 22(4) (ss 22(4)-(6), 23(5) added by Police and Justice Act 2006 s 48(1), (2)). A 'live link direction' is a direction that the appellant, if he is being held in custody at the time of the hearing, is to attend the hearing through a live link from the place at which he is held and a 'live link' means an arrangement by which the appellant is able to see and hear, and to be seen and heard by, the Court of Appeal, and for this purpose any impairment of eyesight or hearing is to be disregarded: 1968 Act s 22(5). The Court of Appeal must not give a live link direction unless the parties to the appeal have had the opportunity to make representations about the giving of such a direction and may rescind a live link direction at any time before or during any hearing to which it applies, whether of its own motion or on the application of a party: s 22(6). A live link direction under s 22(4) does not apply to the giving of oral evidence by the appellant at any hearing unless that direction, or any subsequent direction of the court, provides expressly for the giving of such evidence through a live link: s 23(5).

APPEALS/(1) APPEAL BY DEFENDANT TO THE COURT OF APPEAL FOLLOWING TRIAL ON INDICTMENT/(iv) Procedure/1875. Disposal of groundless appeals and applications for leave to appeal.

1875. Disposal of groundless appeals and applications for leave to appeal.

If it appears to the Registrar of Criminal Appeals that a notice of appeal or application for leave to appeal does not show any substantial ground of appeal, he may refer the appeal<sup>1</sup> or application for leave to the Court of Appeal for summary determination<sup>2</sup>; and, where the case is so referred, the court may, if it considers that the appeal or application for leave is frivolous<sup>3</sup> or vexatious, and can be determined without adjourning it for a full hearing, dismiss the appeal or application for leave summarily, without calling on anyone to attend the hearing or to appear for the Crown thereon<sup>4</sup>.

1 For the meaning of 'appeal' see PARA 1837 note 4 ante.

2 As to the nature of the Registrar's power to make such a reference see DPP v Majewski [1977] AC 443, sub nom R v Majewski [1975] 3 All ER 296, CA; affd without discussion of this point sub nom DPP v Majewski [1977] AC 443, 62 Cr App Rep 262, HL (decided under the Criminal Appeal Act 1968 s 20 as originally enacted).

3 'Frivolous' must include a ground of appeal which could not possibly succeed on argument: R v Taylor [1979] Crim LR 649, CA (decided under the Criminal Appeal Act 1968 s 20 as originally enacted).

APPEALS/(1) APPEAL BY DEFENDANT TO THE COURT OF APPEAL FOLLOWING TRIAL ON INDICTMENT/(iv) Procedure/1876. Abandonment of appeal.

1876. Abandonment of appeal.

An appeal or an application for leave to appeal<sup>1</sup> may be abandoned before the hearing of the appeal or application by serving on the Registrar of Criminal Appeals notice in the prescribed form<sup>2</sup>. Where an appeal or an application for leave to appeal is so abandoned, it is treated as having been dismissed or refused by the Court of Appeal<sup>3</sup>. Thereafter, the only manner in which such an appeal may be revived is where the appellant is able to put before the court sufficient facts to satisfy it that the purported abandonment is to be treated as a nullity<sup>4</sup>.

<sup>2</sup> CrimPR 68.22(1). The prescribed form of notice is set out in Practice Direction (Criminal Proceedings: Consolidation) [2002] 3 All ER 904, [2002] 2 Cr App Rep 533, Annex D, CA; Amendment to the Consolidated Practice Direction (Forms for use in criminal proceedings) [2005] 2 All ER 916, [2005] 1 WLR 1479, Annex D, CA. As to service of documents see PARA 1862 ante. The notice of abandonment must be signed by or on behalf of the appellant: CrimPR 68.22(2). As soon as practicable after receiving the notice, the Registrar must send a copy of it, indorsed with the date of receipt, to the appellant, the Secretary of State, and to a court officer of the court of trial: CrimPR 68.22(3). An appeal may be abandoned orally as of right immediately after the case is called on but, once an appeal has opened, it cannot be abandoned without leave of the court, nor can one part of it be abandoned (R v Tool (23 October 1961, unreported), CCA; R v De Courcy [1964] 3 All ER 251, 48 Cr App Rep 323, CCA; R v Spicer (1987) 87 Cr App Rep 297, CA). Where, however, an appellant appeals against conviction only, and an appeal against sentence is referred to the court by the Registrar, abandonment of the latter appeal during the hearing may be permitted: R v Spicer supra.

CrimPR 68.22 applies for the purposes of an appeal or application for leave to appeal by an appellant under the Criminal Justice Act 1987 s 9(11) (see PARA 1921 post), the Criminal Procedure and Investigations Act 1996 s 35(1) (preparatory hearings: interlocutory appeals; see PARA 1922 post) as it applies to an appeal or application for leave under the Criminal Appeal Act 1968 Pt I (as amended), except that: (1) a notice thereof must be served on the Registrar in the alternative form set out in Practice Direction (Criminal Proceedings: Consolidation) [2002] 3 All ER 904, [2002] 2 Cr App Rep 533, Annex D, CA; Amendment to the Consolidated Practice Direction (Forms for use in criminal proceedings) [2005] 2 All ER 916, [2005] 1 WLR 1479, Annex D, CA; and (2) the requirement under CrimPR 68.22(3) supra is omitted: CrimPR 65.5.

<sup>4</sup> R v Medway [1976] QB 779, 62 Cr App Rep 85, CA. The notice of abandonment is treated as a nullity where the mind of the appellant did not go with his act of abandonment; and headings such as mistake, fraud, wrong advice, misapprehension etc are to be regarded only as guidelines, the presence of which may justify the exercise of such jurisdiction of the court; they are not exhaustive of the types of case where this jurisdiction may be exercised: R v Medway supra; R v Burt [2004] EWCA Crim 2826, [2005] 1 Archbold News 1. For examples of the exercise of this jurisdiction see R v Pitman (1916) 12 Cr App Rep 14, CCA; R v Sloan (1923) 87 JP 56, CCA; R v Scott (1924) 18 Cr App Rep 10, CCA; R v Van Dyn (1932) 23 Cr App Rep 150, CCA; R v Healey (1956) 40 Cr App Rep 40, CCA; R v Moore [1957] 2 All ER 703n, 41 Cr App Rep 179, CCA; R v Peters (1973) 58 Cr App Rep 328, CA; R v Munisamy [1975] 1 All ER 910, 60 Cr App Rep 289, CA. Since the Criminal Appeal Act 1968, the court has interpreted the rule more strictly: see R v Sutton [1969] 1 All ER 928, 53 Cr App Rep 269, CA. Ignorance of a material fact may constitute a sufficient mistake or misapprehension: R v Noble [1971] 3 All ER 361, 55 Cr App Rep 529, CA (postal strike delaying receipt of notification that leave to appeal had been granted until after appeal had been abandoned); explained in R v Medway supra. Misapprehension of the law is not a sufficient reason for regarding a purported abandonment as a nullity: R v Kempson [1967] Crim LR 230, CA. However, where the appellant did not know what he was doing when he abandoned the appeal, the abandonment was treated as a nullity: R v Lowbridge [1967] Crim LR 656, CA. A deliberate decision to abandon founded on a mistaken view of the law is not enough to vitiate the notice to abandon: R v Medway supra.

The court has applied similar considerations to courts-martial appeals: see R v Condon (1952) 36 Cr App Rep 130, C-MAC; R v Caddy [1959] 3 All ER 138n, 43 Cr App Rep 198, C-MAC. The Divisional Court has also held that the same principles apply to appeals to the Crown Court: R v Essex Quarter Sessions Appeals Committee, ex p Larkin [1962] 1 QB 712, [1961] 3 All ER 1930, DC.

Application for leave to show that a notice of abandonment should be nullified may be made in a letter to the Registrar giving reasons. An application which has been refused or abandoned cannot be further considered by the court: see R v Grantham [1969] 2 QB 574, 53 Cr App Rep 369, C-MAC. See also R v La Plante (19 May 1972, unreported), CA (mistaken abandonment by appellant unable to read or write); R v Brown (5 June 1972, unreported), CA (advice by counsel to renew application received at wrong prison after notice of abandonment sent); in both these cases the court gave leave for the notice of abandonment to be treated as a nullity. The court has refused to interfere with a deliberate abandonment, even though a trial judge's certificate had been granted: R v Najar (21 December 1972, unreported), CA.

There is no inherent jurisdiction enabling the court to give leave in other special circumstances: R v Medway supra; R v Burt supra. The Criminal Cases Review Commission (see PARA 2028 et seq post) may, however, refer the case to the Court of Appeal. Indeed, in R v Burt supra the Court of Appeal invited the appellant to apply to the Commission with all possible speed.

A. APPEALS AGAINST CONVICTION

1877. Ground for allowing an appeal against conviction.

The Court of Appeal: (1) must<sup>1</sup> allow an appeal against conviction<sup>2</sup> if it thinks that the conviction is unsafe<sup>3</sup>; and (2) must dismiss such an appeal in any other case<sup>4</sup>.

In the case of an appeal against conviction, the court must, subject to its powers in special cases<sup>5</sup>, quash the conviction, if it allows the appeal<sup>6</sup>. An order of the court quashing a conviction operates, except when the appellant is ordered<sup>7</sup> to be re-tried, as a direction to the court of trial to enter, instead of the record of conviction, a judgment and verdict of acquittal<sup>8</sup>.

1 See R v E (T) [2004] EWCA Crim 1441, [2004] 2 Cr App Rep 621.

2 'Conviction' includes a conviction resulting from a plea of guilty (see PARA 1837 note 3 ante) and does not merely refer to the final disposal of the proceedings by passing sentence on the defendant (R v Drew [1985] 2 All ER 1061, 81 Cr App Rep 190, CA (defendant appealed against conviction after guilty plea and formal verdict but before sentence which was deferred pending verdicts against co-defendant; Court of Appeal had jurisdiction to entertain the appeal)). See further PARA 1878 post.

3 Criminal Appeal Act 1968 s 2(1)(a) (s 2(1) substituted by the Criminal Appeal Act 1995 s 2(1)).

4 Criminal Appeal Act 1968 s 2(1)(b) (as substituted: see note 3 supra). The Court of Appeal's duties under s 2(1) (as substituted) are subject to the provisions of the Criminal Appeal Act 1968: s 2(1) (as so substituted). Before the substitution of the current version of s 2(1), the Criminal Appeal Act 1968 s 2(1) (as amended by the Criminal Law Act 1977 s 44) provided that the Court of Appeal had to allow an appeal against conviction if it thought that: (1) the conviction should be set aside on the ground that under all the circumstances of the case it was unsafe or unsatisfactory; (2) the judgment of the court of trial should be set aside on the ground of a wrong decision of any question of law; or (3) there had been a material irregularity in the course of the trial; and in any other case had to dismiss the appeal. However, notwithstanding that the court was of opinion that the point raised in the appeal might be decided in favour of the appellant, it could dismiss the appeal if it considered that no miscarriage of justice had actually occurred.

APPEALS/(1) APPEAL BY DEFENDANT TO THE COURT OF APPEAL FOLLOWING TRIAL ON INDICTMENT/(v) Determination of Appeals/A. APPEALS AGAINST CONVICTION/1878. Conviction unsafe.

1878. Conviction unsafe.

In order to establish that a conviction<sup>1</sup> is unsafe<sup>2</sup>, it will not generally be sufficient to show that the case against the appellant was a weak one<sup>3</sup>, or that the verdict was against the weight of the evidence<sup>4</sup>, or that the judge of the court of trial felt some doubt about it and has given a certificate on that ground<sup>5</sup>.

If the Court of Appeal concludes that, for whatever reason, the appellant was wrongly convicted of the offence charged, or is left in doubt as to whether he was rightly convicted of that offence, it must of necessity quash the conviction on the ground that it is unsafe, but if it is satisfied that, despite any misdirection (or other judicial error) or irregularity in the conduct of the trial or any fresh evidence, the conviction was safe, it will not quash the conviction<sup>6</sup>.

Normally, the reason why the Court of Appeal holds that a verdict is unsafe is because an error or irregularity at trial is such that it is not satisfied that, had the error or irregularity not occurred, the jury would still have convicted the appellant<sup>7</sup>. However, in exceptional cases, including those where fresh evidence is admitted, the Court may quash a conviction even though there has been no error or irregularity at trial on the ground that it has a lurking doubt about the appellant's guilt<sup>8</sup>.

The Court of Appeal may also hold that a verdict is unsafe on grounds which do not relate to whether the defendant is guilty of the offence of which he was convicted, for example, on grounds that there has been a material irregularity, such as abuse of process<sup>9</sup>, that the indictment is duplicitous or otherwise defective<sup>10</sup>, or that a count in question was improperly included or joined in the indictment<sup>11</sup>.

The Court of Appeal may quash a conviction as unsafe even though the appellant pleaded guilty at his trial. However, the conviction may be quashed as unsafe in such a case only in exceptional circumstances. For example, because the appellant did not appreciate the nature of the charge or did not intend to admit that he was guilty of it<sup>12</sup>, because erroneous legal advice had been received by the defendant which went to the heart of the plea of guilty, so that that plea was not a true acknowledgement of guilt<sup>13</sup>, or because the appellant's plea of guilty or change of plea to guilty was a result of an erroneous ruling on a point of law by the trial judge<sup>14</sup>, but only where the erroneous ruling had rendered acquittal legally impossible, rather than where it made the case against the appellant factually overwhelming<sup>15</sup>. A conviction founded on a guilty plea may also be quashed as unsafe on the basis that on the admitted facts the appellant could not in law be convicted of the offence charged<sup>16</sup>.

There can be other circumstances where a conviction founded on a guilty plea may be quashed as unsafe, for example, where the appellant pleaded guilty because of improper pressure from the trial judge<sup>17</sup> or in the light of fresh evidence exceptionally admitted<sup>18</sup> by the Court of Appeal in the interests of justice<sup>19</sup>, or where there has been a material irregularity<sup>20</sup>.

A conviction will be quashed if there has been a violation of the right<sup>21</sup> to a fair trial by an independent and impartial tribunal<sup>22</sup>, but not if there has been a breach of the right<sup>23</sup> to a trial within a reasonable time unless the trial has been unfair or it was unfair to try the defendant at all<sup>24</sup>. The mere fact that a trial has been found to be unfair by the European Court of Human Rights does not necessarily make the conviction unsafe<sup>25</sup>.

- 8 The court must in the end ask itself a subjective question, whether it is content to let the matter stand as it is, or whether there is not some lurking doubt in its mind which makes it wonder whether an injustice has been done. This reaction may not be based strictly on the evidence; it is a reaction which can be produced by the general feel of the case as the court experiences it: R v Cooper [1969] 1 QB 267 at 271, 53 Cr App Rep 82 at 85-86, CA, per Widgery LJ (approved in Stafford and Luvaglio v DPP [1974] AC 878, 58 Cr App Rep 256, HL, which was itself followed in R v Puddleton [2001] UKHL 66, [2002] 1 WLR 72, [2002] 1 Cr App Rep 441). The following are examples of where a verdict may be held unsafe because an error or irregularity at trial is such that the Court of Appeal is not satisfied that had it not occurred the jury would still have convicted the appellant:

- 2362 (1) misdirection or non-direction on law<sup>1</sup>;
- 2363 (2) wrongful withdrawal of issue of fact<sup>2</sup>;

- 2367 (6) prejudicial publicity before or during trial<sup>6</sup>;
- 2368 (7) prosecution failure to comply with duty of disclosure<sup>7</sup>;
- 2369 (8) lack of jurisdiction on part of the Crown Court<sup>8</sup>;

- 2371 (10) inconsistent verdicts, whether at the same trial or at different trials<sup>10</sup>;

1880. Disposal of appeal against conviction on special verdict.

On an appeal<sup>1</sup> against conviction by a person in a case where the jury has found a special verdict<sup>2</sup>, the Court of Appeal may, if it considers that a wrong conclusion has been arrived at by the court of trial on the effect of the jury's verdict, instead of allowing the appeal, order such conclusion to be recorded as appears to it to be in law required by the verdict, and pass such sentence in substitution for that passed at the trial as may be authorised by law<sup>3</sup>.

APPEALS/(1) APPEAL BY DEFENDANT TO THE COURT OF APPEAL FOLLOWING TRIAL ON INDICTMENT/(v) Determination of Appeals/A. APPEALS AGAINST CONVICTION/1881. Power to substitute conviction for alternative offence.

1881. Power to substitute conviction for alternative offence.

On an appeal against conviction, where the appellant<sup>1</sup> has been convicted of an offence to which he did not plead guilty and the jury could on the indictment have found him guilty of some other offence<sup>2</sup>, and on the jury's finding it appears to the Court of Appeal that the jury must have been satisfied of facts which proved him guilty of the other offence, the court may, instead of allowing or dismissing the appeal, substitute for the verdict found by the jury a verdict of guilty of that other offence, and pass such sentence in substitution for the sentence passed at the trial as may be authorised by law for the other offence, not being a sentence of greater severity<sup>3</sup>.

1 For the meanings of 'appeal' and 'appellant' see PARA 1837 note 4 ante.

2 I.e: (1) under an alternative verdict provision, such as the Criminal Law Act 1967 s 6(3) (see PARA 1335 ante); or (2) under an alternative count (see PARA 1335 et seq ante). As to head (1) supra see eg R v Spratt [1980] 2 All ER 269, 71 Cr App Rep 125, CA (murder charged in indictment; defendant convicted thereof; manslaughter verdict substituted); R v Worton (1990) 154 JP 201, [1990] Crim LR 124, CA (violent disorder charged in indictment; defendant convicted thereof; affray verdict substituted). Head (2) supra is concerned with where the facts alleged by the prosecution did not in law amount to the offence in the count in respect of which the defendant was convicted but do amount to the offence in an alternative count. It is essential, for the Criminal Appeal Act 1968 s 3 (as amended) to apply, that the jury was discharged from giving a verdict on the alternative count in respect of which the substitution of a verdict is sought; a verdict for the offence in the alternative count cannot be substituted if the defendant was acquitted of it: R v Melvin [1953] 1 QB 481, 37 Cr App Rep 1, CCA; R v Seymour [1954] 1 All ER 1006, 38 Cr App Rep 68, CCA. Although the Criminal Appeal Act 1968 s 3 (as amended) does not apply if the defendant pleaded guilty, a verdict may be substituted under the Criminal Appeal Act 1968 s 3A (as added) (see PARA 1882 post).

3 Ibid s 3(1), (2) (amended by the Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 316(1), (2)). The Criminal Appeal Act 1968 s 3 (as amended) substantially re-enacts the Criminal Appeal Act 1907 s 5(2) (repealed).

Where the defendant has been convicted of an offence after the prosecution has refused to accept a plea of guilty to some other offence and the conviction is quashed on appeal, the Court of Appeal has power to substitute a conviction for that other offence if the jury must have been satisfied of facts proving guilt of the other offence: R v Blackford (1989) 89 Cr App Rep 239, CA.

Before the Court of Appeal can substitute one verdict for another, it must be sure that the jury was satisfied of the facts which proved the defendant guilty of the other offence: R v Caslin [1961] 1 All ER 246, 45 Cr App Rep 47, CCA; R v Porritt [1961] 3 All ER 463, 45 Cr App Rep 348, CCA; R v Smith [1962] 2 QB 317, 46 Cr App Rep 277, CCA. Further, the jury must have been satisfied on evidence which was properly admitted: R v Deacon [1973] 2 All ER 1145, 57 Cr App Rep 688, CA. Cf R v Scaramanga [1963] 2 QB 807, 47 Cr App Rep 213, CCA; R v Holley (1969) 53 Cr App Rep 519, CA. See also R v Collins (1922) 128 LT 31, 17 Cr App Rep 42, CCA; R v Spratt [1980] 2 All ER 269, 71 Cr App Rep 125, CA.

In R v Weekes [1999] 2 Cr App Rep 520, [1999] Crim LR 907, CA, a conviction of manslaughter on grounds of diminished responsibility was substituted for a conviction of murder, even though there had been no evidence of diminished responsibility before the jury, after the Court of Appeal admitted such evidence. The court held that the indictment was sufficiently widely drawn to permit a conviction of manslaughter and that the evidence led at the trial must have satisfied the jury that the appellant killed the victim deliberately and unlawfully; thus, it held, the jury could have found him guilty of manslaughter even though they could not, on the evidence before them, have done so by virtue of the provisions relating to diminished responsibility.

The Court of Appeal can substitute a verdict of guilty of another offence, even though the jury was not directed about the possibility of an alternative verdict: R v Caslin [1961] 1 All ER 246, 45 Cr App Rep 47, CCA. However, the fact that the jury did not have a proper direction about the alternative offence is a highly relevant consideration in deciding whether to exercise the jurisdiction to substitute an alternative verdict (R v Caslin supra; R v Cooke [1997] Crim LR 436, CA), as is the question whether there are reasonable grounds for concluding that had the appellant been charged with the other offence, the conduct of the defence would have been materially affected (R v Graham [1997] 1 Cr App Rep 302, CA). The Court of Appeal must be satisfied that an alternative verdict provision is fulfilled; it cannot apply a different test: R v Cooke supra.

The discretion under the Criminal Appeal Act 1968 s 3 (as amended) is a wide one and as such it will be inappropriate to substitute a conviction for a variety of reasons, for instance where it would bring about injustice or prejudice of some kind, or where it would amount to an abuse of process. However, the discretion should be exercised on the procedural and evidential history of the case and not the personal circumstances of the applicant: R v Peterson [1997] Crim LR 339, CA.

Where it is submitted that a verdict of guilty of another offence should be substituted, the prosecution should provide the court with a draft count in respect of that offence: R v Graham supra.

- 2375 (1) an appellant<sup>2</sup> has been convicted of an offence to which he pleaded guilty<sup>3</sup>;
- 2376 (2) if he had not so pleaded, he could on the indictment have pleaded, or been found, guilty of some other offence<sup>4</sup>; and
- 2377 (3) it appears to the Court of Appeal that the plea of guilty indicates an admission by the appellant of facts which prove him guilty of the other offence<sup>5</sup>, the Court of Appeal may, instead of allowing or dismissing the appeal, substitute for the appellant's plea of guilty a plea of guilty of the other offence and pass such sentence in substitution for the sentence passed at the trial as may be authorised by law for the other offence, not being a sentence of greater severity<sup>6</sup>.

Where, on an appeal<sup>1</sup> against conviction, the Court of Appeal, on the written or oral evidence of two or more registered medical practitioners at least one of whom is duly approved<sup>2</sup>, is of opinion: (1) that the proper verdict would have been one of not guilty by reason of insanity<sup>3</sup>; or (2) that the case is not one where there should have been a verdict of acquittal, but that there should have been findings that the defendant was under disability<sup>4</sup> and that he did the act or made the omission charged against him<sup>5</sup>, the court must make in respect of the defendant:

- 2378 (a) a hospital order<sup>6</sup> (with or without a restriction order)<sup>7</sup>;
- 2379 (b) a supervision order<sup>8</sup>; or
- 2380 (c) an order for his absolute discharge<sup>9</sup>.

An issue of insanity may be raised on appeal even if not pleaded at the trial<sup>10</sup>.

1 For the meaning of 'appeal' see PARA 1837 note 4 ante.

2 'Duly approved', in relation to a registered medical practitioner, means approved for the purposes of the Mental Health Act 1983 s 12 by the Secretary of State as having special experience in the diagnosis or treatment of mental disorder (MENTAL HEALTH vol 30(2) (Reissue) PARA 482): Criminal Appeal Act 1968 s 51(1) (definition added by the Criminal Procedure (Insanity and Unfitness to Plead) Act 1991 s 7, Sch 3 para 5(1)). 'Registered medical practitioner' means a fully registered person within the meaning of the Medical Act 1983 (see MEDICINE, PHARMACY, DRUGS AND MEDICINAL PRODUCTS vol 30(1) (Reissue) PARA 3): Criminal Appeal Act 1968 s 51(1) (definition added by the Criminal Procedure (Insanity and Unfitness to Plead) Act 1991 Sch 3 para 5(1)). As from a day to be appointed, the words 'who holds a licence to practise' are added after the words 'the Medical Act 1983' by the Medical Act 1983 (Amendment) Order 2002, SI 2002/3135, art 16(1), Sch 1 para 6. 6 'Hospital order' has the meaning given in the Mental Health Act 1983 s 37 (see MENTAL HEALTH vol 30(2) (Reissue) PARA 491; and SENTENCING AND DISPOSITION OF OFFENDERS vol 92 (2010) PARA 332): Criminal Appeal Act 1968 ss 6(7), 51(2) (s 6(7) added by the Domestic Violence, Crime and Victims Act 2004 s 24(3); the Criminal Appeal Act 1968 s 51(2) amended by the Mental Health Act 1983 s 148, Sch 4 para 23(j); and the Health Act 1999 (Supplementary, Consequential etc Provisions) Order 2000, SI 2000/90, art 3(2), Sch 2 para 1).

Where the Court of Appeal makes an interim hospital order by virtue of the Criminal Appeal Act 1968 s 14 (as substituted and amended) (see PARA 1889 post): (1) the power of renewing or terminating it and of dealing with the appellant on its termination is exercisable by the court below and not by the Court of Appeal; and (2) the court below is to be treated for the purposes of the Mental Health Act 1983 s 38(7) (absconding offenders: see MENTAL HEALTH vol 30(2) (Reissue) PARA 494; and SENTENCING AND DISPOSITION OF OFFENDERS vol 92 (2010) PARA 334) as the court that made the order: Criminal Appeal Act 1968 s 6(5) (added by the Domestic Violence, Crime and Victims Act 2004 s 24(3)). 'Interim hospital order' has the meaning given in the Mental Health Act 1983 s 38 (see MENTAL HEALTH vol 30(2) (Reissue) PARA 491; and SENTENCING AND DISPOSITION OF OFFENDERS vol 92 (2010) PARA 334): Criminal Appeal Act 1968 s 6(7) (added by the Domestic Violence, Crime and Victims Act 2004 s 24(3)).

8 Ibid s 6(2)(b) (as substituted: see note 7 supra). 'Supervision order' has the meaning given in the Criminal Procedure (Insanity) Act 1964 s 5A, Sch 1A Pt 1 (as added) (see SENTENCING AND DISPOSITION OF OFFENDERS vol 92 (2010) PARA 368): Criminal Appeal Act 1968 s 6(7) (as added: see note 6 supra). Where the Court of Appeal makes a supervision order by virtue of s 6 (as amended), any power of revoking or amending it is exercisable as if the order had been made by the court below: s 6(6) (added by the Domestic Violence, Crime and Victims Act 2004 s 24(3)).

9 Criminal Appeal Act 1968 s 6(2)(c) (as substituted: see note 7 supra). Where the offence to which the appeal relates is an offence the sentence for which is fixed by law (see SENTENCING AND DISPOSITION OF OFFENDERS vol 92 (2010) PARA 15), and the court has power to make a hospital order, the court must make a hospital order with a restriction order (whether or not it would otherwise have power to make a restriction order: s 6(3) (substituted by the Domestic Violence, Crime and Victims Act 2004 s 24(3)). The Mental Health Act 1983 s 54(2), (3) has effect with respect to proof of the appellant's mental condition for the purposes of the Criminal Appeal Act 1968 s 6 (as amended) or s 14 (as substituted and amended) (see PARA 1889 post) as it has effect with respect to proof of an offender's mental condition for the purposes of the Mental Health Act 1959 s 37(2)(a) (see SENTENCING AND DISPOSITION OF OFFENDERS vol 92 (2010) PARA 333 head (1)): Criminal Appeal Act 1968 s 51(2A) (added by the Criminal Procedure (Insanity and Unfitness to Plead) Act 1991 s 7, Sch 3 para 5(2); and amended by the Domestic Violence, Crime and Victims Act 2004 s 58(1), Sch 10 para 6). ### 1884. Adjustment of sentence when appeal allowed on part of indictment.

Where, on an appeal<sup>1</sup> against conviction on an indictment containing two or more counts, the Court of Appeal allows the appeal in respect of part of the indictment, it may in respect of any count on which the appellant<sup>2</sup> remains convicted pass such sentence in substitution for any sentence, passed thereon at the trial<sup>3</sup>, as it thinks proper and is authorised by law for the offence of which he remains convicted on that count<sup>4</sup>. However, the court may not pass any sentence such that the appellant's sentence on the indictment as a whole will, in consequence of the appeal, be of greater severity than the sentence (taken as a whole) which was passed at the trial for all offences of which he was convicted on the indictment<sup>5</sup>.

B. APPEALS AGAINST FINDING OF DISABILITY

1886. Disposal of appeal against finding of disability etc.

A person may appeal against either or both findings that he is under a disability<sup>1</sup> and that he did the act or made the omission charged against him<sup>2</sup>, with the leave of the Court of Appeal or if the trial judge has granted a certificate<sup>3</sup>. Where a person has so appealed, the Court of Appeal must allow the appeal if it thinks that the finding is unsafe; and must dismiss such an appeal in any other case<sup>4</sup>.

Where, however, the Court of Appeal allows such an appeal against a finding that the appellant is under a disability, the appellant may be tried accordingly for the offence with which he was charged; and the court may<sup>5</sup> make such orders as appear to it necessary or expedient pending any such trial for his custody, release on bail or continued detention<sup>6</sup>.

Where, otherwise than in such a case<sup>7</sup>, the Court of Appeal allows such an appeal against a finding that the appellant did the act or made the omission charged against him, the court must, in addition to quashing the finding, direct a verdict of acquittal to be recorded (but not a verdict of not guilty by reason of insanity)<sup>8</sup>.

The reference to continued detention is to such detention under the Mental Health Act 1983: Criminal Appeal Act 1968 s 16(3) (as so substituted). A person in whose case a verdict of not guilty by reason of insanity is returned<sup>1</sup> may appeal to the Court of Appeal against the verdict, with the leave of the Court of Appeal or if the trial judge grants a certificate<sup>2</sup>.

The court must allow such an appeal if it thinks that the verdict is unsafe; and must dismiss such an appeal in any other case<sup>3</sup>.

Where such an appeal would fall to be allowed and none of the grounds for allowing it relates to the question of the insanity of the defendant, the Court of Appeal may dismiss the appeal if it is of opinion that, but for the insanity of the defendant, the proper verdict would have been that he was guilty of an offence other than the offence charged<sup>4</sup>.

Where an appeal against a verdict of not guilty by reason of insanity<sup>1</sup> is allowed:

- 2381 (1) if the ground, or one of the grounds, for allowing the appeal is that the jury's finding as to the defendant's insanity ought not to stand, and the Court of Appeal is of opinion that the proper verdict would have been that he was guilty of an offence (whether the offence charged or any other offence of which the jury could have found him guilty), the court: (a) must substitute for the verdict of not guilty by reason of insanity a verdict of guilty of that offence; and (b) has like powers of punishing or otherwise dealing with the appellant, and other powers, as the court of trial would have had if the jury had come to the substituted verdict<sup>2</sup>;
- 2382 (2) in any other case, the Court of Appeal must substitute for the verdict of the jury a verdict of acquittal<sup>3</sup>.

- 2383 (1) a hospital order<sup>5</sup> (with or without a restriction order)<sup>6</sup>;

(vi) Venire de Novo and Re-trial

1895. Venire de novo.

Where the Court of Appeal holds that the appellant's trial has been a nullity, it has power to order that he be tried on the indictment in question<sup>1</sup>. In such a case a writ of venire de novo may be issued if there has been an irregularity of procedure which results in there having been no trial validly commenced, and also if the trial has ended without a properly constituted jury having returned a valid verdict<sup>2</sup>. An irregularity in the course of the trial occurring between the time it was validly commenced and the discharge of the jury after returning a verdict does not fall within the scope of venire de novo<sup>3</sup>.

Where a venire de novo is ordered, the parties stand precisely as they did before the first trial and the whole of the facts are reheard<sup>4</sup>. The order is that the conviction and judgment be set aside and annulled<sup>5</sup>. The court has no power to order a venire de novo by reason of a mistrial after a verdict of not guilty has been recorded, however improperly that verdict has been obtained<sup>6</sup>.

1 The Court of Appeal inherited the jurisdiction exercised by the former Court of Criminal Appeal immediately before it ceased to exist and this was expressed specifically to include jurisdiction to order the issue of writs of venire de novo: see the Criminal Appeal Act 1966 s 1(2)(b)(ii) (amended by the Criminal Appeal Act 1968 s 52(1), Sch 5 Pt I) (repealed). See now the Supreme Court Act 1981 s 53(2)(d) which provides that the Court of Appeal Criminal Division must exercise the jurisdiction to issue writs of venire de novo. As from a day to be appointed, the Supreme Court Act 1981 is renamed the Senior Courts Act 1981: see the Constitutional Reform Act 2005 s 59(5), Sch 11 para 1. At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed.

4 The terms 'venire de novo' and 're-trial' are used in different senses in modern legislation; cf para 1896 post; and see R v Turner (No 2) [1971] 2 All ER 441, 55 Cr App Rep 336, CA (cited infra). 'Venire de novo' means an order on the appellant to attend and take his trial again in respect of the charge that lies against him, to plead to the indictment and to be tried on it according to law: R v Olivo [1942] 2 All ER 494 at 495, 28 Cr App Rep 173 at 176, CCA.

Venire de novo will not be ordered in every case involving nullity: see R v Gash [1967] 1 All ER 811, 51 Cr App Rep 37, CA (appellant had almost served his sentence). The court may simply quash the conviction: see R v King (1920) 15 Cr App Rep 13, CCA; R v McDonnell (1928) 20 Cr App Rep 163, CCA; R v Wilde (1933) 24 Cr App Rep 98, CCA; R v Gee, R v Bibby, R v Dunscombe [1936] 2 KB 442, 25 Cr App Rep 198, CCA; R v Brennan (1941) 28 Cr App Rep 41, CCA; R v Olivo supra; R v Heyes [1951] 1 KB 29, 34 Cr App Rep 161, CCA; R v Lamb [1969] 1 All ER 45, [1968] 1 WLR 1946, CA; R v Braden (1987) 87 Cr App Rep 289, CA; R v Lewis (1988) 87 Cr App Rep 270, CA; R v Newland [1988] QB 402, 87 Cr App Rep 118, CA. The restriction on passing a sentence of greater severity on a re-trial (see PARA 1897 post) is inapplicable where a venire de novo has been ordered: R v Turner (No 2) supra. The court may also order a venire de novo where sentence was passed on a count to which the defendant did not plead (see R v Brennan supra).

5 Where there has been a mistrial and no valid conviction it is a contradiction in terms to 'quash' that conviction because in law it never existed: R v Booth; R v Molland; R v Wood [1999] 1 Cr App Rep 457, [1999] Crim LR 413, CA. APPEALS/(1) APPEAL BY DEFENDANT TO THE COURT OF APPEAL FOLLOWING TRIAL ON INDICTMENT/(vi) Venire de Novo and Re-trial/1896. Re-trial.

1896. Re-trial.

Where the Court of Appeal allows an appeal<sup>1</sup> against conviction and it appears to the court that the interests of justice so require<sup>2</sup>, it may order the appellant to be re-tried<sup>3</sup>.

A person who is to be re-tried must be tried on a fresh indictment preferred by direction of the Court of Appeal; but after the end of two months from the date of the order for re-trial he may not be arraigned on an indictment preferred in pursuance of such a direction unless the Court of Appeal gives leave<sup>4</sup>. Where a person has been ordered to be re-tried but may not be arraigned without leave, he may apply to the Court of Appeal to set aside the order for re-trial and to direct the court of trial<sup>5</sup> to enter a judgment and verdict of acquittal of the offence for which he was ordered to be re-tried<sup>6</sup>. On any such application<sup>7</sup> the Court of Appeal has power to grant leave to arraign or to set aside the order for re-trial and to direct the entry of a judgment and verdict of acquittal, but may not give leave to arraign unless it is satisfied that the prosecution has acted with all due<sup>8</sup> expedition and that there is a good and sufficient cause for a re-trial in spite of the lapse of time since the order<sup>9</sup> for re-trial was made<sup>10</sup>.

However, a person may not be ordered so to be re-tried for any offence other than:

- 2402 (1) the offence of which he was convicted at the original trial and in respect of which his appeal is allowed<sup>11</sup>;
- 2403 (2) an offence of which he could have been convicted at the original trial on an indictment for the first-mentioned offence<sup>12</sup>; or
- 2404 (3) an offence charged in an alternative count of the indictment in respect of which no verdict was given in consequence of his being convicted of the first-mentioned offence<sup>13</sup>.

On ordering a re-trial the Court of Appeal may make such orders as appear to it to be necessary or expedient for the custody or<sup>14</sup> release on bail<sup>15</sup> of the person ordered to be re-tried pending his re-trial, or for the retention pending the re-trial of any property or money forfeited, restored or paid by virtue of the original conviction or any order made on that conviction<sup>16</sup>.

1 For the meanings of 'appeal' and 'appellant' see PARA 1837 note 4 ante.

2 The condition that the interests of justice require a re-trial requires an exercise of judgment, and will involve consideration of the public interest and the legitimate interests of the defendant. The public interest is generally served by the prosecution of those reasonably suspected on available evidence of serious crime, if such prosecution can be conducted without unfairness to or oppression of the defendant. The legitimate interests of the defendant will often call for consideration of the time which has passed since the alleged offence, and any penalty the defendant may already have paid before the quashing of the conviction: R v Graham [1997] 1 Cr App Rep 302 at 318, CA, per Lord Bingham CJ. As to lapse of time, contrast R v Saunders (1973) 58 Cr App Rep 248, CA (re-trial because appeal not determined until three-and-a-half years after the offence and appellant had been in prison for a number of years) with R v Grafton [1993] QB 101, [1992] 4 All ER 609, CA (re-trial ordered two years after offence; Court of Appeal pointed out that it was now much more common for trials to take longer coming to court). Also see R v Stone [2001] EWCA Crim 297, [2001] Crim LR 465, CA (re-trial should be refused on ground of adverse publicity subsequent to conviction only if Court of Appeal satisfied on the balance of probabilities that a verdict of guilty at a re-trial would be unsafe). As to whether or not to order a re-trial after the receipt of additional evidence (see PARA 1867 ante) see R v Flower, R

3 Criminal Appeal Act 1968 s 7(1) (amended by the Criminal Justice Act 1988 ss 43(1), (2), 170(2), Sch 16). Formerly the court's power to order a re-trial was confined to cases where appeal was allowed only by reason of evidence received or available to be received under the Criminal Appeal Act 1968 s 23 (see PARA 1866 et seq ante). Re-trial may now be ordered where eg the trial judge made a wrong decision of law. The re-trial takes place at the Crown Court: see the Supreme Court Act 1981 s 46(1); and PARA 1232 ante. As from a day to be appointed the Supreme Court Act 1981 is renamed the Senior Courts Act 1981: see the Constitutional Reform Act 2005 s 59(5), Sch 11 para 1. At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed. As to the custody of exhibits pending re-trial see PARA 1858 ante.

The Court of Appeal does not have power to order that an arraignment on the new indictment should take place in a specified period less than the two-month period specified by the Criminal Appeal Act 1968 s 8(1): R v Khan [2001] EWCA Crim 486, [2001] 4 Archbold News 3.

The Criminal Appeal Act 1968 s 7(2) (as amended) does not exclude the power of the trial judge at the re-trial to permit the amendment of the indictment preferred by direction of the Court of Appeal, provided that that power is exercised in accordance with the underlying purpose of s 7 (as amended), namely to permit the court to order a re-trial while at the same time protecting the defendant by ensuring that he is not put in a worse position than at the original trial: R v Hemmings [2000] 2 All ER 155, [2000] 1 Cr App Rep 360, CA.

If the person ordered to be re-tried was, immediately before the determination of his appeal, liable to be detained in pursuance of an order or direction under the Mental Health Act 1983 Pt III (ss 35-55) (as amended) (excluding ss 35, 36 or 38), that order or direction continues in force pending the re-trial as if the appeal had not been allowed, and any order made by the Court of Appeal under the Criminal Appeal Act 1968 s 8 (as amended) for his custody or release on bail has effect subject to the former order or direction: ibid s 8(3) (amended by the Bail Act 1976 s 12(1), Sch 2 para 38; and the Mental Health Act 1983 s 148(1), Sch 4 para 23(b)). If the person ordered to be re-tried was, immediately before the determination of his appeal, liable to be detained in pursuance of a remand under the Mental Health Act 1983 s 36, or an interim hospital order under s

38, the Court of Appeal may, if it thinks fit, order that he must continue to be detained in a hospital or mental nursing home, and in that event Pt III (as amended) applies as if he had been ordered under the Criminal Appeal Act 1968 s 8 (as amended) to be kept in custody pending his re-trial and were detained in pursuance of a transfer direction together with a restriction direction: ibid s 8(3A) (added by the Mental Health (Amendment) Act 1982 s 65(1), Sch 3 para 36; and amended by the Mental Health Act 1983 Sch 4 para 23(c)). APPEALS/(1) APPEAL BY DEFENDANT TO THE COURT OF APPEAL FOLLOWING TRIAL ON INDICTMENT/(vi) Venire de Novo and Re-trial/1897. Evidence and procedure on re-trial.

1897. Evidence and procedure on re-trial.

Evidence given at a re-trial must be given orally if it was given orally at the original trial, unless: (1) all the parties to the re-trial agree otherwise; or (2) the witness is unavailable and prescribed requirements apply<sup>1</sup>.

Where a person ordered to be re-tried is again convicted on the re-trial, the court before which he is convicted may pass in respect of the offence any sentence authorised by law, not being a sentence of greater severity than that passed on the original conviction<sup>2</sup>. Without prejudice to its power to impose any other sentence, the court before which an offender is convicted on re-trial may pass in respect of the offence any sentence passed in respect of that offence notwithstanding that, on the date of the conviction on re-trial, the offender has ceased to be of an age at which such a sentence could otherwise be passed<sup>3</sup>.

Where the person convicted on re-trial is sentenced to imprisonment or other detention, the sentence begins to run from the time when a like sentence passed at the original trial would have begun to run; but in computing the term of his sentence or the period for which he may be detained thereunder, as the case may be, there are to be disregarded:

- 2405 (a) any time before his conviction on re-trial which would have been disregarded in computing that term or period if the sentence had been passed at the original trial and the original conviction had not been quashed<sup>4</sup>; and
- 2406 (b) any time during which he was released<sup>5</sup> on bail<sup>6</sup>.

The Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 240 (crediting of periods of remand in custody: terms of imprisonment and detention: see SENTENCING AND DISPOSITION OF OFFENDERS vol 92 (2010) PARA 36) applies to any sentence imposed on conviction on a re-trial as if it had been imposed on the original conviction: Criminal Appeal Act 1968 Sch 2 para 2(4) (amended by the Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 304, Sch 32 paras 7, 10. APPEALS/(2) APPEAL TO THE COURT OF APPEAL BY THE PROSECUTION/(i) Introduction/1898.
The prosecution's rights of appeal.

(2) APPEAL TO THE COURT OF APPEAL BY THE PROSECUTION

(i) Introduction

1898. The prosecution's rights of appeal.

In relation to a trial on indictment, the prosecution has the right to appeal to the Court of Appeal<sup>1</sup>:

- 2407 (1) in respect of rulings<sup>2</sup>; and
- 2408 (2) in respect of evidentiary rulings<sup>3</sup>.

For these purposes, 'ruling' includes a decision, determination, direction, finding, notice, order, refusal, rejection or requirement<sup>4</sup>. Such an appeal may be brought only with the leave of the judge of the Crown Court or the Court of Appeal<sup>5</sup>.

1 Subject to rules of court made under the Supreme Court Act 1981 s 53(1) (power by rules to distribute business of Court of Appeal between its criminal and civil division), the jurisdiction of the Court of Appeal under the Criminal Justice Act 2003 Pt 9 (ss 57-74) (as amended) is to be exercised by the criminal division of that court, and references in Pt 9 (as amended) are to be construed as references to that division: s 74(6). As from a day to be appointed the Supreme Court Act 1981 is renamed the Senior Courts Act 1981: see the Constitutional Reform Act 2005 s 59(5), Sch 11 para 1. At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed.

2 Ie under the Criminal Justice Act 2003 ss 58-61 (see PARA 1899 et seq post). Examples of the rulings concerned are 'terminating rulings' ie rulings which will have the effect of bringing proceedings for an offence to an end, eg following a successful submission of no case to answer or a stay of proceedings, and 'public interest rulings', ie rulings that it is in the public interest to disclose material in the possession of the prosecution.

3 Ibid s 57(1), (3). The relevant provisions relating to evidentiary rulings are contained in ss 62-66 (see PARAS 1914-1916 post) (not yet in force). The prosecution has no right of appeal under Pt 9 (as amended) in respect of: (1) a ruling that a jury be discharged; or (2) a ruling from which an appeal lies to the Court of Appeal by virtue of any other enactment: s 57(2).

Rules of court may make such provision as appears to the authority making them to be necessary or expedient for the purposes of Pt 9 (as amended): s 73(1). Without limiting s 73(1), rules of court may in particular make provision:

150 (a) for time limits which are to apply in connection with any provisions of Pt 9 (as amended) (s 73(2)(a));

151 (b) as to procedures to be applied in connection with Pt 9 (as amended) (s 73(2)(b));

152 (c) enabling a single judge of the Court of Appeal to give leave to appeal under Pt 9 (as amended) or to exercise the power of the Court of Appeal under s 58(12) (s 73(2)(c)).

Nothing in s 73 is to be taken as affecting the generality of any enactment conferring powers to make rules of court: s 73(3).

4 Ibid s 74(1).

5 Ibid s 57(4). The prosecutor must inform the judge of the court immediately after the ruling or the adjournment if he intends to seek leave to appeal against a ruling (ie under head (a) in the text) and at the same time he may apply orally for leave to appeal: CrimPR 66.3(1). Before deciding whether or not to grant leave to appeal, the judge of the court must hear oral representations from the defendant: CrimPR 66.3(2). The judge of the court must decide whether or not to give leave to appeal on the same day on which an oral application for leave to appeal is made to that judge: CrimPR 66.3(3). The judge of the court may extend the period under CrimPR 66.3(3) only if it is in the interests of justice to do so: CrimPR 66.3(4). If the judge of the court gives leave to appeal he must issue a certificate in the form set out in Practice Direction (Criminal Proceedings: Consolidation) [2002] 3 All ER 904, [2002] 2 Cr App Rep 533, Annex D, CA; Amendment to the Consolidated Practice Direction (Forms for use in criminal proceedings) [2005] 2 All ER 916, [2005] 1 WLR 1479, Annex D, CA, and the court officer must forward that certificate to the Registrar: CrimPR 66.3(5).

The power of the Court of Appeal to grant leave under the Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 57(4) may be exercised by a single judge: CrimPR 66.11(1)(a). See further PARA 1907 post.

As from a day to be appointed, in its application to a trial on indictment in respect of which an order under the Domestic Violence, Crime and Victims Act 2004 s 17(2) (trial by jury of sample counts: see PARA 1285 ante), the Criminal Justice Act 2003 Pt 9 (as amended) has effect with such modifications as the Secretary of State may by order specify: s 74(7) (prospectively added by the Domestic Violence, Crime and Victims Act 2004 s 58(1), Sch 10 para 62). At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed. As to such an order see PARA 90 note 6 ante.

APPEALS/(2) APPEAL TO THE COURT OF APPEAL BY THE PROSECUTION/(ii) Appeal against Ruling/1899. General right of appeal in respect of rulings.

(ii) Appeal against Ruling

1899. General right of appeal in respect of rulings.

Where a judge<sup>1</sup> makes a ruling<sup>2</sup> in relation to a trial on indictment at an applicable time<sup>3</sup> and the ruling relates to one or more offences included in the indictment, the prosecution may appeal in respect of the ruling<sup>4</sup> in accordance with the following provisions<sup>5</sup>.

The prosecution may not appeal in respect of the ruling unless:

- 2409 (1) following the making of the ruling, it:
- 73. (a) informs the court that it intends to appeal<sup>6</sup>; or
  - 74. (b) requests an adjournment to consider whether to appeal<sup>7</sup>; and
- 594
- 2410 (2) if such an adjournment is granted, it informs the court following the adjournment that it intends to appeal<sup>8</sup>.

Where the ruling relates to two or more offences:

- 2411 (i) any one or more of those offences may be the subject of the appeal<sup>9</sup>; and
- 2412 (ii) if the prosecution informs the court in accordance with heads (1) and (2) above that it intends to appeal, it must at the same time inform the court of the offence or offences which are the subject of the appeal<sup>10</sup>.

Where:

- 2413 (A) the ruling is a ruling that there is no case to answer<sup>11</sup>; and
- 2414 (B) the prosecution, at the same time that it informs the court in accordance with heads (1) and (2) above that it intends to appeal, nominates one or more other rulings which have been made by a judge in relation to the trial on indictment at an applicable time and which relate to the offence or offences which are the subject of the appeal<sup>12</sup>, that other ruling, or those other rulings, are also to be treated as the subject of the appeal<sup>13</sup>.

The prosecution may not inform the court in accordance with heads (1) and (2) above that it intends to appeal, unless, at or before that time, it informs the court that it agrees that, in respect of the offence or each offence which is the subject of the appeal, the defendant in relation to that offence should be acquitted of that offence if either of the following conditions is fulfilled, namely that leave to appeal to the Court of Appeal is not obtained, or that the appeal is abandoned before it is determined by the Court of Appeal<sup>14</sup>. Where the prosecution has so informed the court of its agreement and either of the conditions mentioned is fulfilled, the judge or the Court of Appeal must order that the defendant in relation to the offence or each offence concerned be acquitted of that offence<sup>15</sup>.

If the prosecution informs the court in accordance with heads (1) and (2) above that it intends to appeal, the ruling in question continues to have no effect in relation to the offence or offences which are the subject of the appeal whilst the appeal is pursued<sup>16</sup>. In addition, proceedings may be continued in respect of any offence which is not the subject of the appeal<sup>17</sup>.

1 Any reference in the Criminal Justice Act 2003 Pt 9 (ss 57-74) (as amended) (other than s 73(2)(c): see PARA 1898 ante) to a judge is a reference to a judge of the Crown Court: s 74(2).

2 As to the meaning of 'ruling' see PARA 1898 ante.

3 For these purposes, 'applicable time', in relation to a trial on indictment, means any time (whether before or after the commencement of the trial) before the start of judge's summing-up to the jury: Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 58(13). As from a day to be appointed, the words 'time when the judge start his' are substituted for the words 'start of judge's' by the Domestic Violence, Crime and Victims Act 2004 s 30(1). The reference to the time when the judge starts his summing-up to the jury includes the time when the judge would start his summing-up to the jury but for the making of an order under Pt 7 (ss 43-50) (as amended) (see SENTENCING AND DISPOSITION OF OFFENDERS vol 92 (2010) PARA 342): s 58(14) (prospectively added by the Domestic Violence, Crime and Victims Act 2004 s 30(2)). At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed.

4 The ruling is to have no effect whilst the prosecution is able to take any steps under the Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 58(4) (see the text and notes 6-8 infra): s 58(3).

5 Ibid s 58(1), (2).

6 Ibid s 58(4)(a)(i).

7 Ibid s 58(4)(a)(ii).

8 Ibid s 58(4)(b). If the prosecution requests an adjournment under head (1)(b) in the text, the judge may grant such an adjournment: s 58(5). A request for an adjournment under head (1)(b) in the text must be made to the judge of the Crown Court with conduct of the proceedings immediately following the ruling to which s 58 refers; except that, if that ruling is of no case to answer, an application by the prosecutor must be made immediately following that ruling of no case to answer notwithstanding that the prosecutor may also nominate earlier rulings to be the subject of an appeal: CrimPR 66.1, 66.2(1), (2).

The judge of the court must grant the request unless it is in the interests of justice for the prosecutor to indicate immediately whether or not he intends to seek leave to appeal: CrimPR 66.2(3). The adjournment must be until the next business day after the day on which the ruling was given, unless the interests of justice require a longer adjournment: CrimPR 66.2(4).

10 Ibid s 58(6)(b). Where a ruling relates to two or more offences but not all of those offences are the subject of an appeal under Pt 9 (as amended), nothing in Pt 9 (as amended) is to be regarded as affecting the ruling so far as it relates to any offence which is not the subject of the appeal: s 74(4). Where two or more defendants are charged jointly with the same offence, the provisions of Pt 9 (as amended) are to apply as if the offence, so far as relating to each defendant, were a separate offence (so that, for example, any reference in Pt 9 (as amended) to a ruling which relates to one or more offences includes a ruling which relates to one or more of those separate offences): s 74(5).

12 Ibid s 58(7)(b).

13 Ibid s 58(7).

14 Ibid s 58(8), (9).

15 Ibid s 58(12).

16 Ibid s 58(10). If and to the extent that a ruling has no effect in accordance with s 58: (1) any consequences of the ruling are also to have no effect; (2) the judge may not take any steps in consequence of the ruling; and (3) if he does so, any such steps are also to have no effect: s 58(11).

If the judge decides that the appeal should be expedited, he may order an adjournment<sup>4</sup>. If the judge decides that the appeal should not be expedited, he may order an adjournment, or discharge the jury (if one has been sworn)<sup>5</sup>.

APPEALS/(2) APPEAL TO THE COURT OF APPEAL BY THE PROSECUTION/(ii) Appeal against Ruling/1913. Determination of appeal by the Court of Appeal.

1913. Determination of appeal by the Court of Appeal.

On an appeal against a terminating ruling or terminating rulings<sup>1</sup>, the Court of Appeal may confirm, reverse or vary any ruling to which the appeal relates<sup>2</sup>. The Court of Appeal may not reverse such a ruling unless it is satisfied:

- 2434 (1) that the ruling was wrong in law<sup>3</sup>;
- 2435 (2) that the ruling involved an error of law or principle<sup>4</sup>; or
- 2436 (3) that the ruling was a ruling that it was not reasonable for the judge to have made<sup>5</sup>.

Where the appeal relates to a single ruling, and the Court of Appeal confirms the ruling, it must, in respect of the offence or each offence which is the subject of the appeal, order that the defendant in relation to that offence be acquitted of that offence<sup>6</sup>.

Where the appeal relates to a single ruling, and the Court of Appeal reverses or varies the ruling, it must, in respect of the offence or each offence which is the subject of the appeal, do any of the following:

- 2437 (a) order that proceedings for that offence may be resumed in the Crown Court<sup>7</sup>;
- 2438 (b) order that a fresh trial may take place in the Crown Court for that offence<sup>8</sup>;
- 2439 (c) order that the defendant in relation to that offence be acquitted of that offence<sup>9</sup>.

However, the Court of Appeal may not make an order under head (a) or head (b) above in respect of an offence unless it considers it necessary in the interests of justice to do so<sup>10</sup>.

Where the appeal relates to a ruling that there is no case to answer and one or more other rulings, and the Court of Appeal confirms the ruling that there is no case to answer, it must, in respect of the offence or each offence which is the subject of the appeal, order that the defendant in relation to that offence be acquitted of that offence<sup>11</sup>.

Where the appeal relates to a ruling that there is no case to answer and one or more other rulings, and the Court of Appeal reverses or varies the ruling that there is no case to answer, it must in respect of the offence or each offence which is the subject of the appeal, make any of the orders mentioned in heads (a) to (c) above but may not make an order under head (a) or head (b) above in respect of an offence unless it considers it necessary in the interests of justice to do so<sup>12</sup>.

The Registrar of Criminal Appeals must, as soon as reasonably practicable, serve<sup>13</sup> a notice of a decision of the Court of Appeal on specified persons<sup>14</sup>. Where a party to whom notice is so required to be given is in custody, notice must instead be given to the person having custody of him<sup>15</sup>.

APPEALS/(2) APPEAL TO THE COURT OF APPEAL BY THE PROSECUTION/(iii) Appeals against Evidentiary Rulings/1914. Right of appeal in respect of evidentiary rulings.

(iii) Appeals against Evidentiary Rulings

1914. Right of appeal in respect of evidentiary rulings.

As from a day to be appointed, the following provisions have effect<sup>1</sup>. The prosecution may<sup>2</sup> appeal in respect of: (1) a single qualifying evidentiary ruling<sup>3</sup>; or (2) two or more qualifying evidentiary rulings<sup>4</sup>. A 'qualifying evidentiary ruling' is an evidentiary ruling of a judge<sup>5</sup> in relation to a trial on indictment which is made at any time (whether before or after the commencement of the trial) before the opening of the case for the defence<sup>6</sup>.

The prosecution may not appeal in respect of a single qualifying evidentiary ruling unless the ruling relates to one or more qualifying offences<sup>7</sup> (whether or not it relates to any other offence)<sup>8</sup>.

The prosecution may not appeal in respect of two or more qualifying evidentiary rulings unless each ruling relates to one or more qualifying offences (whether or not it relates to any other offence)<sup>9</sup>.

If the prosecution intends to appeal<sup>10</sup>, it must before the opening of the case for the defence inform the court: (a) of its intention to do so<sup>11</sup>; and (b) of the ruling or rulings to which the appeal relates<sup>12</sup>.

In respect of the ruling, or each ruling, to which the appeal relates:

- 2440 (i) the qualifying offence, or at least one of the qualifying offences, to which the ruling relates must be the subject of the appeal<sup>13</sup>; and
- 2441 (ii) any other offence to which the ruling relates may, but need not, be the subject of the appeal<sup>14</sup>.

Where the prosecution informs the court before the opening of the case for the defence of its intention to appeal and of the ruling or rulings to which the appeal relates, proceedings may be continued in respect of any offence which is not the subject of the appeal<sup>15</sup>.

Leave<sup>16</sup> so to appeal<sup>17</sup> may not be given unless the judge or, as the case may be, the Court of Appeal is satisfied that the relevant condition<sup>18</sup> is satisfied<sup>19</sup>.

1 The Criminal Justice Act 2003 ss 62, 74, Sch 4 are to be brought into force by order made by the Secretary of State under s 336(3) as from a day to be appointed. At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed.

2 Ie in accordance with ibid ss 62, 63.

3 Ibid s 62(1)(a). For these purposes, 'evidentiary ruling' means a ruling which relates to the admissibility or exclusion of any prosecution evidence: s 62(9)(a).

4 Ibid s 62(1)(b).

Where a ruling relates to two or more offences but not all of those offences are the subject of an appeal under Pt 9 (ss 57-74), nothing in Pt 9 is to be regarded as affecting the ruling so far as it relates to any offence which is not the subject of the appeal: s 74(4).

Where two or more defendants are charged jointly with the same offence, the provisions of Pt 9 apply as if the offence, so far as relating to each defendant, were a separate offence (so that, for example, any reference in Pt 9 to a ruling which relates to one or more offences includes a ruling which relates to one or more of those separate offences): s 74(5).

5 See PARA 1899 note 1 ante.

6 Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 62(2). For these purposes, the case for the defence opens when, after the conclusion of the prosecution evidence, the earliest of the following events occurs:

- 167 (1) evidence begins to be adduced by or on behalf of a defendant (s 62(8)(a));
- 168 (2) it is indicated to the court that no evidence will be adduced by or on behalf of a defendant (s 62(8)(b));
- 169 (3) a defendant's case is opened, as permitted by the Criminal Procedure Act 1865 s 2 (see PARA 1315 ante) (Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 62(8)(c)).

7 'Qualifying offence' means an offence described in ibid Sch 4 Pt 1: s 62(9). The Secretary of State may by order amend Sch 4 Pt 1 by doing any one or more of the following: adding a description of offence; removing a description of offence for the time being included; modifying a description of offence for the time being included: s 62(10). This power of amendment is exercisable by statutory instrument: see PARA 90 note 6 ante.

The list of qualifying offences in Sch 4 Pt 1 is:

- 170 (1) murder (see PARA 86 et seq ante) (Sch 4 para 1);

- 2453 (b) an application to that court for leave to appeal<sup>16</sup> to it<sup>17</sup>; or
- 2454 (c) an application to that court for leave to appeal to the House of Lords<sup>18</sup>.

Lastly, the House of Lords may order that the above restrictions are not to apply, or are not to apply to a specified extent, to a report of an appeal<sup>19</sup> to that House<sup>20</sup>, or an application to that House for leave to appeal<sup>21</sup> to it<sup>22</sup>.

1920. Appeal against finding of contempt or order thereon.

An appeal from any order or decision of the Crown Court in the exercise of its jurisdiction to punish for contempt of court (including criminal contempt) lies to the Court of Appeal<sup>1</sup>.

A person who wishes to appeal from any order or decision of the Crown Court in the exercise of its jurisdiction to punish for contempt of court must give notice of appeal in such manner as may be directed by rules of court<sup>2</sup>; and notice of appeal must be given within 28 days from the date of the order or decision appealed against<sup>3</sup>.

The Court of Appeal may reverse or vary the order or decision of the court below, and make such other order as may be just<sup>4</sup>. An appeal lies to the House of Lords<sup>5</sup> from an order or decision of the Court of Appeal, including a decision of the court<sup>6</sup> under the provisions set out above<sup>7</sup>.

1 See the Administration of Justice Act 1960 s 13(1), (2)(bb) (added by the Courts Act 1971 s 56(1), (4), Sch 8 para 40(1), Sch 11 Pt II). This right of appeal applies not only when a contemnor has been convicted of, and sentenced for, contempt, but also to orders (eg a refusal of bail) made in the course of proceedings which may result in a conviction of, and sentence for, contempt: R v Serumaga [2005] EWCA Crim 370, [2005] 2 All ER 160, [2005] 2 Cr App Rep 181. In circumstances where the Court of Appeal, Criminal Division has jurisdiction to entertain an appeal under the Administration of Justice Act 1960 s 13, that, rather than judicial review, is the appropriate procedure: R v Serumaga supra. The reference to an order or decision in the exercise of the Crown Court's jurisdiction to punish for contempt of court includes a reference to an order of the Crown Court under any enactment to deal with an offence as if it were a contempt of court: Administration of Justice Act 1960 s 13(5)(a) (amended by the Courts Act 1971 Sch 8 para 40(2)). The jurisdiction is exercised by the criminal division of the Court of Appeal: Supreme Court Act 1981 s 53(2)(b). As from a day to be appointed the Supreme Court Act 1981 is renamed the Senior Courts Act 1981: see the Constitutional Reform Act 2005 s 59(5), Sch 11 para 1. At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed. As to such appeals see CONTEMPT OF COURT vol 9(1) (Reissue) PARA 497 et seq.

2 Criminal Appeal Act 1968 s 18A(1) (s 18A added by the Criminal Justice Act 1988 s 170(1), Sch 15 paras 20, 25). CrimPR 68.1 (see PARA 1862 ante), 68.3(1)-(4), (6), (10)-(12) (see PARAS 1848, 1863-1864 ante), 68.11 (see PARA 1857 ante), 68.13 (see PARA 1860 ante), 68.23 (see PARA 1856 ante), 68.27 (see PARA 1892 ante), 68.29 (see PARA 1894 ante) apply to such appeals: see CrimPR 74.1(1), (6), (7).

3 Criminal Appeal Act 1968 s 18A(2) (as added: see note 2 supra). The time for giving notice of appeal may be extended before or after its expiry by the Court of Appeal (see PARA 1865 ante): Criminal Appeal Act 1968 s 18A(3) (as so added).

4 Administration of Justice Act 1960 s 13(3). Section 13(3) gives the Court of Appeal wide powers to vary or reverse any order and to substitute an order considered to be just (Linnett v Coles [1987] QB 555, 84 Cr App Rep 227, CA), including ordering a rehearing (Duo v Duo [1992] 3 All ER 121, sub nom Duo v Osborne [1992] 1 WLR 611, CA). It does not, however, extend to making an order for costs out of central funds in favour of a successful appellant: R v Moore [2003] EWCA Crim 1574, [2003] 1 WLR 2170, [2003] 2 Cr App Rep 481. The Administration of Justice Act 1960 s 13(3) empowers the making of rules of court for authorising the release on bail of an appellant under s 13. As to such rules see CPR Sch 1 RSC Ord 109 rr 3, 4; and CONTEMPT OF COURT vol 9(1) (Reissue) PARAS 514, 516.

At the date at which this volume states the law this amendment had effect in so far as applying to applications under s 44 (see PARA 1284 ante) (see the Criminal Justice Act 2003 (Commencement No 13 and Transitional Provision) Order 2006, SI 2006/1835, art 2(c)), but no further orders had been made bringing the Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 45 into force for any remaining purposes.

At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed. APPEALS/(3) OTHER APPEALS TO THE COURT OF APPEAL/(iii) Interlocutory Appeals/A. RIGHT OF APPEAL/1922. Appeal against decisions in preparatory hearings under the Criminal Procedure and Investigations Act 1996.

1922. Appeal against decisions in preparatory hearings under the Criminal Procedure and Investigations Act 1996.

An appeal lies to the Court of Appeal from any ruling of a judge made at a preparatory hearing under the Criminal Procedure and Investigations Act 1996<sup>1</sup> but only with the leave of the judge or of the Court of Appeal<sup>2</sup>. The judge may continue such a preparatory hearing notwithstanding that leave to appeal has been granted, but the preparatory hearing may not be concluded until after the appeal has been determined or abandoned<sup>3</sup>. On the termination of the hearing of an appeal, the Court of Appeal may confirm, reverse or vary the decision appealed against<sup>4</sup>.

1 lie from any ruling under the Criminal Procedure and Investigations Act 1996 s 31(3) (see PARA 1253 ante). From a day to be appointed, an appeal also lies to the Court of Appeal from any ruling of a judge from the refusal by a judge of an application to which the Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 45 applies or from an order of a judge under s 43 or s 44 (see PARA 1284 ante): Criminal Procedure and Investigations Act 1996 s 35(1) (amended by the Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 45(1), (9)). At the date at which this volume states the law this amendment had effect in so far as applying to applications under s 44 (see PARA 1284 ante) (see the Criminal Justice Act 2003 (Commencement No 13 and Transitional Provision) Order 2006, SI 2006/1835, art 2(c)), but no further orders had been made bringing the Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 45 into force for any remaining purposes.

2 Criminal Procedure and Investigations Act 1996 s 35(1). Subject to rules of court made under the Supreme Court Act 1981 s 53(1), the jurisdiction of the Court of Appeal under the Criminal Procedure and Investigations Act 1996 s 35(1) must be exercised by the criminal division of the court and references in Pt III (ss 28-38) (as amended) to the Court of Appeal are to be construed as references to that division: s 35(4). As from a day to be appointed, the words 'Senior Courts Act 1981' are substituted for the words 'Supreme Court Act 1981' by the Constitutional Reform Act 2005 s 59(5), Sch 11 para 1(2). At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed.

As from a day to be appointed, the Criminal Procedure and Investigations Act 1996 s 35(1) has effect as if it also provided for an appeal to the Court of Appeal to lie from the determination by a judge of an application by the prosecution for sample counts to be tried without a jury: Domestic Violence, Crime and Victims Act 2004 s 18(5) (not yet in force). At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed.

The Court of Appeal does not have jurisdiction under the Criminal Procedure and Investigations Act 1996 s 35(1) if the judge lacked jurisdiction to make the order for a preparatory hearing under s 29; but if the judge has addressed the criteria under s 29(1) (see PARA 1251 ante) in the context of the specified purposes of any preparatory hearing, and proceeds on the basis that the potential advantages outweigh the disadvantages, the Court of Appeal will be reluctant to set aside his decision to do so: A-G's Reference (No 1 of 2004); R v Edwards; R v Denton; R v Hendley; R v Crowley [2004] EWCA Crim 1025, [2005] 4 All ER 457, [2004] 1 WLR 2111. The Court of Appeal's jurisdiction is limited to rulings properly within the scope of a preparatory hearing: R v Van Hoogstraten [2003] EWCA Crim 3642, [2004] Crim LR 498 (Court of Appeal had no jurisdiction to entertain an appeal against a ruling at a preparatory hearing under the Criminal Procedure and Investigations Act 1996 that a jury could not properly convict even if the prosecution succeeded in proving the facts alleged because the ruling was outside the scope of such a preparatory hearing). A ruling given in a preparatory hearing on an application for the exclusion of evidence under the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 78 (see PARA 1365 ante) is within the Criminal Procedure and Investigations Act 1996 s 35(1): R v R (22 February 2000, unreported), CA; R v Claydon [2001] EWCA Crim 1359, [2004] 1 WLR 1575, [2004] 1 Cr App Rep 474.

The statutory provisions<sup>1</sup> relating to service of documents in respect of an appeal or an application for leave to appeal against conviction or sentence apply for the purposes of an appeal or application for leave to appeal<sup>2</sup> against an order or ruling at a preparatory hearing<sup>3</sup>. Where, however, any document is required to be served on any party to the proceedings and that party is acting by a solicitor, service of the document may be effected by delivering it, or sending it by post, to the solicitor's address for service<sup>4</sup>.

<sup>4</sup> CrimPR 65.9(2). Where there is inscribed on the writing paper of the person to be served with a document or on the writing paper of his solicitor (where the person to be served is a party to the proceedings and is acting by a solicitor) a document exchange box number, and that person or his solicitor (as the case may be) has not indicated in writing to the person serving the document that he is unwilling to accept service through a document exchange, service of the document may be effected by leaving the document addressed to the numbered box of that person or his solicitor at the document exchange in question or at a document exchange which transmits documents every business day to that document exchange; and any document which is left at a document exchange in accordance with this provision is, unless the contrary is proved, deemed to have been served on the second business day following the day on which it is left: CrimPR 65.9(3). For these purposes, 'document exchange' means any document exchange for the time being approved by the Lord Chancellor for the purposes of the service of documents; 'business day' means a day other than a day which is to be excluded for the purposes of reckoning a period of seven days or less; and 'solicitor' includes a body corporate which is recognised by the Council of the Law Society under the Administration of Justice Act 1985 s 9 (a 'recognised body') and, in the case of a recognised body, the reference in CrimPR 65.9(2) to the solicitor's address for service is to be construed as a reference to the address specified by the recognised body as its address for the purposes of the proceedings relating to the appeal or application for leave to appeal under the Criminal Procedure and Investigations Act 1996 s 35(1) (including an address specified for the general purposes of the criminal proceedings in relation to which the appeal or application for leave to appeal is made), or, in the absence of such a specified address, to its registered office: CrimPR 65.9(4).

(v) Restrictions on Reporting and Public Access

1934. Appeal from order restricting or preventing reports or restricting public access.

A person aggrieved may appeal to the Court of Appeal, if that court grants leave, against:

- 2488 (1) an order postponing or prohibiting reporting<sup>1</sup> made in relation to a trial on indictment<sup>2</sup>;
- 2489 (2) an order made by the Crown Court before the determination of sentence restricting the reporting of a derogatory assertion<sup>3</sup> in a case where the court has convicted a person on trial on indictment<sup>4</sup>;
- 2490 (3) any order restricting the access of the public<sup>5</sup> to the whole or any part of a trial on indictment or to any proceedings ancillary to such a trial<sup>6</sup>; or
- 2491 (4) any order restricting the publication of any report of the whole or any part of a trial on indictment or any such ancillary proceedings<sup>7</sup>; and the decision of the Court of Appeal is final<sup>8</sup>.

On an application for leave to appeal, a judge has power to give such directions as appear to him to be appropriate and, in particular, power:

- 2492 (a) to order the production in court of any transcript or note of proceedings or other document<sup>9</sup>;
- 2493 (b) to give directions as to persons who are to be parties to the appeal or who may be parties to it if they wish and as to service of documents on any person<sup>10</sup>; and the Court of Appeal has the same powers as a single judge<sup>11</sup>.

Any party to such an appeal may give evidence before the court orally or in writing<sup>12</sup>.

On the hearing of an appeal the court has power:

- 2494 (i) to stay any proceedings in any other court until after the appeal is disposed of<sup>13</sup>;
- 2495 (ii) to confirm, reverse or vary the order complained of<sup>14</sup>; and
- 2496 (iii) to make such order as to costs as it thinks fit<sup>15</sup>.

1     le under the Contempt of Court Act 1981 s 4 or s 11: see PARA 1301 ante. A prosecutor or a defendant or any interested person may, not later than three days after service of the application, notify the Registrar in writing that he wishes to be made a respondent to the appeal if leave is granted, and must serve a copy of such notice on the applicant<sup>8</sup>.

The application may be determined without a hearing<sup>9</sup>; and, where the Court of Appeal grants leave to appeal:

- 2500 (a) the notice of application for leave stands as notice of appeal, unless the Court otherwise orders<sup>10</sup>;

APPEALS/(4) RE-TRIAL FOR SERIOUS OFFENCES/(i) Cases that may be Re-tried/1937. Cases that may be re-tried.

(4) RE-TRIAL FOR SERIOUS OFFENCES

(i) Cases that may be Re-tried

1937. Cases that may be re-tried.

The provisions<sup>1</sup> relating to re-trial for serious offences apply where a person has been acquitted of a qualifying offence<sup>2</sup> in proceedings:

- 2505 (1) on indictment in England and Wales<sup>3</sup>;
- 2506 (2) on appeal against a conviction, verdict or finding in proceedings on indictment in England and Wales<sup>4</sup>; or
- 2507 (3) on appeal from a decision on such an appeal<sup>5</sup>.

A person acquitted of an offence in such proceedings is treated for these purposes as also acquitted of any qualifying offence of which he could have been convicted in the proceedings because of the first-mentioned offence being charged in the indictment, except an offence:

- 2508 (a) of which he has been convicted<sup>6</sup>;
- 2509 (b) of which he has been found not guilty by reason of insanity<sup>7</sup>; or
- 2510 (c) in respect of which in proceedings where he has been found to be under a disability<sup>8</sup>, a finding has been made that he did the act or made the omission charged against him<sup>9</sup>.

The provisions relating to re-trial for a serious offence also apply where a person has been acquitted, in proceedings elsewhere than in the United Kingdom<sup>10</sup>, of an offence under the law of the place where the proceedings were held, if the commission of the offence as alleged would have amounted to or included the commission (in the United Kingdom or elsewhere) of a qualifying offence<sup>11</sup>.

<sup>1</sup> ie the Criminal Justice Act 2003 Pt 10 (ss 75-97). The provisions of Pt 10 apply whether the acquittal was before or after the passing of the Criminal Justice Act 2003: s 75(6).

Rules of court may make such provision as appears to the authority making them to be necessary or expedient for the purposes of Pt 10: s 93(1). Without limiting s 93(1), rules of court may in particular make provision as to procedures to be applied in connection with ss 76-82, 84, 88-90 (see PARAS 1938-1942, 1946-1948 post): s 93(2).

<sup>2</sup> References in ibid s 75(1), (2) (see the text and notes 3-9 infra) to a qualifying offence do not include references to an offence which, at the time of the acquittal, was the subject of an order under s 77(1) or (3) (see PARA 1939 post): s 75(3).

A 'qualifying offence' in Pt 7 is an offence listed in Sch 5 Pt 1: s 75(8). The offences listed in Sch 5 Pt 1 are:

- 219 (7) an offence under the Criminal Attempts Act 1981 s 1 of attempting to commit an offence under the Sexual Offences Act 1956 s 1 or the Sexual Offences Act 2003 s 1 (attempted rape) (Criminal Justice Act 2003 Sch 5 para 7);
- 220 (8) an offence under the Sexual Offences Act 1956 s 5 (repealed: intercourse with a girl under 13) (Criminal Justice Act 2003 Sch 5 para 8);

APPEALS/(4) RE-TRIAL FOR SERIOUS OFFENCES/(ii) Application for Re-trial/1938. Application to Court of Appeal.

(ii) Application for Re-trial

1938. Application to Court of Appeal.

A prosecutor<sup>1</sup> may apply to the Court of Appeal<sup>2</sup> for an order:

- 2511 (1) quashing a person's acquittal<sup>3</sup> in specified proceedings in England and Wales<sup>4</sup>; and
- 2512 (2) ordering him to be re-tried for the qualifying offence<sup>5</sup>.

A prosecutor may apply to the Court of Appeal, in the case of a person acquitted elsewhere than in the United Kingdom<sup>6</sup>, for:

- 2513 (a) a determination whether the acquittal is a bar to the person being tried in England and Wales for the qualifying offence<sup>7</sup>; and
- 2514 (b) if it is, an order that the acquittal is not to be a bar<sup>8</sup>.

A prosecutor may make such an application<sup>9</sup> only with the written consent of the Director of Public Prosecutions<sup>10</sup>. The Director of Public Prosecutions may give his consent only if satisfied that:

- 2515 (i) there is evidence as respects which the specified requirements<sup>11</sup> appear to be met<sup>12</sup>;
- 2516 (ii) it is in the public interest for the application to proceed<sup>13</sup>; and
- 2517 (iii) any trial pursuant to an order on the application would not be inconsistent with certain obligations<sup>14</sup> of the United Kingdom<sup>15</sup>.

1 For the purposes of the Criminal Justice Act 2003 Pt 10 (ss 75-97) 'prosecutor' means an individual or body charged with duties to conduct criminal prosecutions: s 95(1).

2 Subject to rules of court made under the Supreme Court Act 1981 s 53(1) (power by rules to distribute business of Court of Appeal between its civil and criminal divisions) the jurisdiction of the Court of Appeal under Pt 10 is to be exercised by the criminal division of that court, and references in Pt 10 to the Court of Appeal are to be construed as references to that division: s 95(2). As from a day to be appointed the Supreme Court Act 1981 is renamed the Senior Courts Act 1981: see the Constitutional Reform Act 2005 s 59(5), Sch 11 para 1. At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed.

3 References to acquittal are to acquittal in circumstances within the Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 75(1), (4) (see PARA 1937 ante): ss 75(7), 95(1).

4 Ibid s 76(1)(a).

5 Ibid s 76(1)(b). For the meaning of 'qualifying offence' see s 75(8), Sch 5 Pt 1; and PARA 1937 note 2 ante (definition applied by virtue of s 95(1)). Not more than one application may be made under s 76(1) or (2) (see the text to notes 6-8 infra) in relation to an acquittal: s 76(5).

Notice of the application must be sent in the form set out in Practice Direction (Criminal Proceedings: Consolidation) [2002] 3 All ER 904, [2002] 2 Cr App Rep 533, Annex D, CA; Amendment to the Consolidated Criminal Practice Direction (Forms for use in criminal proceedings) [2005] 2 All ER 916, [2005] 1 WLR 1479,

Annex D, CA, to the Registrar of Criminal Appeals and the acquitted person: see CrimPR 41.2(1). That notice must, where practicable, be accompanied by: (1) relevant witness statements which are relied upon as forming new and compelling evidence of guilt of the acquitted person as well as any relevant witness statements from the original trial; (2) any unused statements which might reasonably be considered capable of undermining the application or of assisting an acquitted person's application to oppose that application; (3) a copy of the indictment and paper exhibits from the original trial; (4) copies of the transcript of the summing up and any other relevant transcripts from the original trial; and (5) any other documents relied upon to support the application: CrimPR 41.2(2). The prosecutor must, as soon as practicable after service of that notice on the acquitted person, file with the Registrar a witness statement or certificate of service which exhibits a copy of that notice: CrimPR 41.2(3). An acquitted person who wants to oppose an application under the Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 76 must serve a response in the form set out in Practice Direction (Criminal Proceedings: Consolidation) [2002] 3 All ER 904, [2002] 2 Cr App Rep 533, Annex D, CA; Amendment to the Consolidated Criminal Practice Direction (Forms for use in criminal proceedings) [2005] 2 All ER 916, [2005] 1 WLR 1479, Annex D, CA, on the Registrar and the prosecutor which: (a) indicates if he is also seeking an order under the Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 80(6) (see PARA 1940 post) for the production of any document, exhibit or other thing, or a witness to attend for examination and to be examined before the Court of Appeal; and (b) exhibits any relevant documents: CrimPR 41.3(1). The acquitted person must serve that response not more than 28 days after receiving notice under CrimPR 41.2, unless the Court of Appeal extends that period, either before or after that period expires: CrimPR 41.3(2), (3). The Court of Appeal's power to extend the period may be exercised by a single judge of the Court of Appeal or the Registrar of Criminal Appeals, subject to the power of the Court of Appeal or a single judge respectively to re-determine the matter if the applicant for the extension serves a notice of renewal in the prescribed form within 14 days of service on him of the determination or such longer period as the Court of Appeal permits: see CrimPR 41.10, 41.11.

The power of the Court of Appeal to determine procedural directions for the efficient and effective preparation of an application by a prosecutor under the Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 76(1) or (2) may be exercised by a single judge, or the Registrar: Criminal Justice Act 2003 (Retrial for Serious Offences) Order 2005, SI 2005/679, art 4(1). 'Procedural directions' means directions for the efficient and effective preparation of an application by a prosecutor under the Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 76(1) or (2): Criminal Justice Act 2003 (Retrial for Serious Offences) Order 2005, SI 2005/679, art 4(2).

A single judge may give such procedural directions as he thinks fit: (i) when acting under art 4(1); (ii) on a reference from the Registrar; (iii) of his own motion, when he is exercising, or considering whether to exercise, any power of his in relation to the application or appeal: art 4(3). The Registrar may give such procedural directions as he thinks fit when acting under art 4(1), or of his own motion: art 4(4).

If a single judge gives, or refuses to give, procedural directions, the Court of Appeal may, on an application to it by a prosecutor or an acquitted person: (A) confirm, set aside or vary any procedural directions given by the single judge; and (B) give such procedural directions as he thinks fit: art 5(1), (2), (5). If the Registrar gives, or refuses to give, procedural directions, a single judge may, on an application to him by a prosecutor or acquitted person confirm, set aside or vary any procedural directions given by the Registrar and give such procedural directions as he thinks fit: art 5(3), (4), (5).

6 For the meaning of 'United Kingdom' see PARA 45 note 2 ante.

7 Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 76(2)(a).

8 Ibid s 76(2)(b).

9 Ie under ibid s 76(1), (2) (see the text and notes 1-8 supra). The prosecutor may abandon such an application; for the procedure see CrimPR 41.16.

10 Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 76(3). The Prosecution of Offences Act 1985 s 1(7) (Director of Public Prosecutions' functions exercisable by Crown Prosecutor: see PARA 1071 ante) does not apply to the provisions of the Criminal Justice Act 2003 Pt 10 other than s 85(2)(a) (see PARA 1943 head (a) post): s 92(1). In the absence of the Director of Public Prosecutions, his functions under those provisions may be exercised by a person authorised by him: s 92(2). Such an authorisation: (1) may relate to a specified person or to persons of a specified description; and (2) may be general or relate to a specified function or specified circumstances: s 92(3).

 APPEALS/(4) RE-TRIAL FOR SERIOUS OFFENCES/(ii) Application for Re-trial/1939.
 Determination by Court of Appeal.

1939. Determination by Court of Appeal.

On an application for a re-trial of a person acquitted of a qualifying offence<sup>1</sup>, the Court of Appeal:

- 2518 (1) if satisfied that the specified requirements are met<sup>2</sup>, must make the order applied for<sup>3</sup>;
- 2519 (2) otherwise, it must dismiss the application<sup>4</sup>.

Where, on an application<sup>5</sup>, in the case of an acquittal<sup>6</sup> outside the United Kingdom, for a determination whether that acquittal is a bar to the acquitted person being tried in England and Wales for the qualifying offence, and if it is, an order that the acquittal is not to be a bar, the Court of Appeal determines that the acquittal is a bar to the person being tried for the qualifying offence<sup>7</sup>, the court:

- 2520 (a) if satisfied that the specified requirements are met<sup>8</sup>, must make the order applied for;
- 2521 (b) otherwise, must make a declaration to the effect that the acquittal is a bar to the person being tried for the offence<sup>9</sup>.

Where the Court of Appeal determines that the acquittal is not a bar to the person being tried for the qualifying offence, it must make a declaration to that effect<sup>10</sup>.

There are two sets of specified requirements, both of which must be satisfied. The first set is met if there is new and compelling evidence against the person acquitted in relation to the qualifying offence<sup>11</sup>. The second set is met if in all the circumstances it is in the interests of justice for the Court to make the order applied for<sup>12</sup>. That question is to be determined having regard in particular to:

- 2522 (i) whether existing circumstances make a fair trial unlikely<sup>13</sup>;
- 2523 (ii) for the purposes of that question and otherwise, the length of time since the qualifying offence was allegedly committed<sup>14</sup>;
- 2524 (iii) whether it is likely that the new evidence would have been adduced in the earlier proceedings against the acquitted person but for a failure by an officer or by a prosecutor<sup>15</sup> to act with due diligence or expedition<sup>16</sup>;
- 2525 (iv) whether, since those proceedings or, if later, since the commencement of the provisions relating to the re-trial of serious offences<sup>17</sup>, any officer or prosecutor has failed to act with due diligence or expedition<sup>18</sup>.

Evidence is compelling if: (1) it is reliable; (2) it is substantial; and (3) in the context of the outstanding issues, it appears highly probative of the case against the acquitted person: s 78(3). The outstanding issues are the issues in dispute in the proceedings in which the person was acquitted and, if those were appeal proceedings, any other issues remaining in dispute from earlier proceedings to which the appeal related: s 78(4). APPEALS/(4) RE-TRIAL FOR SERIOUS OFFENCES/(ii) Application for Re-trial/1940. Procedure and evidence.

1940. Procedure and evidence.

A prosecutor<sup>1</sup> who wishes (1) to make an application for the re-trial of a person acquitted of a qualifying offence; or (2) for the determination in relation to a person acquitted outside the United Kingdom whether that acquittal is a bar to that person being tried in England and Wales for the qualifying offence, and, if it is, an order that the acquittal is not to be a bar<sup>2</sup>, must give notice of the application to the Court of Appeal<sup>3</sup>. Within two days beginning with the day on which any such notice is given, notice of the application must be served by the prosecutor on the person to whom the application relates, charging him with the offence to which it relates or, if he has been charged with it in specified circumstances<sup>4</sup>, stating that he has been so charged<sup>5</sup>. The Court of Appeal must consider the application at a hearing<sup>6</sup>. For the purposes of the application, the Court of Appeal may, if it thinks it necessary or expedient in the interests of justice:

- 2526 (a) order the production of any document, exhibit or other thing, the production of which appears to the court to be necessary for the determination of the application<sup>7</sup>; and
- 2527 (b) order any witness who would be a compellable witness in proceedings pursuant to an order or declaration made on the application to attend for examination and be examined before the court<sup>8</sup>.

The powers under heads (a) and (b) above are exercisable by a single judge, in the same manner as by the Court of Appeal and subject to the same provisions, or by the Registrar of Criminal Appeals<sup>9</sup>. If the single judge refuses an application on the part of a party to exercise in his favour such a power, the party is entitled to have his application determined by the Court of Appeal<sup>10</sup>; and if the Registrar refuses such an application, the party is entitled to have his application determined by the single judge<sup>11</sup>.

4 Ie in accordance with ibid s 87(4): see PARA 1945 note 4 post.

5 Ibid s 80(2). Section 80(2) applies whether the person to whom the application relates is in the United Kingdom or elsewhere, but the Court of Appeal may, on application by the prosecutor, extend the time for service under that provision if it considers it necessary to do so because of that person's absence from the United Kingdom: s 80(3).

6 Ibid s 80(4). The person to whom the application relates: (1) is entitled to be present at the hearing, although he may be in custody, unless he is in custody elsewhere than in England and Wales or Northern Ireland; and (2) is entitled to be represented at the hearing, whether he is present or not: s 80(5). The Court of Appeal may at one hearing consider more than one application (whether or not relating to the same person), but only if the offences concerned could be tried on the same indictment: s 80(7).

8 Ibid s 80(6)(b). An application for an order under s 80(6) must be in the form set out in Practice Direction (Criminal Proceedings: Consolidation) [2002] 3 All ER 904, [2002] 2 Cr App Rep 533, Annex D, CA; Amendment to the Consolidated Criminal Practice Direction (Forms for use in criminal proceedings) [2005] 2 All ER 916, [2005] 1 WLR 1479, Annex D, CA, and must be sent to the Registrar of Criminal Appeals and to each party to the application under the Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 76: CrimPR 41.4(2). An application must set out the reasons why the order was not sought from the court when the notice was served on the Registrar of Criminal Appeals under CrimPR 41.2 if the application is made by the prosecutor; or the response was served on the Registrar under CrimPR 41.3 if the application is made by the acquitted person: CrimPR 41.4(3). The application must be made at least 14 days before the day of the hearing of the application made under the Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 76 (see PARA 1938 ante): CrimPR 41.4(4). If the Court of Appeal makes an order on its own motion under the Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 80(6) or on application by the prosecutor it must serve notice and its reasons on all parties to the application for re-trial: CrimPR 41.4(5). The powers under the Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 80(6) may be exercised by a single judge of the Court of Appeal; in the event of a refusal of the application, the applicant is entitled to have his application determined by the Court of Appeal: Criminal Justice Act 2003 (Retrial for Serious Offences) Order 2005, SI 2005/679, art 2; CrimPR 41.10, 41.12. Notice of renewal of the application in the prescribed form must be served on the Registrar of Criminal Appeals within 14 days of notice of the single judge's decision being served on the applicant, unless that period is extended by the Court of Appeal: CrimPR 41.12(2). The powers under the Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 80(6) are also exercisable by the Registrar of Criminal Appeals; if the Registrar refuses an application for an order, the applicant is entitled to have his application determined by a single judge of the Court of Appeal: Criminal Justice Act 2003 (Retrial for Serious Offences) Order 2005, SI 2005/679, art 3; CrimPR 41.11. The notice of renewal in the prescribed form must be served within 14 days of notice of the Registrar's decision being served on the applicant, unless that period is extended by the Court of Appeal: CrimPR 41.11.

APPEALS/(4) RE-TRIAL FOR SERIOUS OFFENCES/(ii) Application for Re-trial/1941. Restrictions on publication in the interests of justice.

1941. Restrictions on publication in the interests of justice.

Where it appears to the Court of Appeal<sup>1</sup> that the inclusion of any matter in a publication<sup>2</sup> would give rise to a substantial risk of prejudice to the administration of justice in a re-trial<sup>3</sup>, the court may order that the matter is not to be included in any publication while the order has effect<sup>4</sup>. The court may make such an order only if it appears to it necessary in the interests of justice to do so<sup>5</sup>. Such an order may apply to a matter which has been included in a publication published before the order takes effect, but such an order:

- 2528 (1) applies only to the later inclusion of the matter in a publication (whether directly or by inclusion of the earlier publication)<sup>6</sup>; and
- 2529 (2) does not otherwise affect the earlier publication<sup>7</sup>.

The court may at any time, of its own motion or on an application made by the Director of Public Prosecutions or the acquitted person, vary or revoke such an order<sup>8</sup>.

Where such an order is made, whether in England and Wales or Northern Ireland, and (while the order has effect) any matter is included in a publication in any part of the United Kingdom<sup>9</sup>, in contravention of the order, an offence is committed as follows:

- 2530 (a) where the publication is a newspaper or periodical, any proprietor, editor or publisher of the newspaper or periodical is guilty of an offence<sup>10</sup>;
- 2531 (b) where the publication is a relevant programme:
595
  - 75. (i) any body corporate or Scottish partnership engaged in providing the programme service in which the programme is included; and
  - 76. (ii) any person having functions in relation to the programme corresponding to those of an editor of a newspaper,
- 596 2532 is guilty of an offence<sup>11</sup>.
- 2533 (c) In the case of any other publication, any person publishing it is guilty of an offence<sup>12</sup>.

A person guilty of such an offence is liable on summary conviction to a fine not exceeding level 5 on the standard scale<sup>13</sup>.

If such an offence committed by a body corporate is proved: (A) to have been committed with the consent or connivance of; or (B) to be attributable to any neglect on the part of, an officer, the officer as well as the body corporate is guilty of the offence and liable to be proceeded against and punished accordingly<sup>14</sup>.

1 See PARA 1938 ante.

2 For the meaning of 'publication' see PARA 1917 note 2 ante.

3 'Re-trial' in the Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 82(1) means the trial of an acquitted person for a qualifying offence (see PARA 1937 ante) pursuant to an order made or that may be made under s 77 (see PARA 1939 ante): s 82(2).

4 Ibid s 82(1). Sections 82, 83 (see the text and notes 9-14 infra) extend to Scotland and Northern Ireland (see s 337(2)), with the result that the restrictions on reporting apply throughout the whole of the United Kingdom. After notice of an application has been given under s 80(1) (see PARA 1940 ante) relating to the acquitted person and the qualifying offence, the court may make an order under s 82 only: (1) of its own motion; or (2) on the application of the Director of Public Prosecutions: s 82(5). As to the Director of Public Prosecutions see PARA 1938 note 10 ante. Before such notice has been given, an order under s 82: (a) may be made only on the application of the Director of Public Prosecutions; and (b) may not be made unless, since the acquittal concerned, an investigation of the commission by the acquitted person of the qualifying offence has been commenced by officers: s 82(6).

An application by the Director of Public Prosecutions under s 82 must be in the form set out in Practice Direction (Criminal Proceedings: Consolidation) [2002] 3 All ER 904, [2002] 2 Cr App Rep 533, Annex D, CA; Amendment to the Consolidated Criminal Practice Direction (Forms for use in criminal proceedings) [2005] 2 All ER 916, [2005] 1 WLR 1479, Annex D, CA, and be served on the Registrar of Criminal Appeals and the acquitted person: CrimPR 41.8(1). However, if a notice of an application for re-trial has not been given and the Director of Public Prosecutions has indicated that there are reasons for not notifying the acquitted person of the application under the Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 82, the Court of Appeal (or a single judge of that court) may order that the acquitted person is not to be served with notice of that application until notice of an application for re-trial is served: CrimPR 41.8(2), 41.10(1)(d). Unless CrimPR 41.8(2) applies, the Registrar must serve on all parties notice of an order under the Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 82 (and reasons therefor) whether it makes that order of its own motion or on an application by the Director of Public Prosecutions: see CrimPR 41.8(3). The provisions of CrimPR 41.12 apply in the event of a refusal of a single judge to delay service under CrimPR 41.8(2): CrimPR 41.12.

Any order under the Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 82 made before notice of an application has been given under s 80(1) relating to the acquitted person and the qualifying offence must specify the time when it ceases to have effect: s 82(8). Such an order which is made or has effect after such notice has been given ceases to have effect, unless it specifies an earlier time: (i) when there is no longer any step that could be taken which would lead to the acquitted person being tried pursuant to an order made on the application; or (ii) if he is tried pursuant to such an order, at the conclusion of the trial: s 82(9). Nothing in s 82 affects any prohibition or restriction by virtue of any other enactment on the inclusion of any matter in a publication or any power, under an enactment or otherwise, to impose such a prohibition or restriction: s 82(10).

1942. Re-trial.

Where a person is tried pursuant to an order for re-trial<sup>1</sup> the trial must be on an indictment preferred by direction of the Court of Appeal<sup>2</sup>. After the end of two months after the date of the order, the person may not be arraigned on an indictment preferred in pursuance of such a direction unless the Court of Appeal gives leave<sup>3</sup>. The Court of Appeal must not give leave unless satisfied that: (1) the prosecutor has acted with due expedition<sup>4</sup>; and (2) there is a good and sufficient cause for trial despite the lapse of time since the order<sup>5</sup> for re-trial<sup>6</sup>. Where the person may not be arraigned without leave, he may apply to the Court of Appeal to set aside the order and:

- 2534 (a) for any direction required for restoring an earlier judgment and verdict of acquittal<sup>7</sup> of the qualifying offence<sup>8</sup>; or
- 2535 (b) in the case of a person acquitted elsewhere than in the United Kingdom, for a declaration to the effect that the acquittal is a bar to his being tried for the qualifying offence<sup>9</sup>.

<sup>2</sup> Ibid s 84(1). An indictment under s 84(1) may relate to more than one offence, or more than one person, and may relate to an offence which, or a person who, is not the subject of an order or declaration under s 77: s 84(5). Evidence given at a trial pursuant to an order under s 77(1) or (3) must be given orally if it was given orally at the original trial, unless:

246 (1) all the parties to the trial agree otherwise (s 84(6)(a));

247 (2) s 116 (hearsay evidence where witness unavailable: see PARA 1521 ante) applies (s 84(6)(b)); or

248 (3) the witness is unavailable to give evidence, otherwise than as mentioned in s 116(2), and s 114(1)(d) (hearsay evidence admissible if court satisfied that it is in the interests of justice for it to be admissible: see PARA 1520 head (4) ante) applies (s 84(6)(c)).

At a trial pursuant to an order under the Crime and Disorder Act 1998 s 77(1), Sch 3 para 5 (use of depositions) does not apply to a deposition read as evidence at the original trial: Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 84(7). As to the jurisdiction of the Court of Appeal see PARA 1938 note 2 ante.

(iv) Investigations

1943. Authorisation of investigations.

The following provisions apply to the investigation of the commission of a qualifying offence<sup>1</sup> by a person:

- 2536 (1) acquitted<sup>2</sup> in specified proceedings<sup>3</sup>; or
- 2537 (2) acquitted elsewhere than in the United Kingdom<sup>4</sup> of an offence the commission of which as alleged would have amounted to or included the commission (in the United Kingdom or elsewhere) of the qualifying offence<sup>5</sup>.

Except in the case of urgent investigative steps<sup>6</sup>, an officer<sup>7</sup> may not do any of a number of specified things for the purposes of the investigation of the commission of a qualifying offence by a person so acquitted, either with or without that person's consent, unless the Director of Public Prosecutions: (a) has certified that in his opinion the acquittal would not be a bar to the trial of the acquitted person in England and Wales for the qualifying offence<sup>8</sup>; or (b) has given his written consent to the investigation (whether before or after the start of the investigation)<sup>9</sup>. The specified things which the officer may not do are to:

- 2538 (i) arrest or question the acquitted person<sup>10</sup>;
- 2539 (ii) search him or premises owned or occupied by him<sup>11</sup>;
- 2540 (iii) search a vehicle owned by him or anything in or on such a vehicle<sup>12</sup>;

APPEALS/(4) RE-TRIAL FOR SERIOUS OFFENCES/(iv) Investigations/1944. Urgent investigative steps.

1944. Urgent investigative steps.

The provisions relating to the investigation of a qualifying offence<sup>1</sup> do not prevent an officer from taking any action for the purposes of an investigation if:

- 2545 (1) the action is necessary as a matter of urgency to prevent the investigation being substantially and irrevocably prejudiced<sup>2</sup>;
- 2546 (2) there has been no undue delay in applying for the Director of Public Prosecutions' written consent<sup>3</sup> to the investigation, that consent has not been refused, and taking into account the urgency of the situation, it is not reasonably practicable to obtain that consent before taking the action<sup>4</sup>; and
- 2547 (3) either the action is authorised as explained in heads (a) and (b) below<sup>5</sup>, or specified requirements<sup>6</sup> are met<sup>7</sup>.

Such an authorisation of investigative action may be given by an officer<sup>8</sup> of the rank of superintendent or above<sup>9</sup> if:

- 2548 (a) he is satisfied that new evidence<sup>10</sup> has been obtained which would be relevant to an application<sup>11</sup> in respect of the qualifying offence<sup>12</sup> to which the investigation relates<sup>13</sup>; or
- 2549 (b) he has reasonable grounds for believing that such new evidence is likely to be obtained as a result of the investigation<sup>14</sup>.

The specified requirements are met if:

- 2550 (i) there has been no undue delay in applying for such authorisation<sup>15</sup>;
- 2551 (ii) that authorisation has not been refused<sup>16</sup>; and
- 2552 (iii) taking into account the urgency of the situation, it is not reasonably practicable to obtain that authorisation before taking the action<sup>17</sup>.

249 (1) new evidence had been obtained which would be relevant to an application under s 76(1) or (2) (see PARA 1936 ante) in respect of the qualifying offence to which the investigation relates (s 86(6)(a)); or

(v) Arrest, Custody and Bail

1945. Arrest and charge.

Where the provisions relating to the investigation of a qualifying offence<sup>1</sup> apply to the investigation of the commission of an offence by any person and no certification<sup>2</sup> has been given:

2553 (1) a justice of the peace may issue a warrant to arrest that person for that offence only if satisfied by written information that new evidence has been obtained which would be relevant to an application for a re-trial<sup>3</sup> in respect of the commission by that person of that offence<sup>4</sup>; and 2554 (2) that person may not be arrested for that offence except under a warrant so issued<sup>5</sup>.

1 le the Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 85: see PARA 1943 ante.

2 le no certification under ibid s 85(2): see PARA 1944 ante.

3 le an application under ibid s 76(1) or (2): see PARA 1938 ante.

4 Ibid s 87(1)(a). Section 87(1) does not affect s 89(3)(b) (see PARA 1942 head (2) post) or s 91(3) (see PARA 1949 post), or any other power to arrest a person, or to issue a warrant for the arrest of a person, otherwise than for an offence: s 87(2). The Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 Pt IV (ss 34-51) (as amended) (detention) (see PARA 938 et seq ante) applies as follows where a person:

251 (1) is arrested for an offence under a warrant issued in accordance with the Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 87(1)(a) (s 87(3)(a)); or

252 (2) having been so arrested, is subsequently treated under the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 34(7) as arrested for that offence (Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 87(3)(b)).

For the purposes of the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 Pt IV (as amended) there is sufficient evidence to charge the person with the offence for which he has been arrested if, and only if, an officer of the rank of superintendent or above (who has not been directly involved in the investigation) is of the opinion that the evidence available or known to him is sufficient for the case to be referred to a prosecutor to consider whether consent should be sought for an application in respect of that person under the Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 76 (see PARA 1938 ante): s 87(4).

For the purposes of the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 Pt IV (as amended) it is the duty of the custody officer at each police station where the person is detained to make available or known to an officer at that police station of the rank of superintendent or above any evidence which it appears to him may be relevant to an application under the Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 76(1) or (2) in respect of the offence for which the person has been arrested, and to do so as soon as practicable: (a) after the evidence becomes available or known to him; or (b) if later, after he forms that view: s 87(5).

The Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 37 (see PARA 941 ante) (including any provision of s 37 as applied by s 40(8): see PARA 941 ante) has effect subject to modifications which provide for an officer of the rank of superintendent or above (who has not been directly involved in the investigation) to determine, in accordance with the Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 87(4), whether there is sufficient evidence to charge the arrested person with the offence for which he was arrested and to detain him at the police station for such period as is necessary to enable that determination to be made: see s 87(6). The Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 ss 40, 42 (see PARAS 1001, 1003 ante) are also accordingly modified: see the Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 87(7), (8).

1946. Bail and custody before application.

- 2555 (1) kept in police detention<sup>2</sup>; or
- 2556 (2) detained by a local authority in pursuance of arrangements made under the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984<sup>3</sup>, he must be brought before the Crown Court as soon as practicable and, in any event, not more than 24 hours after he is charged<sup>4</sup>.

Where a person so appears or is brought before the Crown Court<sup>5</sup>, the Crown Court may either:

- 2557 (a) grant bail for the person to appear, if notice of an application is served on him<sup>6</sup>, before the Court of Appeal at the hearing of that application<sup>7</sup>; or
- 2558 (b) remand the person in custody to be brought<sup>8</sup> before the Crown Court<sup>9</sup>.

If the Crown Court grants bail, it may revoke bail and remand the person in custody as referred to in head (b) above<sup>10</sup>.

The Crown Court may, on the application of a prosecutor<sup>18</sup>, extend or further extend the relevant period<sup>19</sup> until a specified date, but only if satisfied that:

254 (2) s 47(3) does not apply and references in s 38 to bail are references to bail subject to a duty to appear before the Crown Court at such place as the custody officer may appoint and at such time, not later than 24 hours after the person is released, as that officer may appoint; and

APPEALS/(4) RE-TRIAL FOR SERIOUS OFFENCES/(v) Arrest, Custody and Bail/1949. Revocation of bail.

1949. Revocation of bail.

Where:

- 2570 (1) a court revokes a person's bail<sup>1</sup>; and
- 2571 (2) that person is not before the court when his bail is revoked<sup>2</sup>, the court must order him to surrender himself forthwith to the custody of the court<sup>3</sup>.

Where a person surrenders himself into the custody of the court in compliance with such an order, the court must remand him in custody<sup>4</sup>. A person who has been so ordered to surrender to custody may be arrested without a warrant by an officer<sup>5</sup> if he fails without reasonable cause to surrender to custody in accordance with the order<sup>6</sup>. A person so arrested must be brought as soon as practicable, and, in any event, not more than 24 hours after he is arrested, before the court and the court must remand him in custody<sup>7</sup>.

1 Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 91(1)(a). The revoking of a person's bail referred to in the text is where a court revokes a person's bail under Pt 10 (ss 75-97) (see PARA 1937 et seq ante).

6 Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 91(3). Section 87(1) (see PARA 1945 ante) does not affect s 91(3); s 87(2).

7 Ibid s 91(4). For the purpose of calculating the period referred to in s 91(4), the following are to be disregarded: (1) Sunday; (2) Christmas Day; (3) Good Friday; (4) any day which is a bank holiday under the Banking and Financial Dealings Act 1971 (see TIME vol 97 (2010) PARA 321) in the part of the United Kingdom where the person is for the time being detained: s 91(5). For the meaning of 'United Kingdom' see PARA 45 note 2 ante. The conviction of an incorrigible rogue who is committed to the Crown Court to be dealt with under the Vagrancy Act 1824 (see PARA 835 ante) is not a conviction on indictment, the conviction being by the committing magistrates; and no appeal lies to the Court of Appeal against the conviction: R v Johnson [1909] 1 KB 439, 2 Cr App Rep 13, CA. ## (5) REFERENCES TO THE COURT OF APPEAL

(i) Points of Law

1950. Reference of a point of law by the Attorney General.

Where a person tried on indictment has been acquitted, whether in respect of the whole or part of the indictment, the Attorney General may, if he desires the opinion of the Court of Appeal on a point of law which has arisen in the case, refer that point to the court; and the court must consider the point and give its opinion on it<sup>1</sup>.

Where the Court of Appeal has given its opinion on a point so referred, the court may, of its own motion or in pursuance of an application in that behalf, refer the point to the House of Lords if it appears to the court that the point ought to be considered by that House<sup>2</sup>.

A reference so made does not affect the trial in relation to which the reference is made or any acquittal in that trial<sup>3</sup>. The Attorney General may withdraw or amend the reference at any time before the court has begun the hearing or, after that, and until the court has given its opinion, may withdraw or amend the reference by leave of the court<sup>4</sup>.

1 Criminal Justice Act 1972 s 36(1). The jurisdiction of the Court of Appeal under s 36 is exercisable by the criminal division of the court: see s 36(6). The power to refer a point of law is not confined to cases where weighty questions of law arise; it may be used for short but important points which require a quick ruling by the Court of Appeal before a potentially false decision of law has too wide a circulation: A-G's Reference (No 1 of 1975) [1975] QB 773, [1975] 2 All ER 684, CA. The power is to refer a point of law which arose in a case; there is no power to refer theoretical questions of law: A-G's Reference (No 4 of 1979) [1981] 1 All ER 1193 at 1196, 71 Cr App Rep 341 at 346, CA, per Lord Lane CJ; and see A-G's Reference (No 2 of 1975) [1976] 2 All ER 753 at 765, 62 Cr App Rep 255 at 258, CA, per James LJ.

APPEALS/(5) REFERENCES TO THE COURT OF APPEAL/(i) Points of Law/1951. Procedure on reference of a point of law by the Attorney General.

1951. Procedure on reference of a point of law by the Attorney General.

Every reference of a point of law by the Attorney General<sup>1</sup> must be in writing and must:

- 2572 (1) specify the point of law referred and, where appropriate, such facts of the case as are necessary for the proper consideration of the point of law<sup>2</sup>;
- 2573 (2) summarise the arguments intended to be put to the court<sup>3</sup>; and
- 2574 (3) specify the authorities intended to be cited<sup>4</sup>.

No mention may be made in the reference, however, of the proper name of any person or place which is likely to lead to the identification of the respondent<sup>5</sup>.

The Registrar of Criminal Appeals must cause to be served<sup>6</sup> on the respondent notice of the reference which must also:

- 2575 (a) inform the respondent that the reference will not affect the trial in relation to which it is made or any acquittal in that trial<sup>7</sup>;
- 2576 (b) invite the respondent, within such period as may be specified in the notice, being not less than 28 days from the date of service of the notice, to inform the Registrar if he wishes to present any argument to the court and, if so, whether he wishes to present such argument in person or by counsel on his behalf<sup>8</sup>.

The court may not hear argument by or on behalf of the Attorney General until the period specified in the notice has expired unless the respondent agrees or has indicated that he does not wish to present any argument to the court<sup>9</sup>.

<sup>6</sup> For the purposes of the rules relating to references to the Court of Appeal on a point of law, service of a document on the respondent may be effected:

256 (1) in the case of a document to be served on a body corporate by delivering it to the secretary or clerk of the body at its registered or principal office or sending it by post addressed to the secretary or clerk of that body at that office (CrimPR 69.6(1)(a));

257 (2) in the case of a document to be served on any other person by:

1. (a) delivering it to the person to whom it is directed (CrimPR 69.6(1)(b)(i));
2. (b) leaving it for him with some person at his last known or usual place of abode (CrimPR 69.6(1)(b)(ii)); or
3. (c) sending it by post addressed to him at his last known or usual place of abode (CrimPR 69.6(1)(b)(iii)); and service of a document on the Registrar of Criminal Appeals may be effected by:

258 (i) delivering it to the Registrar (CrimPR 69.6(2)(a));

259 (ii) addressing it to him and leaving it at his office in the Royal Courts of Justice, London, WC2 (CrimPR 69.6(2)(b)); or 260 (iii) sending it by post addressed to him at such office (CrimPR 69.6(2)(c)).

7 CrimPR 69.2(1)(a).

For the purposes of its consideration of a point of law referred to it, the Court of Appeal must hear argument: (1) by, or by counsel on behalf of, the Attorney General; and (2) if the acquitted person desires to present argument to the court, by counsel on his behalf or, with the leave of the court, by the acquitted person himself: Criminal Justice Act 1972 s 36(2).

The court must not hear argument by or on behalf of the Attorney General until the period specified in the Registrar's notice to respondent (see CrimPR 69.2(1)) has expired unless the respondent agrees or has indicated that he does not wish to present any argument to the court: CrimPR 69.2(2).

8 CrimPR 69.2(1)(b). See note 7 supra.

10 CrimPR 69.4.

1963. When a case may be referred to the Court of Appeal.

Where a person has been convicted of an offence on indictment in England and Wales, the Criminal Cases Review Commission<sup>1</sup> may at any time refer the conviction to the Court of Appeal<sup>2</sup>, and (whether or not it refers the conviction) may at any time refer to the Court of Appeal any sentence (not being a sentence fixed by law<sup>3</sup>) imposed on, or in subsequent proceedings relating to, the conviction<sup>4</sup>. Such a reference of a person's conviction is to be treated for all purposes as an appeal<sup>5</sup> by the person against the conviction<sup>6</sup>. Such a reference of a sentence imposed on, or in subsequent proceedings relating to, a person's conviction on an indictment is to be treated for all purposes as an appeal by the person<sup>7</sup> against the sentence<sup>8</sup>, and against any other sentence (not being a sentence fixed by law) imposed on, or in subsequent proceedings relating to, the conviction or any other conviction on the indictment<sup>9</sup>.

On a reference<sup>10</sup> of a person's conviction on an indictment the Commission may give notice to the Court of Appeal that any other conviction on the indictment which is specified in the notice is to be treated as referred<sup>11</sup> to the Court of Appeal<sup>12</sup>.

Where a verdict of not guilty by reason of insanity has been returned in England and Wales in the case of a person, the Commission may at any time refer the verdict to the Court of Appeal<sup>13</sup>.

Where, in England and Wales, there have been findings that a person is under a disability and that he did the act or made the omission charged against him, the Commission may at any time refer either or both of those findings to the Court of Appeal<sup>14</sup>.

That discretion must be exercised fairly and reasonably; only in rare and exceptional cases will fairness and reasonableness require a reference because of a change in the law many years after a plea of guilty: R v Clark (Brian) supra. The Commission must take into account relevant considerations and ignore the irrelevant: R (on the application of Westlake) v Criminal Cases Review Commission supra. See also PARA 1964 post. The Commission should bear in mind that its role is to refer those cases to the Court of Appeal where it considers that there might have been some real injustice, which is not the case where the likely result of the appeal is to substitute a conviction for an alternative offence: R v Smith (Wallace Duncan) (No 4) [2004] EWCA Crim 631, [2004] QB 1418, [2004] 3 WLR 229.

Where a verdict to the effect that a person was guilty of the act or omission charged against him but was insane at the time (abolished by the Criminal Procedure (Insanity) Act 1964) has been returned in England and Wales, the Commission may at any time also refer the verdict to the Court of Appeal: see the Criminal Cases Review (Insanity) Act 1999 s 1(1). A reference under the Criminal Appeal Act 1995 s 9(5) or the Criminal Cases Review (Insanity) Act 1999 s 1(1) of a verdict returned in England and Wales in the case of a person must be treated for all purposes as an appeal by the person under the Criminal Appeal Act 1968 s 12 (see PARA 1838 ante) against the verdict: Criminal Appeal Act 1995 s 9(5); Criminal Cases Review (Insanity) Act 1999 s 2(1).

The Criminal Appeal Act 1995 s 14 (see PARA 1965 post) applies in relation to a reference under the Criminal Cases Review (Insanity) Act 1999 s 1(1) as it applies in relation to references under the Criminal Appeal Act 1995 s 9: Criminal Cases Review (Insanity) Act 1999 s 1(3). The Criminal Appeal Act 1968 ss 13, 14 (see PARAS 1887-1889 ante) have effect in their application to such a reference: (1) as if references to the verdict of not guilty by reason of insanity were to the verdict of guilty but insane; and (2) as if, for the Criminal Appeal Act 1968 s 14(1)(b) (see PARA 1889 note 4 ante) there were substituted 'the accused was under a disability and': Criminal Cases Review (Insanity) Act 1999 s 2(2).

A reference under the Criminal Appeal Act 1995 s 9(6) (as amended) is to be treated for all purposes as an appeal by the person under the Criminal Appeal Act 1968 s 15 (see PARA 1839 ante) against the finding or findings referred: Criminal Appeal Act 1995 s 9(6) (as so amended).

77. (a) in the case of a conviction, verdict or finding, because of an argument, or evidence, not raised in the proceedings which led to it or on any appeal or application for leave to appeal against it<sup>4</sup>; or

78. (b) in the case of a sentence, because of an argument on a point of law, or information<sup>5</sup>, not so raised<sup>6</sup>; and

If the conditions in the Criminal Appeal Act 1995 s 13(1) are met, and the convicted person is alive, the interests of fairness usually raise a presumption in favour of referral, but different considerations apply where the convicted person is deceased; consideration of the cost to the public and the resources of the court involved in an appeal are relevant considerations to be taken into account by the Commission when exercising its discretion in posthumous cases: R v Hanratty (James) (Deceased) [2002] EWCA Crim 1141, [2002] 3 All ER 534, [2002] 2 Cr App Rep 419; R (on the application of Westlake) v Criminal Cases Review Commission [2004] EWHC 277 (Admin), (2004) Times, 19 November, DC. APPEALS/(5) REFERENCES TO THE COURT OF APPEAL/(iii) References to the Court of Appeal by the Criminal Cases Review Commission/1965. Further provisions about references.

1965. Further provisions about references.

A reference of a conviction, verdict, finding or sentence may be made by the Criminal Cases Review Commission<sup>1</sup> either after an application has been made by or on behalf of the person to whom it relates or without an application having been so made<sup>2</sup>. In considering whether to make such a reference, the Commission must have regard to: (1) any application or representations made to it by or on behalf of the person to whom it relates<sup>3</sup>; (2) any other representations made to it in relation to it<sup>4</sup>; and (3) any other matters which appear to it to be relevant<sup>5</sup>. In considering whether to make a reference to the Court of Appeal<sup>6</sup> the Commission may at any time refer any point on which it desires the assistance of the Court of Appeal to that court for the court's opinion on it; and on such a reference the Court of Appeal must consider the point referred and furnish the Commission with the court's opinion on the point<sup>7</sup>.

Where the Commission makes a reference<sup>8</sup> of a case it must: (a) give to the court to which the reference is made a statement of the Commission's reasons for making the reference<sup>9</sup>; and (b) send a copy of the statement to every person who appears to the Commission to be likely to be a party to any proceedings on the appeal arising from the reference<sup>10</sup>.

Where such a reference to the Court of Appeal is treated as an appeal against any conviction, verdict, finding or sentence, the appeal may not, without the leave of the Court of Appeal, be on any ground which is not related to any reason given by the Commission for making the reference<sup>11</sup>.

Where a reference to the Crown Court in respect of a case dealt with summarily<sup>12</sup> is treated as an appeal against any conviction, verdict, finding or sentence, the appeal may be on any ground relating to the conviction, verdict, finding or sentence (whether or not the ground is related to any reason given by the Commission for making the reference)<sup>13</sup>.

In every case in which an application has been made to the Commission by or on behalf of any person for the reference of any conviction, verdict, finding or sentence, but the Commission decides not to make such a reference, the Commission must give a statement of the reasons for its decision to the person who made the application<sup>14</sup>.

APPEALS/(6) APPEAL FROM THE COURT OF APPEAL TO THE HOUSE OF LORDS/1966. Right of appeal to the House of Lords.

(6) APPEAL FROM THE COURT OF APPEAL TO THE HOUSE OF LORDS

1966. Right of appeal to the House of Lords.

An appeal to the House of Lords lies, at the instance of the appellant<sup>1</sup> or the prosecutor<sup>2</sup>, from any decision of the Court of Appeal on an appeal<sup>3</sup> to that court<sup>4</sup>. An appeal also lies to the House of Lords, at the instance of the acquitted person or the prosecutor, from any decision of the Court of Appeal on an application<sup>5</sup> by the prosecution: (1) for an order quashing a person's acquittal, and ordering his re-trial, for a serious offence; or (2) for a determination whether an acquittal elsewhere than in the United Kingdom is a bar to the person being tried in England and Wales for a serious offence and, if it is, an order to that effect<sup>6</sup>. An appeal of these two types<sup>7</sup> lies only with the leave of the Court of Appeal or the House of Lords; and leave may not be granted unless it is certified by the Court of Appeal that a point of law of general public importance is involved in the decision and it appears to the Court of Appeal or the House of Lords (as the case may be) that the point is one which ought to be considered by that House<sup>8</sup>.

An appeal also lies to the House of Lords from an order or decision of the Court of Appeal under the provisions<sup>9</sup> relating to contempt of court<sup>10</sup>. No such appeal lies without the leave of the Court of Appeal or the House of Lords<sup>11</sup>. Where the appeal is itself against a decision on appeal, leave will be granted only if the court below certifies that a point of law of general public importance is involved and it appears to the Court of Appeal or the House of Lords (as the case may be) that the point is one which ought to be considered by that House<sup>12</sup>, but these restrictions on granting leave do not apply where the appeal is against an original order of the Court of Appeal when leave may be given without such a certificate<sup>13</sup>.

Except as provided by the above provisions<sup>14</sup>, no appeal lies from any decision of the criminal division of the Court of Appeal<sup>15</sup>.

1    Ie the person who was the appellant before the criminal division of the Court of Appeal.

2    The reference to the prosecutor includes a reference to the Director of the Assets Recovery Agency in a case where (and to the extent that) he is a party to the appeal to the Court of Appeal: Criminal Appeal Act 1968 s 33(1A) (added by the Proceeds of Crime Act 2002 s 456, Sch 11 paras 1, 4(1), (2)).

NOTES 4, 6--Appointed day is 1 October 2009: SI 2009/1604.

Halsbury's Laws of England/CRIMINAL LAW, EVIDENCE AND PROCEDURE (VOLUME 11(1) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1-620; VOLUME 11(2) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 621-1049; VOLUME 11(3) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1050-1557; VOLUME 11(4) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1558-2180)/22. APPEALS/(6) APPEAL FROM THE COURT OF APPEAL TO THE HOUSE OF LORDS/1967. Application for leave to appeal.

1967. Application for leave to appeal.

An application to the Court of Appeal for leave to appeal<sup>1</sup> to the House of Lords must be made within the period of 28 days beginning with the date of the Court of Appeal's decision, or, if later, the date on which the Court gives reasons for its decision<sup>2</sup>; and an application to the House of Lords for leave must be made within the period of 28 days<sup>3</sup> beginning with the date on which the application for leave is refused by the Court of Appeal<sup>4</sup>. The House of Lords or the Court of Appeal may, upon application<sup>5</sup> made at any time by the defendant or, in certain appeals<sup>6</sup>, by the prosecution, extend the time within which an application may be made by him to that House or the Court of Appeal<sup>7</sup>.

1 Application to the Court of Appeal for leave to appeal to the House of Lords under the Criminal Appeal Act 1968 Pt II (ss 33-44) (as amended) must either be made orally immediately after the decision of the Court of Appeal or by notice of appeal served on the Registrar of Criminal Appeals: CrimPR 74.1(1)(a). The notice of appeal must be in the form set out in Practice Direction (Criminal Proceedings: Consolidation) [2002] 3 All ER 904, [2002] 2 Cr App Rep 533, Annex D, CA; Amendment to the Consolidated Criminal Practice Direction (Forms for use in criminal proceedings) [2005] 2 All ER 916, [2005] 1 WLR 1479, Annex D, CA. The same procedure also applies to: (1) an application for leave to appeal under the Administration of Justice Act 1960 s 13 (as amended) (see PARA 1920 ante); (2) an application to extend the time within which an application may be made by the defendant to the House of Lords or to the court for leave to appeal under the Criminal Appeal Act 1968 s 34(1) (see infra) or under s 34(1) as applied by the Administration of Justice Act 1960 s 13(4) (see PARA 1920 ante); (3) an application by the defendant to be given leave to be present on the hearing of the appeal or of any proceedings preliminary or incidental thereto; and (4) an application by the defendant to be granted bail pending the appeal: CrimPR 74.1(1)(a)-(d). In CrimPR 74.1 any reference to a defendant includes an appellant under the Administration of Justice Act 1960 s 13 (as amended) (see PARA 1920 ante): CrimPR 74.1(8). As to bail pending the appeal see PARAS 1198 ante, 1969 post; and as to the mode of service see PARA 1862 ante.

An application to the Court of Appeal for leave to appeal to the House of Lords under the Criminal Justice Act 2003 Pt 9 (ss 57-74) (prosecution appeals against rulings: see PARA 1898 et seq ante) may be made orally after the decision of the Court of Appeal from which an appeal lies to the House of Lords; or in writing and served on the Registrar within seven business days of the reasons for the decision: CrimPR 66.16(1). If leave to appeal to the House of Lords is granted by the Court of Appeal, or a party has made an application to the House of Lords for leave, in a case where the judge of the court has decided that the appeal should be expedited under the Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 59(1) (see PARA 1900 ante) and that decision has not subsequently been reversed under s 59(4) (see PARA 1900 ante), the Registrar must inform the court officer that the jury is to be discharged from giving a verdict in respect of that defendant: CrimPR 66.16(2).

If there does not seem to be a point of law of general public importance, the court may deal with an application for leave to appeal on the papers without granting legal aid or leave to be present: R v Daines, R v Williams [1961] 1 All ER 290n, 45 Cr App Rep 57, CCA.

An application for leave to appeal to the House of Lords under the Criminal Appeal Act 1968 Pt II (as amended), or the Administration of Justice Act 1960 s 13 (as amended) may be abandoned before the hearing of the application by serving on the Registrar notice to that effect: CrimPR 74.1(4). CrimPR 68.11 (supply of documentary and other exhibits: see PARA 1857 ante), 68.13(2) (supply of transcripts: see PARA 1860 ante), 68.23 (Registrar's powers and duties: see PARA 1856 ante) apply in relation to an appeal under the Criminal Appeal Act 1968 Pt II (as amended) or the Administration of Justice Act 1960 s 13 (as amended) (see PARA 1920 ante) as they apply in relation to an appeal under the Criminal Appeal Act 1968 Pt I (ss 1-32) (as amended) (see PARA 1837 et seq ante), except that any reference to s 31 is to be construed as a reference to s 44: CrimPR 74.1(7). CrimPR 68.29 (notice of determination of court: see PARA 1894 ante) applies to a determination under the Criminal Appeal Act 1968 Pt II (as amended) or the Administration of Justice Act 1960 s 13 (as amended) with the necessary modifications: CrimPR 74.1(6). As from a day to be appointed the appellate jurisdiction of the House of Lords is replaced with that of the new Supreme Court: see the Administration of Justice Act 1960 s 1(1) (as prospectively amended); and PARA 2020 post. At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed.

2 le the 'relevant date': Criminal Appeals Act 1968 s 34(1A) (added by the Courts Act 2003 s 88(4), (6)).

3 Where the time prescribed expires on a Saturday, Sunday, bank holiday or other day on which the Judicial Office is closed, the application will be received if made on the next ensuing day on which the Judicial Office is open: House of Lords Practice Directions Applicable to Criminal Appeals (2006) Direction 3.2.

4 Criminal Appeal Act 1968 s 34(1) (amended by the Courts Act 2003 s 88(4), (5)). As from a day to be appointed, in the Criminal Appeal Act 1968 s 34 (as amended), the words 'Supreme Court' are substituted for the words 'House of Lords' and the words 'the Supreme Court' are substituted for the words 'that House' by the Constitutional Reform Act 2005 s 40(4), Sch 9 para 16(1), (4) (see note 1 supra). At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed.

Only in exceptional circumstances can the Court of Appeal entertain more than one application for leave to appeal to the House of Lords: R v Ashdown [1974] 1 All ER 800, 58 Cr App Rep 339, CA, applying R v Grantham [1969] QB 574, 53 Cr App Rep 369, CA. Application to the House of Lords is made by petition. For the form of petition see House of Lords Practice Directions Applicable to Criminal Appeals (2006) Direction 4.1-4.3, Appendix A, Form 1. As to the procedure generally see Directions 3-7; and as to the hearing of the application see PARA 1967 post.

5 As to the mode of application to the Court of Appeal for extension of time see note 1 supra. Such application to the House of Lords is by petition. For the form of petition see House of Lords Practice Directions Applicable to Criminal Appeals (2006) Direction 3.2, Appendix A, Form 3. As to the prospective replacement of the House of Lords by the Supreme Court see note 1 supra.

6 le appeals under the Criminal Appeal Act 1968 s 33(1B) (as added): see PARA 1966 note 6 ante. Apart from these appeals, there is no power to extend the time limit on an application by the prosecution: R v Weir [2001] 2 All ER 216, [2001] 1 WLR 421, HL.

7 Criminal Appeal Act 1968 s 34(2) (amended by the Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 81(1), (4); and prospectively amended (see note 4 supra)). As to a representation order on appeals to the House of Lords see LEGAL AID vol 65 (2008) PARA 151; as to the suspension of orders for the restitution of property and compensation orders pending an appeal to the House of Lords see SENTENCING AND DISPOSITION OF OFFENDERS vol 92 (2010) PARAS 382, 389; and as to bail pending such appeal see PARA 1969 post.

An appeal to the House of Lords is to be treated as pending until any application for leave to appeal is disposed of and, if leave to appeal is granted, until the appeal is disposed of; and for purposes of the Criminal Appeal Act 1968 Pt II (as amended) an application for leave to appeal is to be treated as disposed of at the expiration of the time within which it may be made, if it is not made within that time: s 34(3) (prospectively amended: see note 4 supra).

APPEALS/(6) APPEAL FROM THE COURT OF APPEAL TO THE HOUSE OF LORDS/1974. Hearing and disposal of appeal by the House of Lords.

1974. Hearing and disposal of appeal by the House of Lords.

Until a day to be appointed<sup>1</sup>, an appeal<sup>2</sup> must not be heard or determined by the House of Lords unless there are present at least three of the persons designated<sup>3</sup> Lords of Appeal<sup>4</sup>.

For the purpose of disposing of an appeal, the House of Lords may exercise any powers of the Court of Appeal or may remit the case to that court<sup>5</sup>.

1 The Criminal Appeal Act 1968 s 35(1), (2) is repealed by the Constitutional Reform Act 2005 ss 40(4), 146, Sch 9 para 16(1), (5)(a), Sch 18 Pt 5 as from a day to be appointed under s 148(1). At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed.

2 Ie under the Criminal Appeal Act 1968 Pt II (ss 33-44) (as amended): see PARA 1966 et seq ante.

3 Ie by the Appellate Jurisdiction Act 1876 s 5: see COURTS vol 10 (Reissue) PARA 365.

4 Criminal Appeal Act 1968 s 35(1) (prospectively repealed: see note 1 supra). Section 35(1) applies on a reference to the House of Lords under the Criminal Justice Act 1972 s 36 (as amended) or the Criminal Justice Act 1988 s 36 (as amended): see PARA 1976 post. Applications for leave to appeal may be heard by a committee constituted in accordance with the Appellate Jurisdiction Act 1876 s 5; and any order of the House so providing may direct that the decision of that committee be taken on behalf of the House: see the Criminal Appeal Act 1968 s 35(2) (prospectively repealed: see note 1 supra); and COURTS vol 10 (Reissue) PARA 365. As to applications for leave to appeal see PARAS 1967-1968 ante. As from a day to be appointed, the appellate jurisdiction of the House of Lords is replaced with that of the new Supreme Court: see the Administration of Justice Act 1960 s 1(1) (as prospectively amended); and PARA 2020 post. The Supreme Court is duly constituted in any proceedings only if all the following conditions are met: (1) the court consists of an uneven number of judges; (2) the court consists of at least three judges; (3) more than half of those judges are permanent judges: Constitutional Reform Act 2005 s 42(1) (not yet in force). For powers to make directions increasing the minimum number of judges in specified proceedings see s 42(2), (3), (5) (not yet in force). At the date at which this volume states the law no such days had been appointed.

5 Criminal Appeal Act 1968 s 35(3). As from a day to be appointed, the words 'Supreme Court' are substituted for the words 'House of Lords' by the Constitutional Reform Act 2005 s 40(4), Sch 9 para 16(1), (5) (b). At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed.

When a case is remitted to the Court of Appeal, its powers under the Criminal Appeal Act 1968 Pt I (ss 1-32) (as amended) revive and it deals with the matter as if it were an appeal from an inferior court: R v Kearley (No 2) [1994] 2 AC 414, [1994] 3 All ER 246, HL; as to these powers see PARA 1877 et seq ante. As to the commencement of sentences passed by the House of Lords see PARA 1970 ante; and as to the power of the House of Lords to make compensation orders see SENTENCING AND DISPOSITION OF OFFENDERS vol 92 (2010) PARA 382.

Where the Court of Appeal has left a ground of appeal unresolved because it has decided that another ground is conclusively in favour of the appellant, and the House of Lords on an appeal by the prosecution holds in favour of the prosecution on that latter ground, the House of Lords can either consider the unresolved ground or remit it to the Court of Appeal: R v Mandair [1995] 1 AC 208, [1994] 2 All ER 715, HL.

(10) APPEALS TO THE CROWN COURT

(i) Right of Appeal

1980. Right of appeal from magistrates' courts.

A person convicted by a magistrates' court may appeal to the Crown Court<sup>1</sup>: (1) if he pleaded guilty, against his sentence<sup>2</sup>; and (2) if he did not, against the conviction or sentence<sup>3</sup>. Where a person is ordered<sup>4</sup> by a magistrates' court<sup>5</sup> to enter into a recognisance with or without sureties to keep the peace or to be of good behaviour, he may appeal to the Crown Court<sup>6</sup>.

For these purposes, 'sentence' includes any order made on conviction<sup>7</sup> by a magistrates' court, not being: (a) an order for the payment of costs<sup>8</sup>; (b) an order<sup>9</sup> for the destruction of an animal<sup>10</sup>; or (c) an order made in pursuance of an enactment under which the court has no discretion as to the making of the order or its terms<sup>11</sup>.

A person in respect of whom a relevant order<sup>12</sup> is revoked and another substituted may appeal to the Crown Court against the sentence<sup>13</sup>.

There is no right of appeal against the dismissal of an information<sup>14</sup> or complaint before a magistrates' court unless the statute concerned expressly confers it<sup>15</sup>.

A defendant may appeal to the Crown Court against a magistrates' court's decision to extend or further extend<sup>16</sup> a custody time limit or an overall time limit<sup>17</sup> or (at any time after the person arrested has been charged with the offence in question) an initial stage time limit<sup>18</sup>; but the extension of any such time limit may not be called into question in any appeal against conviction<sup>19</sup>. The prosecution may appeal to the Crown Court against a decision by a magistrates' court to refuse to extend such a limit<sup>20</sup>.

A parent or guardian may appeal to the Crown Court against: (i) an order<sup>21</sup> requiring him to pay a fine etc on behalf of a child or young person<sup>22</sup> imposed by a magistrates' court<sup>23</sup>; or (ii) an order<sup>24</sup> made by a magistrates' court binding him over, consequent on the conviction of his child or ward who is a child or young person<sup>25</sup>.

Any person aggrieved by the decision of a magistrates' court making a banning order arising out of an offence outside England and Wales<sup>26</sup> may appeal to the Crown Court against the decision<sup>27</sup>.

In certain circumstances the prosecution may appeal to the Crown Court against the grant of bail by a magistrates' court<sup>28</sup>.

A party to the proceedings or, with the leave of the Crown Court, any other person may appeal to the Crown Court against the making or refusal to make an order<sup>29</sup> dispensing with the restriction<sup>30</sup> on reports relating to a person under 18 involved in an offence if it is likely to lead members of the public to identify him as a person involved in the offence<sup>31</sup>.

1 As to the Crown Court's appellate jurisdiction see COURTS vol 10 (Reissue) PARAS 628-630.

2 Magistrates' Courts Act 1980 s 108(1)(a). The Crown Court has no jurisdiction to hear an appeal against conviction by a person who pleaded guilty unless the plea was made under duress: R v Crown Court at Huntingdon, ex p Jordan [1981] QB 857, 73 Cr App Rep 194, DC (Crown Court may investigate an apparently unequivocal plea where duress is alleged) or unless the plea was equivocal: R v West Kent Quarter Sessions Appeal Committee, ex p Files [1951] 2 All ER 728, DC; R v Durham Quarter Sessions, ex p Virgo [1952] 2 QB 1, [1952] 1 All ER 466, DC; R v London County Quarter Sessions Appeal Committee Deputy Chairman, ex p Borg [1958] 1 QB 43, [1957] 3 All ER 28, DC (explaining Mittelman v Denman [1920] 1 KB 519, DC). Where it appears to the Crown Court that a person is seeking to appeal against conviction on the ground that the plea of guilty was equivocal, the court is bound to determine the validity of that plea as a preliminary point: see R v Marylebone Justices, ex p Westminster City Council [1971] 1 All ER 1025, [1971] 1 WLR 567, DC. See also R v Tottenham Justices, ex p Rubens [1970] 1 All ER 879, [1970] 1 WLR 800, DC. However, the Crown Court should not set about making such an inquiry unless it is told something which prima facie raises the issue of an equivocal plea having been tendered: R v Crown Court at Coventry, ex p Manson (1978) 67 Cr App Rep 315, DC. In considering whether the plea was equivocal, the court may have regard only to what happened before the magistrates; the Crown Court has no jurisdiction to hear an appeal against conviction merely because the defendant later regrets pleading guilty and thinks that he has an arguable case: R v Marylebone Justices, ex p Westminster City Council supra. Also see R v Crown Court at Birmingham, ex p Sharma [1988] Crim LR 741, DC (Crown Court had no jurisdiction to hear appeal against conviction after defendant unintentionally pleaded guilty by post). Provided that it has conducted a proper inquiry into the circumstances of the acceptance of a guilty plea, the Crown Court may direct a magistrates' court that a not guilty plea be entered and a summary trial be held: R v Plymouth Justices, ex p Hart [1986] QB 950, 83 Cr App Rep 81, DC. In order to decide safely whether a plea was equivocal the Crown Court must have sufficient evidence of what happened at the hearing in the magistrates' court when the defendant was convicted and sentenced: R v Plymouth Justices, ex p Hart supra. Evidence as to what happened before the magistrates should normally be supplied by way of affidavits from the chairman of the bench and the justices' clerk: see R v Rochdale Justices, ex p Allwork [1981] 3 All ER 434, 73 Cr App Rep 319, DC; R v Plymouth Justices, ex p Hart supra. An appeal lies against an invalid sentence: R v Birmingham Justices, ex p Wyatt [1975] 3 All ER 897, [1976] 1 WLR 260, DC.

3 Magistrates' Courts Act 1980 s 108(1)(b). The Powers of Criminal Courts (Sentencing) Act 2000 s 14 (under which a conviction of an offence for which an order for conditional or absolute discharge is made is deemed not to be a conviction except for certain purposes: see SENTENCING AND DISPOSITION OF OFFENDERS vol 92 (2010) PARA 41) does not prevent an appeal under the Magistrates' Courts Act 1980 s 108 (as amended), whether against conviction or otherwise: s 108(1A) (added by the Criminal Justice Act 1982 s 66(2); and amended by the Criminal Justice Act 1991 s 101(2), Sch 13; Powers of Criminal Courts (Sentencing) Act 2000 s 165(1), Sch 9 para 71).

4 lie under the Justices of the Peace Act 1361 or otherwise.

5 lie as defined in the Magistrates' Courts Act 1980: see MAGISTRATES vol 29(2) (Reissue) PARA 583.

6 Magistrates' Courts (Appeals from Binding over Orders) Act 1956 s 1(1) (amended by the Courts Act 1971 s 56(2), Sch 9 Pt I; and the Magistrates' Courts Act 1980 s 154, Sch 7 para 16). Nothing in the Magistrates' Courts (Appeals from Binding over Orders) Act 1956 s 1 (as amended) applies in relation to any order an appeal from which lies to the Crown Court apart from the provisions of s 1 (as amended): s 1(3) (amended by the Courts Act 1971 s 56(2), Sch 9 Pt I). As to the grounds of appeal against a binding over order see Hughes v Holley (1988) 86 Cr App Rep 130, DC. Such an appeal is by way of a rehearing; unless the appellant admits the facts on which the order was based, sworn evidence must be adduced which may be cross-examined: Shaw v Hamilton [1982] 2 All ER 718, 4 Cr App Rep (S) 80, DC.

7 An 'order made on conviction' means an order made in consequence of a conviction and therefore does not include an order to find sureties even when such an order is made following the imposition of a penalty for an offence: R v London Sessions, ex p Beaumont [1951] 1 KB 557, [1951] 1 All ER 232, DC; but as to an appeal against a binding over order see the text to note 6 supra. An order of examining justices committing an defendant for trial is not an order made on conviction: see Card v Salmon [1953] 1 QB 392 at 396, [1953] 1 All ER 324 at 326 per Lord Goddard CJ; Atkinson v United States of America Government [1971] AC 197, [1969] 3 All ER 1317, HL. Nor is a committal to the Crown Court for sentence: R v London Sessions Appeal Committee, ex p Rogers [1951] 2 KB 74, [1951] 1 All ER 343, DC. However, an appeal may be brought against the conviction upon which the committal for sentence is based: see PARA 1981 post.

An order forfeiting recognisances is not an order made upon conviction: R v Durham Justices, ex p Laurent [1945] KB 33, [1944] 2 All ER 530, DC. There is no appeal to the Crown Court against an order by a justice of the peace condemning food as unfit for human consumption: R v Cornwall Quarter Sessions Appeal Committee, ex p Kerly [1956] 2 All ER 872, [1956] 1 WLR 906, DC. A sentence of imprisonment in default of payment of an estreated recognisance is not an order made on conviction: R v Harman [1959] 2 QB 134, 43 Cr App Rep 161, CCA. For the purposes of an appeal to the Crown Court, a discretionary order of disqualification under the Road Traffic Acts is an order made on conviction: see R v Surrey Quarter Sessions, ex p Metropolitan Police Comr [1963] 1 QB 990, [1962] 1 All ER 825, DC. A mandatory disqualification may not be the subject of an appeal against sentence, since the magistrates have no discretion as to the making of it (see the text to note 11 infra); but appeal lies against a disqualification under the Road Traffic Offenders Act 1988 s 34 or s 35 (as amended: see ROAD TRAFFIC vol 40(2) (2007 Reissue) PARA 1057 et seq) as it does against a conviction (s 38(1)).

An appeal lies against a hospital or guardianship order made by a magistrates' court under the Mental Health Act 1983 s 37(3) without convicting the defendant as if it had been made on his conviction (see SENTENCING AND DISPOSITION OF OFFENDERS vol 92 (2010) PARA 332): see s 45; and MENTAL HEALTH vol 30(2) (Reissue) PARA 505. A recommendation for deportation under the Immigration Act 1971 s 6 (as amended) (see SENTENCING AND DISPOSITION OF OFFENDERS vol 92 (2010) PARA 9) is treated as a sentence for the purposes of appeal: see BRITISH NATIONALITY, IMMIGRATION AND ASYLUM vol 4(2) (2002 Reissue) PARA 160. 'Sentence' for the purposes of appeal also includes a declaration of relevance under the Football Spectators Act 1989: see s 23(3); and THEATRES AND OTHER FORMS OF ENTERTAINMENT vol 45(2) (Reissue) PARA 112. A banning order made on conviction of a relevant offence must be quashed if the declaration of relevance in respect of that offence is quashed on appeal: see s 23(4); and THEATRES AND OTHER FORMS OF ENTERTAINMENT vol 45(2) (Reissue) PARA 112.

8 Magistrates' Courts Act 1980 s 108(3)(b). A person sentenced by a magistrates' court for an offence in respect of which an order for conditional discharge has been previously made may appeal to the Crown Court against the sentence: s 108(2) (amended by the Crime and Disorder Act 1998 ss 119, 120, Sch 8 para 43, Sch 10).

11 Ibid s 108(3)(d). See R v Surrey Quarter Sessions, ex p Metropolitan Police Comr [1963] 1 QB 990, [1962] 1 All ER 825, DC. As from a day to be appointed, the Magistrates' Courts Act 1980 s 108(3)(d) does not prevent an appeal against a surcharge imposed under the Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 161A (as added): Magistrates' Courts Act 1980 s 108(4) (prospectively added by the Domestic Violence, Crime and Victims Act 2004 s 58(1), Sch 10 para 10). At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed.

13 See the Powers of Criminal Courts (Sentencing) Act 2000 Sch 3 para 10(3)(b), (6); and SENTENCING AND DISPOSITION OF OFFENDERS vol 92 (2010) PARA 236. As from 4 April 2007, the Powers of Criminal Courts (Sentencing) Act 2000 Sch 3 is substituted by the Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 304, Sch 32 paras 90, 125: (see SENTENCING AND DISPOSITION OF OFFENDERS vol 92 (2010) PARA 233) but not so as to affect the meaning of Sch 3 para 10(3)(b), (6), which is recast in the substituted Sch 3 as para 10(3)(b), (5) (see SENTENCING AND DISPOSITION OF OFFENDERS vol 92 (2010) PARA 236).

14 As from a day to be appointed, any reference (however expressed) in any enactment which is or includes a reference to an information within the meaning of the Magistrates' Courts Act 1980 s 1 (or to the laying of such an information) is to be read as including a reference to a written charge (or to the issue of a written charge): Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 30(5)(a) (not yet in force). APPEALS/ (10) APPEALS TO THE CROWN COURT/(i) Right of Appeal/1981. Appeal by person committed to the Crown Court for sentence etc.

1981. Appeal by person committed to the Crown Court for sentence etc.

A person convicted by a magistrates' court and committed to the Crown Court for sentence<sup>1</sup>, or to be otherwise dealt with<sup>2</sup>, may appeal to the Crown Court against the conviction on which the committal was based, but not against the order of committal itself<sup>3</sup>. Opportunity must be given for the appeal to be heard before the Crown Court proceeds to pass sentence or otherwise deals with the offender<sup>4</sup>.

1 As to the power to commit to the Crown Court for sentence see PARA 1123 ante; and MAGISTRATES vol 29(2) (Reissue) PARA 777 et seq.

3 R v London Sessions Appeal Committee, ex p Rogers [1951] 2 KB 74, [1951] 1 All ER 343, DC. The decision relates specifically to committal for sentence under the Criminal Justice Act 1948 s 29 (repealed); but the same considerations apply in the case of committals to the Crown Court under other statutory provisions. See also R v Tottenham Justices, ex p Rubens [1970] 1 All ER 879, [1970] 1 WLR 800, DC.

4 R v Faithful [1950] 2 All ER 1251, 34 Cr App Rep 220, CCA. Where, however, the defendant does not seek leave to appeal before the Crown Court passes sentence on him, but seeks leave to appeal at a later date, the decision by the Crown Court determining sentence does not render the court functus officio in regard to its jurisdiction to hear an appeal against conviction: R v Crown Court at Croydon, ex p Bernard [1980] 3 All ER 106, 72 Cr App Rep 29, DC.

APPEALS/ (10) APPEALS TO THE CROWN COURT/(i) Right of Appeal/1982. Reference by Criminal Cases Review Commission of cases dealt with summarily.

1982. Reference by Criminal Cases Review Commission of cases dealt with summarily.

Where a person has been convicted of an offence by a magistrates' court, the Criminal Cases Review Commission<sup>1</sup>: (1) may at any time refer the conviction to the Crown Court<sup>2</sup>; and (2) (whether or not it refers the conviction) may at any time refer to the Crown Court any sentence imposed on, or in subsequent proceedings relating to, the conviction<sup>3</sup>. Such a reference of a person's conviction is to be treated for all purposes as an appeal by the person<sup>4</sup> against the conviction (whether or not he pleaded guilty)<sup>5</sup>. Such a reference of a sentence imposed on, or in subsequent proceedings relating to, a person's conviction is to be treated for all purposes as an appeal by the person<sup>6</sup> against: (a) the sentence; and (b) any other sentence imposed on, or in subsequent proceedings relating to, the conviction or any related conviction<sup>7</sup>.

On such a reference of a person's conviction the Commission may give notice to the Crown Court that any related conviction<sup>8</sup> which is specified in the notice is to be treated as referred<sup>9</sup> to the Crown Court<sup>10</sup>.

On a reference under the above provisions the Crown Court may not award any punishment more severe than that awarded by the court whose decision is referred<sup>11</sup>. The Crown Court may grant bail to a person whose conviction or sentence has been so referred; and any time during which he is released on bail does not count as part of any term of imprisonment or detention under his sentence<sup>12</sup>.

APPEALS/ (10) APPEALS TO THE CROWN COURT/(i) Right of Appeal/1983. Respondent to the appeal.

1983. Respondent to the appeal.

It is the duty of the Director of Public Prosecutions to have the conduct of any criminal proceedings, other than specified proceedings, instituted on behalf of a police force<sup>1</sup>. The justices whose decision is appealed against also have an absolute right to appear, to instruct counsel, and to call evidence in support of the decision at which they have arrived and which is under consideration by the Crown Court<sup>2</sup>. In so doing they do not make themselves a party to the appeal, and no order may be made against them in respect of costs<sup>3</sup>.

In appeals against binding over orders the other party to the proceedings which were the occasion of making the order is the respondent to the appeal<sup>4</sup>.

1984. Practice on appeal.

A. APPEALS RELATING TO CUSTODY TIME LIMITS

1986. Appeals relating to custody time limits.

An appeal relating to a custody time limit<sup>1</sup> must be commenced by the appellant's giving notice<sup>2</sup> in writing of appeal:

- 2587 (1) to the court officer for the magistrates' court which took the decision<sup>3</sup>;
- 2588 (2) if the appeal is brought by the defendant, to the prosecutor and, if the prosecution is to be carried on by the Crown Prosecution Service<sup>4</sup>, to the appropriate Crown Prosecutor<sup>5</sup>;
- 2589 (3) if the appeal is brought by the prosecution, to the defendant<sup>6</sup>; and
- 2590 (4) to the Crown Court officer<sup>7</sup>.

On receiving such notice, the Crown Court officer must enter the appeal and give notice of the time and place of the hearing to the appellant, the other party to the appeal and the clerk to the magistrates' court which took the decision<sup>8</sup>. An appellant may<sup>9</sup> abandon such an appeal by giving notice in writing to any person to whom notice of appeal is required to be given under heads (1) to (4) above not later than the third day<sup>10</sup> preceding the day fixed for the hearing of the appeal<sup>11</sup>.

1    le an appeal brought by the defendant under the Prosecution of Offences Act 1985 s 22(7) (as amended) or by the prosecution under s 22(8) (as amended): see PARA 1152 ante.

2    The notice must state the date on which the custody time limit applicable to the case is due to expire, and, if the appeal is brought by the defendant under ibid s 22(7) (as amended) (see PARA 1152 ante), the date on which the time limit would have expired had the court decided not to extend or further extend the time limit: CrimPR 20.1(1), (3).

B. APPEALS AGAINST CONVICTION OR SENTENCE

1987. Notice of appeal.

An appeal<sup>1</sup> is commenced by the appellant giving notice of appeal not later than 21 days<sup>2</sup> after the day on which the decision appealed against is given<sup>3</sup>. The notice must be in writing<sup>4</sup> and must be given to a court officer for the magistrates' court and to any other party to the appeal<sup>5</sup>. The notice must state the grounds of appeal<sup>6</sup>.

1 le under the Magistrates' Courts Act 1980 s 108(1) (see PARA 1980 ante).

2 le excluding the day of decision but including the twenty-first day: Goldsmiths' Co v West Metropolitan Rly Co [1904] 1 KB 1, CA; Stewart v Chapman [1951] 2 KB 792, 35 Cr App Rep 102, DC.

3 CrimPR 63.2(1), (3). For these purposes, where the magistrates' court has adjourned the trial of an information after conviction, the day on which the court's decision is given is the day on which the court sentences or otherwise deals with the offender: CrimPR 63.2(3).

However, where a court exercises its power to defer sentence under the Powers of Criminal Courts (Sentencing) Act 2000 s 1(1) (see SENTENCING AND DISPOSITION OF OFFENDERS vol 92 (2010) PARA 22), that day is, for the purposes of an appeal against conviction, the day on which the court exercises that power: CrimPR 63.2(3) proviso. The time for giving notice may be extended by the Crown Court: see CrimPR 63.2(1), (5)-(7); and PARA 1988 post.

4 For the meaning of 'writing' see PARA 578 note 3 ante.

5 CrimPR 63.2(1), (2). As to the parties to an appeal, other than the appellant, see PARA 1983 ante; and as to service of notices see PARA 1992 post.

Service on the solicitors to the other party is not sufficient if they are no longer instructed: R v Oxfordshire Justices [1893] 2 QB 149, CA. See also R v Essex Justices, ex p Holmes (1895) 11 TLR 187, DC (wrong address). Where the other party consists of a number of joint owners, service on one is sufficient: R v Liverpool Recorder (1861) 31 LJMC 127. In third party proceedings notice of appeal must be given to the original prosecutor and to the third party: R v Derby Recorder, ex p Spalton [1944] KB 611, [1944] 1 All ER 721, DC; R v Epsom Justices, ex p Dawnier Motors Ltd [1961] 1 QB 201, [1960] 3 All ER 635, DC.

6 CrimPR 63.2(1), (4). The appellate court is the sole judge of the sufficiency of the notice, and a decision on it is not liable to judicial review: R v Durham Justices (1891) 7 TLR 453, DC. See also Provincial Motor Cab Co Ltd v Dunning (1909) as reported in 25 TLR 646 at 647, DC. It is questionable whether the Crown Court has power to hear an appeal against conviction when the notice refers only to appeal against sentence: see PARA 2000 post.

1988. Extension of time for appealing.

The time for giving notice of appeal may be extended, either before or after it expires, by the Crown Court<sup>1</sup>.

An application for an extension of time must be made in writing, specifying the grounds of the application<sup>2</sup> and be sent to a Crown Court officer<sup>3</sup>. The application is considered by a judge on the written grounds. An applicant does not have the right to an oral hearing; it is for the judge considering the written application to decide whether he, or another judge, should hear oral argument. An oral hearing may be held in chambers or in open court<sup>4</sup>.

Where the Crown Court extends the time for giving notice of appeal, the Crown Court officer must give notice of the extension to the appellant and to the magistrates' court officer<sup>5</sup>; and the appellant must give notice of the extension to any other party to the appeal<sup>6</sup>.

NOTES--CrimPR Pt 4 now Criminal Procedure Rules 2010, SI 2010/60, Pt 4.

Halsbury's Laws of England/CRIMINAL LAW, EVIDENCE AND PROCEDURE (VOLUME 11(1) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1-620; VOLUME 11(2) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 621-1049; VOLUME 11(3) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1050-1557; VOLUME 11(4) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1558-2180)/22. APPEALS/ (10) APPEALS TO THE CROWN COURT/(ii) Practice and Procedure/B. APPEALS AGAINST CONVICTION OR SENTENCE/1993. Abandonment of appeal.

1993. Abandonment of appeal.

An appellant may<sup>1</sup> abandon an appeal by giving notice in writing<sup>2</sup>, not later than the third day before the day fixed for hearing the appeal<sup>3</sup>, to the magistrates' court officer, to the Crown Court officer and to any other party to the appeal<sup>4</sup>. Thereafter the appellant must obtain leave of the court to abandon an appeal<sup>5</sup>.

Where notice to abandon an appeal has been duly given by the appellant:

2591 (1) the court against whose decision the appeal<sup>6</sup> was brought may issue process for enforcing that decision, subject to anything already suffered or done under it by the appellant<sup>7</sup>; and

2592 (2) the court may, on the application of the other party to the appeal, order the appellant to pay to that party such costs as appear to the court to be just and reasonable in respect of expenses properly incurred by that party in connection with the appeal before notice of the abandonment<sup>8</sup> was given to that party<sup>9</sup>.

1 le without prejudice to the power of the Crown Court to give leave for an appeal to be abandoned.

2 As to service of notices etc see PARA 1992 ante. Where an appellant is deliberately absent from the appeal hearing, the Crown Court is not able to conclude that the appeal has impliedly been abandoned: R (on the application of Hayes) v Crown Court at Chelmsford [2003] EWHC 73 (Admin), [2003] Crim LR 400, 167 JP 65.

3 For the purposes of determining whether notice of abandonment was given in time, there are to be disregarded any Saturday, Sunday and any day which is specified to be a bank holiday in England and Wales under the Banking and Financial Dealings Act 1971 s 1(1) (see TIME vol 97 (2010) PARA 321): CrimPR 63.5(3).

4 CrimPR 63.5(1), (2). As to the parties to an appeal, other than the appellant, see PARA 1983 ante.

A notice of abandonment deliberately given without fraudulent inducement or material mistake may not subsequently be withdrawn. The Crown Court is, however, empowered to treat an abandonment as a nullity and remain seised of the appeal where, after investigation, it finds that there has been no real abandonment because notice has been given under a mistake or as a result of fraudulent inducement: R v Essex Quarter Sessions Appeals Committee, ex p Larkin [1962] 1 QB 712, [1961] 3 All ER 930, DC; R v Crown Court at Croydon, ex p Clair [1986] 2 All ER 716, 83 Cr App Rep 202, DC. Unless the Crown Court is satisfied that the notice of abandonment was a nullity, there is no jurisdiction to reinstate an abandoned appeal: R v Crown Court at Knightsbridge, ex p Comrs of Customs and Excise [1986] Crim LR 324, DC. The powers of the Crown Court, the Court of Appeal and the Courts-martial Appeal Court in this respect are probably identical: R v Essex Quarter Sessions Appeals Committee, ex p Larkin supra at 717 and 932 per Lord Parker CJ. As to the abandonment of appeals to the Court of Appeal see PARA 1876 ante.

5 R v Crown Court at Guildford, ex p Brewer (1987) 87 Cr App Rep 265, DC. If an application is made before the hearing of the appeal begins, leave will be refused only in the most exceptional circumstances; but, once the hearing has begun, leave will only be granted in such circumstances: R v Crown Court at Manchester, ex p Welby (1981) 73 Cr App Rep 248, DC (application to abandon appeal against sentence made immediately before hearing refused and sentence increased: sentence quashed).

6 For these purposes, 'appeal' means an appeal from a magistrates' court to the Crown Court: Magistrates' Courts Act 1980 s 109(2).

7 Ibid s 109(1)(a). Where notice to abandon an appeal has been given by the appellant, any recognisance conditioned for his appearance at the hearing of the appeal has effect as if conditioned for his appearance before the court from whose decision the appeal was brought at a time and place to be notified to the appellant by the court officer for that court: CrimPR 63.6.

8 For these purposes, the reference to a notice to abandon an appeal is a reference to a notice shown to the satisfaction of the magistrates' court to have been given in accordance with rules of court: Magistrates' Courts Act 1980 s 109(2) (amended by the Courts Act 2003 s 109(1), Sch 8 para 234).

1994. Effect of death of parties.

An appeal to the Crown Court does not necessarily lapse upon the death of the respondent<sup>1</sup>, but it would seem to be otherwise in the event of the death of the appellant<sup>2</sup>, unless the appellant was acting in a nominal capacity<sup>3</sup>.

APPEALS/ (10) APPEALS TO THE CROWN COURT/(ii) Practice and Procedure/B. APPEALS AGAINST CONVICTION OR SENTENCE/1995. Non-appearance of parties.

1995. Non-appearance of parties.

When the appeal is called on for hearing, if neither of the parties appears personally or by advocate, it is the ordinary practice for the appeal to be struck out<sup>1</sup>. The reinstatement of such an appeal will be a matter for the discretion of the Crown Court, and will not generally be allowed without the consent of the other party to the appeal, or satisfactory evidence as to the circumstances of non-appearance.

If an appellant is legally represented on appeal, he is deemed to be present; consequently he is entitled to be absent and any application to hear the appeal in his absence is unnecessary<sup>2</sup>. If an appellant who fails to appear at the hearing is not represented, the court may dismiss the appeal if satisfied that he received notice of the hearing<sup>3</sup>, but there is no rule of practice that the appeal must be dismissed<sup>4</sup>.

Where the appellant alone appears, upon proof of service of notice of appeal and other formalities, the court may quash the order, sentence or conviction<sup>5</sup>. Where the appeal is against sentence only, and not against conviction, the Crown Court may not quash the conviction upon the non-appearance of the respondent<sup>6</sup>.

Where an absent appellant has a legal representative present in court who cannot proceed because he has not been instructed, the Crown Court should proceed to hear the appeal in the absence of the appellant but in the presence of the legal representative: see R v Crown Court at Guildford, ex p Brewer (1987) 87 Cr App Rep 265, DC; see note 4 infra.

When it is known that a party does not intend to appear at the hearing, the clerk to the justices should bring the matter to the attention of the court so that it may endeavour to ensure that the reasons for the decision appealed against may be made known to the court: R v Kent Justices, ex p Metropolitan Police Comr supra at 562 per Humphreys J.

At the hearing of the appeal the conviction or order appealed against must be produced<sup>1</sup> and the appellant may be called upon to prove that notice of appeal has been duly given<sup>2</sup>. The grounds of appeal may be stated in general terms and the Crown Court is the judge of their sufficiency<sup>3</sup>.

If the appellant maintains that his plea before the magistrates' court was equivocal, the Crown Court will determine this as a preliminary issue<sup>4</sup>. If the Crown Court finds that the plea entered was equivocal, it may remit the case to the magistrates' court<sup>5</sup>.

1 If necessary, the conviction or order will be read by the appropriate officer of the Crown Court but this formality is usually dispensed with particularly when the parties are represented. As to the responsibility for forwarding documents to the Crown Court see PARA 1990 ante. If there appears to be a variance between the statement of the decision supplied to the Crown Court and the note of it given to the appellant, he may apply for an adjournment to consider the disparity: see R v Allen (1812) 15 East 333 at 346-347.

An order<sup>1</sup> referring a question to the European Court of Justice for a preliminary ruling<sup>2</sup> may be made by the Crown Court of its own motion or on application by a party to proceedings in the Crown Court<sup>3</sup>; and, where such an order is made<sup>4</sup>, the proceedings must, unless the court otherwise determines, be adjourned until the European Court has given a preliminary ruling on the question referred to it<sup>5</sup>.

1 The order must set out in a schedule the request for the preliminary ruling of the European Court, and the Crown Court may give directions as to the manner and form in which the schedule is to be prepared: CrimPR 75.1(3).

2 Under the Treaty Establishing the European Community (Rome, 25 March 1957; TS 1 (1973); Cmnd 5179) ('the EC Treaty') art 234 (formerly art 177), the Treaty establishing the European Atomic Energy Community (Rome, 25 March 1957; TS 1 (1973); Cmnd 5179) ('the Euratom Treaty') art 150 or the Treaty establishing the European Coal and Steel Community (Paris, 18 April 1951; TS 16 (1979); Cmnd 7461) ('the ECSC Treaty') art 41: CrimPR 75.1(1).

1999. Appeal by way of rehearing.

After any preliminary points have been dealt with, the hearing of the matter is proceeded with, the party who began in the court below beginning again and proving his case anew<sup>1</sup>.

The fact that the appeal is treated as a rehearing apparently does not prevent the Crown Court dealing with an irregularity in the magistrates' court<sup>2</sup>, nor is the prosecution (respondent) obliged to put its case in the same way as in the magistrates' court<sup>3</sup>. It is open to the Crown Court to find the case proved on a different basis from that in the magistrates' court<sup>4</sup>.

Either party is within his rights in calling any relevant and admissible evidence in support of his case, whether called by him in the court below or not<sup>5</sup>.

When dismissing an appeal against conviction by a magistrates' court, the Crown Court must give sufficient reasons to demonstrate that it has identified the main contentious issues in the case and how it has resolved them<sup>6</sup>. However, failure to give reasons will not be fatal to the decision of the Crown Court where, for example, the reasons are obvious, the case is simple or the subject matter of the appeal is unimportant<sup>7</sup>.

At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed. In practice, in appeals against convictions or orders made in proceedings begun by an information or complaint, it is the respondent who begins. NOTE 1--2005 Act Sch 11 in force on 1 October 2009: SI 2009/1604.

Halsbury's Laws of England/CRIMINAL LAW, EVIDENCE AND PROCEDURE (VOLUME 11(1) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1-620; VOLUME 11(2) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 621-1049; VOLUME 11(3) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1050-1557; VOLUME 11(4) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1558-2180)/22. APPEALS/ (10) APPEALS TO THE CROWN COURT/(ii) Practice and Procedure/B. APPEALS AGAINST CONVICTION OR SENTENCE/2000. Appeal against sentence.

2000. Appeal against sentence.

Where there is an appeal to the Crown Court against sentence, the Crown Court, having reheard the case, must form an independent view, on all the evidence, of the correct sentence; its function is not simply to review the magistrates' court's decision and determine whether it was within the ambit of that court's decision<sup>1</sup>. If its view of the correct sentence differs significantly from the sentence, the sentence should be varied to that extent<sup>2</sup>.

On an appeal against sentence, the Crown Court can pass sentence on a different factual basis from that adopted by the magistrates' court<sup>3</sup>.

On an appeal against sentence only, the same strictness of proof is not required as on an appeal against conviction<sup>4</sup>. The practice in these cases is similar to that at first instance after a plea of guilty<sup>5</sup>. When the notice of appeal is against sentence only, the Crown Court has no power to give leave to appeal against conviction<sup>6</sup>. Where there is a disputed question of fact following a plea of guilty, the Crown Court may either hear evidence to resolve the dispute or should proceed on the defendant's version of the facts<sup>7</sup>.

1 R v Crown Court at Swindon, ex p Murray (1998) 162 JP 36, DC.

2 R v Crown Court at Knutsford, ex p Jones (1985) 7 Cr App Rep (S) 448, DC. The Crown Court cannot impose a sentence (eg a custodial sentence) if the defendant has a legitimate expectation that such a sentence would not be imposed if reports were favourable, which was created when the magistrates' court adjourned for reports and the reports were favourable: R v Crown Court at Isleworth, ex p Irvin [1992] RTR 281, DC.

3 Bussey v DPP [1999] 1 Cr App Rep (S) 125, [1998] Crim LR 908, DC. If the court proposes to depart from the view of the facts adopted by the magistrates' court, this should be made clear to the appellant so that he has the opportunity to deal with the matter: Bussey v DPP supra.

4 Paprika Ltd v Board of Trade [1944] KB 327, [1944] 1 All ER 372, DC. On an appeal against a binding over order, however, unless the appellant is prepared to admit the evidence which was before the magistrates, the facts justifying the making of the binding over order must be strictly proved in the Crown Court by sworn evidence which may be cross-examined: Shaw v Hamilton [1982] 2 All ER 718, 75 Cr App Rep 288, DC.

5 See Dyson v Ellison [1975] 1 All ER 276 at 278, 60 Cr App Rep 191 at 193-194, DC, per Lord Widgery CJ ('Appeal to the Crown Court against sentence is . . . a rehearing from conviction onwards. In other words, the court should take the matter up, as it were, at the moment when the conviction is announced and then proceed to fix the sentence on a rehearing basis'). When an appeal against sentence has been allowed to proceed on the evidence given without objection in the court below, the appellant cannot afterwards be heard to say that on that ground alone the sentence cannot stand: Paprika Ltd v Board of Trade [1944] KB 327, [1944] 1 All ER 372, DC.

6 Paprika Ltd v Board of Trade [1944] KB 327, [1944] 1 All ER 372, DC. This case was determined before there was jurisdiction to extend the time for giving notice of appeal (see PARA 1988 ante); however, it is not clear whether the Crown Court would permit notice of appeal against conviction to be given out of time once the appeal against sentence had been called on for hearing.

7 Williams v R (1982) 77 Cr App Rep 329, 5 Cr App Rep (S) 134, DC. As to the similar procedure at first instance see PARAS 1353-1355 ante.

APPEALS/ (10) APPEALS TO THE CROWN COURT/(ii) Practice and Procedure/B. APPEALS AGAINST CONVICTION OR SENTENCE/2001. Powers on termination of hearing.

2001. Powers on termination of hearing.

On the termination of the hearing of an appeal<sup>1</sup>, the Crown Court may:

- 2593 (1) confirm, reverse or vary any part of the decision appealed against, including a determination not to impose a separate penalty in respect of the offence<sup>2</sup>;
- 2594 (2) remit the matter with its opinion on it to the authority whose decision is appealed against<sup>3</sup>; or
- 2595 (3) make such other order in the matter as it thinks just, and by such order exercise any power which the authority might have exercised<sup>4</sup>.

However, the above powers do not authorise the Crown Court to substitute on appeal a conviction for an offence different from that of which the appellant was convicted<sup>5</sup>; nor do they empower the Crown Court to commit an appellant to itself for sentence<sup>6</sup>.

Subject to certain restrictions relating to cases referred by the Criminal Cases Review Commission<sup>7</sup>, if the appeal is against a conviction or a sentence<sup>8</sup>, the Crown Court is empowered to award any punishment, whether more or less severe than that awarded by the magistrates' court whose decision is appealed against, if that is a punishment which the lower court might have awarded<sup>9</sup>.

1 As to the power of the Crown Court to correct the decision appealed against in the course of the hearing see PARA 1998 ante. The Supreme Court Act 1981 s 48 (as amended) applies whether or not the appeal is against the whole of the decision: s 48(5). As from a day to be appointed the Supreme Court Act 1981 is renamed the Senior Courts Act 1981: see the Constitutional Reform Act 2005 s 59(5), Sch 11 para 1. At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed.

2 Supreme Court Act 1981 s 48(2)(a) (amended by the Criminal Justice Act 1988 s 156). See note 1 supra. On an appeal against one of several convictions or sentences, the Crown Court has power to vary all the sentences imposed by the magistrates' court: Dutta v Westcott [1987] QB 291, 84 Cr App Rep 103, DC. The Supreme Court Act 1981 s 48(2) (as amended) has effect subject to any enactment relating to any such appeal which expressly limits or restricts the powers of the court on appeal: s 48(3). As to appeals from local and other authorities see COURTS vol 10 (Reissue) PARA 629.

A Crown Court judge giving the decision of the court on an appeal has to say enough to demonstrate that the court has identified the main contentious issues in the case: R v Crown Court at Harrow, ex p Dave (1994) 158 JP 250, DC. On an appeal from a magistrates' court, the Crown Court is obliged to give reasons for its decision at the time of the decision or immediately afterwards: R v Crown Court at Snaresbrook, ex p Input Management Ltd (1999) 163 JP 533, DC.

7 le subject to the Criminal Appeal Act 1995 s 11(6) (as amended: see PARA 1982 ante): Supreme Court Act 1981 s 48(4) (amended by the Criminal Appeal Act 1995 s 29, Sch 2 para 14). See note 1 supra.

8 For these purposes, 'sentence' includes any order made by a court when dealing with an offender, including: (1) a hospital order under the Mental Health Act 1983 Pt III (ss 35-55) with or without a restriction order (see MENTAL HEALTH vol 30(2) (Reissue) PARAS 491, 496; and SENTENCING AND DISPOSITION OF OFFENDERS vol 92 (2010) PARAS 332, 337), and an interim hospital order under that Act (see MENTAL HEALTH vol 30(2) (Reissue) PARA 491; and SENTENCING AND DISPOSITION OF OFFENDERS vol 92 (2010) PARA 334); and (2) a recommendation for deportation made when dealing with an offender (see SENTENCING AND DISPOSITION OF OFFENDERS vol 92 (2010) PARA 9); Supreme Court Act 1981 s 48(6) (amended by the Mental Health (Amendment) Act 1982 s 65(1), Sch 3 para 61; and the Mental Health Act 1983 s 148, Sch 4 para 58). See note 1 supra. The fact that an appeal is pending against such an interim hospital order does not affect the power of the magistrates' court that made it to renew or terminate the order or to deal with the appellant on its termination; and, where the Crown Court quashes such an order but does not pass any sentence or make any other order in its place, the court may direct the appellant to be kept in custody or released on bail pending his being dealt with by that magistrates' court: Supreme Court Act 1981 s 48(7) (added by the Mental Health (Amendment) Act 1982 Sch 3 para 61; and amended by the Mental Health Act 1983 Sch 4 para 58).

As to where the Crown Court wishes to substitute a suspended sentence for an immediate sentence of imprisonment see SENTENCING AND DISPOSITION OF OFFENDERS vol 92 (2010) PARA 49 note 3. Where an appellant is granted bail pending the hearing of the appeal and is convicted of a fresh offence before the appeal is heard, the Crown Court has no power, on dismissing the appeal, to order that the original sentence passed by the magistrates should be made consecutive to the subsequent sentence passed in respect of the fresh offence: R v Crown Court at Portsmouth, ex p Ballard (1990) 154 JP 109, DC. The operational period of a suspended sentence imposed by the Crown Court runs from the date of that substitution: R v Burn (1976) 63 Cr App Rep 289, CA. Where the Crown Court substitutes a suspended sentence of imprisonment for a sentence of imprisonment having immediate effect, it should have in mind any period which the appellant has spent in custody: Practice Direction (Criminal Proceedings: Consolidation) [2002] 3 All ER 904, [2002] 2 Cr App Rep 533 at I.9.1, CA.

Where the Crown Court makes an interim hospital order by virtue of the Supreme Court Act 1981 s 48(2) (as amended: see note 2 supra), the power of renewing or terminating the order and of dealing with the appellant on its termination is exercisable by the magistrates' court whose decision is appealed against and not by the Crown Court; and that magistrates' court is treated for the purposes of the Mental Health Act 1983 s 38(7) (absconding offenders: see MENTAL HEALTH vol 30(2) (Reissue) PARA 494; and SENTENCING AND DISPOSITION OF OFFENDERS vol 92 (2010) PARA 334) as the court that made the order: Supreme Court Act 1981 s 48(8) (added by the Mental Health (Amendment) Act 1982 Sch 3 para 61; and amended by the Mental Health Act 1983 Sch 4 para 58).

Where the Crown Court has granted leave to abandon an appeal against sentence, it has no jurisdiction under the Supreme Court Act 1981 s 48 (as amended) to increase the sentence previously imposed, as the power to do so under s 48 (as amended) only arises on termination of the appeal itself: R v Crown Court at Gloucester, ex p Betteridge (1997) 161 JP 721, [1998] Crim LR 218, DC.

APPEALS/(11) REVIEW OF APPELLATE DECISIONS OF THE CROWN COURT/(i) Appeal by Case Stated/2005. Appeal by case stated from the Crown Court.

(i) Appeal by Case Stated

2005. Appeal by case stated from the Crown Court.

There is no right of appeal from any order, judgment or other decision on the facts by the Crown Court acting in its appellate capacity, but proceedings on appeal to that court may be questioned by any party to them on the ground that the order, judgment or other decision is wrong in law or is in excess of jurisdiction<sup>1</sup>. Such a person may apply to the Crown Court to have a case stated by the Crown Court for the opinion of the High Court<sup>2</sup>.

Where a case is stated for the opinion of the High Court, the High Court may, if it thinks fit, cause the case to be sent back for amendment, whereupon it must be amended accordingly<sup>3</sup>.

1 See the Supreme Court Act 1981 s 28(1). As from a day to be appointed the Supreme Court Act 1981 is renamed the Senior Courts Act 1981: see the Constitutional Reform Act 2005 s 59(5), Sch 11 para 1. At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed. The Supreme Court Act 1981 s 28(1) does not apply to: (1) a judgment or other decision of the Crown Court relating to trial on indictment (see PARA 2008 post); or (2) any decision of that court under the Betting, Gaming and Lotteries Act 1963, the Gaming Act 1968 or the Local Government (Miscellaneous Provisions) Act 1982 which, by any provision of any of those Acts, is to be final: Supreme Court Act 1981 s 28(2) (amended by the Local Government (Miscellaneous Provisions) Act 1982 s 2, Sch 3 para 27(6); and prospectively amended). As from a day to be appointed, the Supreme Court Act 1981 s 28(2) is amended by the Gambling Act 2005 s 356(4), Sch 17 so that the Betting, Gaming and Lotteries Act 1963 and the Gaming Act 1968 are no longer in head (2) supra. For the purposes of the Supreme Court Act 1981 s 28(1): (a) 'decision' means 'final decision' and the High Court will not entertain an appeal by way of case stated unless a final determination has been reached; it is not open to the court to adjudicate on preliminary issues: Loade v DPP [1990] 1 QB 1052, [1990] 1 All ER 36, DC; and (b) 'decision' in head (1) supra does not include a decision relating to an order under the Access to Justice Act 1999 s 17 (order requiring payment of cost of representation: see LEGAL AID vol 65 (2008) PARA 174): Supreme Court Act 1981 s 28(4) (added by the Access to Justice Act 1999 s 24, Sch 4 para 22).

A discretionary sentence may be wrong in law or in excess of jurisdiction if it is harsh and oppressive or so far outside the normal sentence imposed for the offence as to enable the High Court to hold that the sentence involves an error of law: R v Crown Court at St Albans, ex p Cinnamond [1981] QB 480, [1981] 1 All ER 802, DC; explained in R v Crown Court at Acton, ex p Bewley (1988) 10 Cr App Rep (S) 105, 152 JP 327, DC. Although an appeal against a sentence on the above grounds may be by way of case stated, the appropriate forum is the Court of Appeal, Criminal Division: Bermeo v Crown Court at Middlesex Guildhall [2005] All ER (D) 37 (Nov), DC. Any challenge to a sentence imposed by a magistrates' court should be by way of appeal to the Crown Court, rather than by way of case stated to the High Court, save in the most exceptional case: Tucker v DPP [1992] 4 All ER 901, 156 JP 449, DC. A finding on an issue of fact can only involve an error of law if it is perverse: R v Mildenhall Magistrates' Court, ex p Forest Heath District Council (1997) 161 JP 401, CA (preferring the evidence of one witness to that of another cannot be perverse in this sense).

2 Supreme Court Act 1981 s 28(1). See note 1 supra. As to the judicial review powers of the High Court see PARA 2013 et seq post. The High Court's jurisdiction to hear appeals in criminal causes or matters from the Crown Court by case stated is exercised through the Administrative Court of the Queen's Bench Division, either by a single judge or by a Divisional Court. As to the Administrative Court and the composition of the Divisional Court see COURTS vol 10 (Reissue) PARA 609.

An appeal by way of case stated is by nature a form of consultation with the court to obtain an answer on a point of law and is not a rehearing of the case; in this respect an appeal by way of case stated by the Crown Court is analogous to an appeal by way of case stated by justices: Harris, Simon & Co Ltd v Manchester City Council [1975] 1 All ER 412, [1975] 1 WLR 100, DC.

3 Supreme Court Act 1981 s 28A(1), (2) (added by the Statute Law (Repeals) Act 1993 s 1(2), Sch 2 para 9; and substituted by the Access to Justice Act 1999 s 61). See note 1 supra.

However, the time for making the application may be extended, either before or after it expires, by the Crown Court<sup>3</sup>. The application must state the ground on which the decision of the Crown Court is questioned<sup>4</sup>; and, after making the application, the applicant must forthwith send a copy of it to the parties to the proceedings in the Crown Court<sup>5</sup>. APPEALS/(11) REVIEW OF APPELLATE DECISIONS OF THE CROWN COURT/(i) Appeal by Case Stated/2007. Procedure following application to state case.

2007. Procedure following application to state case.

On receipt of the application<sup>1</sup>, the judge must inform the Crown Court officer as to whether or not he has decided to state a case and that officer must give notice in writing to the applicant of the judge's decision<sup>2</sup>. If the judge considers that the application is frivolous<sup>3</sup>, he may refuse to state a case and must in that case, if the applicant so requires, cause a certificate stating the reasons for the refusal to be given to him<sup>4</sup>.

If the judge decides to state a case, the following procedure<sup>5</sup>, must be followed unless the judge in a particular case otherwise directs<sup>6</sup>. The applicant must, within 21 days<sup>7</sup> of receiving notice, draft a case and send a copy of it to the Crown Court officer and to the parties to the proceedings in the Crown Court<sup>8</sup>. Each party to the proceedings in the Crown Court must, within 21 days<sup>9</sup> of receiving a copy of the draft either: (1) give notice in writing to the applicant and the Crown Court officer that he does not intend to take part in the proceedings before the High Court<sup>10</sup>; (2) indicate in writing on the copy of the draft case that he agrees with it and send the copy to the Crown Court officer<sup>11</sup>; or (3) draft an alternative case and send it, together with the copy of the applicant's case, to the Crown Court officer<sup>12</sup>. The judge must consider the applicant's draft case and any alternative draft case sent to the Crown Court officer<sup>13</sup>.

If the Crown Court so orders, the applicant must, before the case is stated and delivered to him, enter before the Crown Court officer into a recognisance, with or without sureties and in such sum as the Crown Court considers proper, having regard to the applicant's means, conditioned to prosecute the appeal without delay<sup>14</sup>.

2    CrimPR 64.7(5). As to the service of notices etc see PARA 1992 ante.

3    'Frivolous' means 'futile, misconceived, hopeless or academic'; if the judge concludes that an application is frivolous it would be helpful if he briefly states his reasons for doing so: R v Mildenhall Magistrates' Court, ex p Forest Heath District Council (1997) 161 JP 401, CA.

4    CrimPR 64.7(6). If the judge refuses to state a case, the aggrieved party may seek a mandatory order in judicial review proceedings (see PARA 2014 post) requiring the judge to state a case, or an order quashing the order sought to be appealed, or both: Sunworld Ltd v Hammersmith and Fulham Borough Council [2000] 2 All ER 837, [2000] 1 WLR 2102, DC.

If the judge decides not to state a case but the stating of a case is subsequently required by the High Court by a mandatory order (see PARA 2014 post), the provisions of CrimPR 64.7(7)-(14) apply: CrimPR 64.7(15). In such a case the 21-day period referred to in CrimPR 64.7(8) (see the text and notes 7-8 supra) runs from the day on which the mandatory order was made (CrimPR 64.7(15)(b)) and the provisions of CrimPR 64.7(8)-(12) apply notwithstanding that the judge has not decided to state a case (CrimPR 64.7(15)(a)).

APPEALS/(11) REVIEW OF APPELLATE DECISIONS OF THE CROWN COURT/(i) Appeal by Case Stated/2011. Powers of the High Court on an appeal by case stated.

2011. Powers of the High Court on an appeal by case stated.

The High Court must hear and determine the question arising on the case stated<sup>1</sup> (or the case as amended)<sup>2</sup>, that is give answers to the questions incorporated in the case stated<sup>3</sup>. It is confined to the facts as found by the Crown Court unless those findings are without foundation<sup>4</sup> and, in general, it will not allow a point to be taken in argument before it which was not taken before the Crown Court<sup>5</sup>. Having determined the question arising on the case stated (or the case as amended), the High Court must: (1) reverse, affirm or amend the determination in respect of which the case has been stated; or (2) remit the matter to the Crown Court with the opinion of the High Court, and may make such other order in relation to the matter (including as to costs) as it thinks fit<sup>6</sup>.

Except for the provisions relating to an appeal to the House of Lords<sup>7</sup>, a decision of the High Court on a case stated in a criminal cause or matter is final<sup>8</sup>.

APPEALS/(11) REVIEW OF APPELLATE DECISIONS OF THE CROWN COURT/ (ii) Judicial Review/2013. Control by judicial review.

(ii) Judicial Review

2013. Control by judicial review.

In relation to the jurisdiction of the Crown Court, other than its jurisdiction in matters relating to trial on indictment<sup>1</sup>, the High Court has all such jurisdiction to make mandatory, prohibitory or quashing orders as the High Court possesses in relation to the jurisdiction of an inferior court<sup>2</sup>.

In general, a mandatory order should be applied for where the Crown Court refuses to exercise its jurisdiction<sup>3</sup>; a quashing order should be applied for where it is desired to quash the proceedings in that court<sup>4</sup>; and a prohibitory order should be applied for where it is sought to prevent that court from embarking on or continuing proceedings in excess of its jurisdiction or in contravention of the law<sup>5</sup>.

<sup>1</sup> A Crown Court decision is under its jurisdiction in matters relating to trial on indictment if it is one affecting the conduct of a trial on indictment, including sentence, given in the course of the trial or by way of pre-trial directions: Re Smalley [1985] AC 622, 80 Cr App Rep 205, HL (an order to estreat the recognisance of a surety for an accused committed for trial at a Crown Court is not a matter relating to a trial on indictment). Re Smalley supra was applied in Re Ashton; R v Crown Court at Manchester, ex p DPP [1994] AC 9, sub nom DPP v Crown Court at Manchester and Ashton [1993] 2 All ER 663, HL (see infra). Re Smalley supra and Re Ashton supra were applied in DPP v Crown Court at Manchester and Huckfield [1993] 4 All ER 928, HL (see infra).

An order of the Crown Court staying proceedings on an indictment is a decision 'relating to trial on indictment' within the Supreme Court Act 1981 s 29(3) (as amended) (see PARA 1232 ante): Re Ashton supra overruling R v Central Criminal Court, ex p Randle [1992] 1 All ER 370, [1991] 1 WLR 1087, DC and R v Crown Court at Norwich, ex p Belsham [1992] 1 All ER 394, [1992] 1 WLR 54, DC. Re Ashton supra was applied in R (on the application of Customs and Excise Comrs) v Crown Court at Leicester [2001] EWHC Admin 33, [2001] All ER (D) 163 (Jan), DC. As from a day to be appointed, the Supreme Court Act 1981 is renamed the Senior Courts Act 1981: see the Constitutional Reform Act 2005 s 59(5), Sch 11 para 1. At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed. The dismissal of an application for dismissal of a charge under the Crime and Disorder Act 1998 s 52(6), Sch 3 para 2 is a decision 'relating to trial on indictment' within the Supreme Court Act 1981 s 29(3) (as amended): R (on the application of Snelgrove) v Crown Court at Woolwich [2004] EWHC 2172 (Admin), [2005] 1 WLR 3223, [2005] 1 Cr App Rep 253, DC. So is a refusal to hear any evidence on such an application or a refusal to dismiss a case: R (on the application of O) v Central Criminal Court [2006] EWHC 256 (Admin), [2006] All ER (D) 201 (Jan). The decision of a Crown Court judge to quash an indictment is a matter 'relating to trial on indictment': DPP v Crown Court at Manchester and Huckfield supra. The High Court does not have the jurisdiction to hear an application by way of judicial review to reinstate an original legal aid order where a judge has previously discharged that order as it is a matter 'relating to trial on indictment': R v Crown Court at Isleworth, ex p Willington [1993] 2 All ER 390, [1993] 1 WLR 713, DC. A costs order made in the Crown Court is a matter 'relating to trial on indictment': R (on the application of Customs and Excise Comrs) v Crown Court at Leicester [2001] EWHC Admin 33, (2001) Times, 23 February, DC.

An order about taking steps to vet a jury panel is a 'matter relating to trial on indictment' and therefore not judicially reviewable: R v Crown Court at Sheffield, ex p Brownlow [1980] QB 530, 71 Cr App Rep 19, CA. See also R v Crown Court at Harrow, ex p Perkins (1998) 162 JP 527 (decision to make no order as to costs not judicially reviewable). Contrast R v Crown Court at Cardiff, ex p M (A Minor) (1998) 162 JP 527 (exercise of decision to protect a child or young person's identity under the Children and Young Person's Act 1933 s 39 (as amended) (see CHILDREN AND YOUNG PERSONS vol 5(4) (2008 Reissue) PARA 1271) is reviewable), but see R v Crown Court at Winchester, ex p B (A Minor) [1999] 4 All ER 53, [2000] 1 Cr App Rep 11, DC (decision to lift reporting restrictions under the Children and Young Person's Act 1933 s 39 (as amended) not reviewable); R v Crown Court at Cardiff, ex p M (A Minor) supra was preferred to Crown Court at Winchester in R v Crown Court at Manchester, ex p H [2000] 2 All ER 166, [2000] 1 Cr App Rep 262, DC (decision to lift reporting restrictions under the Children and Young Person's Act 1933 s 39 (as amended) judicially reviewable). A decision by the Crown Court to refuse bail is not a matter relating to trial on indictment and is judicially reviewable (see further infra): R (on the application of M) v Crown Court at Isleworth [2005] EWHC 363 (Admin), [2005] 5 Archbold News 2. See also R v Crown Court at Maidstone, ex p Gill [1987] 1 All ER 129, 84 Cr App Rep 96, DC (forfeiture order made in respect of property belonging to person other than defendant not a matter relating to trial on indictment; High Court may entertain application for judicial review).

If the Crown Court decision is made without jurisdiction, it is not within its jurisdiction relating to trial on indictment even though the decision relates to a trial on indictment: R v Crown Court at Maidstone, ex p Harrow London Borough Council [2000] QB 719, [1999] 3 All ER 542, DC (order made under the Criminal Procedure (Insanity) Act 1964 s 5 (see PARA 1265 ante) judicially reviewable because issue of whether defendant not guilty by reason of insanity had not been put to the jury). See also R (on the application of Kenneally) v Crown Court at Snaresbrook; R (on the application of Kenneally) v Rampton Hospital Authority [2001] EWHC Admin 968, [2002] QB 1169, [2002] 2 WLR 1430, DC.

The interpretation placed on the Supreme Court Act 1981 s 29(3) (as amended) that a decision relating to a trial on indictment is not judicially reviewable is not a breach of the right to a fair trial under the Convention for the Protection of Human Rights and Fundamental Freedoms (Rome, 4 November 1950; TS 71 (1953); Cmd 8969) art 6 since there is no Convention right to have all decisions reviewed, notwithstanding that some decisions might breach a Convention right: R (on the application of Regentford Ltd) v Crown Court at Canterbury [2001] HRLR 18, DC; see also for the same view R (on the application of Shields) v Crown Court at Liverpool [2001] EWHC Admin 90, [2001] AC 325, DC. The Convention is commonly referred to as the European Convention on Human Rights and is enshrined in the Human Rights Act 1998 Sch 1: see CONSTITUTIONAL LAW AND HUMAN RIGHTS vol 8(2) (Reissue) PARA 122 et seq.

An order under the Access to Justice Act 1999 s 17 (order requiring defendant to pay some or all of cost of representation funded by Criminal Defence Service: see LEGAL AID vol 65 (2008) PARA 174) is expressly stated not to fall within the reference to the Crown Court's jurisdiction in matters relating to trial on indictment: Supreme Court Act 1981 s 29(6) (added by the Access to Justice Act 1999 s 24, Sch 4 para 23).

2 Supreme Court Act 1981 s 29(3) (substituted by the Civil Procedure (Modification of Supreme Court Act 1981) Order 2004, SI 2004/1033, art 3(b)). As to the prospective renaming of the Supreme Court Act 1981 see note 1 supra. On an application for judicial review the High Court may not grant a declaration in respect of the decision of the Crown Court pertaining to its jurisdiction in matters relating to trial on indictment: R v Crown Court at Chelmsford, ex p Chief Constable of Essex Police [1994] 1 All ER 325, [1994] 1 WLR 359, DC. As to the prerogative orders generally see JUDICIAL REVIEW vol 61 (2010) PARA 687 et seq. Application for judicial review is inappropriate in cases, for example: (1) involving complicated findings of fact by the Crown Court (R v Crown Court at Ipswich, ex p Baldwin [1981] 1 All ER 596, sub nom R v Felixstowe Justices, ex p Baldwin (1980) 72 Cr App Rep 131, DC); (2) where the identification of facts as found is, or may be, critical to the resolution of the issue (R v Morpeth Ward Justices, ex p Ward (1992) 95 Cr App Rep 215 at 222, DC, per Mann LJ); (3) where an appeal is based on insufficiency of the evidence (R v Derwentside Justices, ex p Swift, R v Sunderland Justices, ex p Bate [1997] RTR 89, DC). The appropriate procedure in such cases is an appeal by way of case stated. As to appeals by way of case stated see PARA 2005 et seq ante.

Subsequent to the abolition, by the Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 17(3) (see PARA 1190 ante), of the right to apply to a High Court judge against the refusal of bail by the Crown Court, it has been held that the High Court has jurisdiction to judicially review a refusal of bail in the Crown Court: R (on the application of M) v Crown Court at Isleworth and HM Customs and Excise [2005] EWHC 363 (Admin), [2005] 5 Archbold News 2. However, that jurisdiction should be exercised sparingly and the Wednesbury principles (see JUDICIAL REVIEW vol 61 (2010) PARA 617 et seq) should be applied robustly: R (on the application of M) v Crown Court at Isleworth and HM Customs and Excise supra; R (on the application of AW) v Crown Court at Kingston-upon-Thames [2005] EWHC 703 (Admin), [2005] 6 Archbold News 2; R (on the application of Galliano) v Crown Court at Manchester [2005] EWHC 1125 (Admin) 1190, [2005] All ER (D) 320 (May). Where a claimant brings an application for judicial review of the decision of the Crown Court to withhold bail, the prosecution and the Crown Court should be notified and the matter put before the Administrative Court as a matter for urgent consideration and an oral hearing on notice requested in as short a time as possible. Generally it will not be appropriate to grant bail on an interim application on the papers. The Administrative Court (normally a single judge) should direct an oral hearing within a day or two to effectively determine the issue; and if, at that hearing, the court is minded to review the Crown Court's decision, permission will be granted, all procedural requirements will be abridged, and the matter remitted to the Crown Court to formally grant bail: R (on the application of Allwin) v Crown Court at Snaresbrook [2005] EWHC 742 (Admin), [2005] All ER (D) 40 (Apr).

As a general rule a judicial review application will be refused where the complaint could be raised within the criminal trial and appeal process: R v DPP, ex p Kebilene [2000] 2 AC 326, [1999] 4 All ER 801, HL.

Save in the case of dishonesty, mala fides or wholly exceptional circumstances, a decision to prosecute is not amenable to judicial review: R v DPP, ex p Kebilene supra. See also R (on the application of Pepushi) v Crown Prosecution Service [2004] EWHC 798 (Admin), (2004) Times, 21 May. A decision not to prosecute is amenable to judicial review: R v DPP, ex p C [1995] 1 Cr App Rep 136, CA. In such a case there is no other remedy: see R v DPP, ex p Kebilene supra at 369 and 834 per Lord Steyn.

2013 Control by judicial review

NOTE 1--Appointed day is 1 October 2009: SI 2009/1604.

A decision taken in the course of a trial by the trial judge to detain a witness pending receipt of further evidence is a matter relating to trial on indictment within the meaning of the 1981 Act s 29(3): R (on the application of TH) v Crown Court at Wood Green [2006] EWHC 2683 (Admin), [2007] 2 All ER 259. The High Court does not have the power in judicial review proceedings to quash or correct any sentence that exceeds the jurisdiction of the sentencing court, specifically where the trial was on indictment: R (on the application of the Crown Prosecution Service) v Crown Court Guildford [2007] EWHC 1798 (Admin), [2007] 1 WLR 2886.

APPEALS/(11) REVIEW OF APPELLATE DECISIONS OF THE CROWN COURT/ (ii) Judicial Review/2014. Mandatory order.

2014. Mandatory order.

A mandatory order may lie<sup>1</sup> to compel the Crown Court to exercise jurisdiction on appeal<sup>2</sup> which it has declined to exercise<sup>3</sup>, or where it has come to a wrong decision in point of law upon a preliminary objection<sup>4</sup>, or where it has failed to exercise its discretion<sup>5</sup>. A mandatory order will merely direct the Crown Court to exercise its jurisdiction or discretion; it will not specify the manner in which it is to exercise it<sup>6</sup>.

A mandatory order will not lie to the Crown Court in the exercise of its jurisdiction in matters relating to trials on indictment<sup>7</sup>; nor will it lie in respect of any matter in which the Crown Court has exercised its jurisdiction<sup>8</sup>, whether its decision be right or wrong<sup>9</sup> and even if the matter is one of law<sup>10</sup>. Further, in matters where the Crown Court has a discretion and has exercised it, a mandatory order will not lie<sup>11</sup>.

Where an application to state a case<sup>12</sup> is refused by the Crown Court, the High Court may require it to state a case by a mandatory order<sup>13</sup>. However, the High Court will not intervene to review the Crown Court's decision by compelling it to state its reasons for the decision<sup>14</sup> or to alter the form of the record<sup>15</sup>.

1 A mandatory order (formerly known as an order of mandamus and renamed by the Supreme Court Act 1981 s 29(1) (substituted by the Civil Procedure (Modification of Supreme Court Act 1981) Order 2004, SI 2004/1033, art 2, 3(a))), is discretionary: see JUDICIAL REVIEW vol 61 (2010) PARA 692. As from a day to be appointed the Supreme Court Act 1981 is renamed the Senior Courts Act 1981: see the Constitutional Reform Act 2005 s 59(5), Sch 11 para 1. At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed. The High Court has jurisdiction to make mandatory orders in those classes of case in which, immediately before 1 April 2004, it had jurisdiction to make orders of mandamus: Supreme Court Act 1981 s 29(1A) (as substituted).

APPEALS/(11) REVIEW OF APPELLATE DECISIONS OF THE CROWN COURT/ (ii) Judicial Review/2015. Quashing order.

2015. Quashing order.

A quashing order may lie<sup>1</sup> to the Crown Court in its appellate jurisdiction relating or in relation to any other matter than one to a trial on indictment<sup>2</sup> in respect of a judgment or order<sup>3</sup>:

- 2604 (1) which has been made in breach of the rules of natural justice<sup>4</sup>;
- 2605 (2) which has been made in excess of jurisdiction<sup>5</sup>;
- 2606 (3) where there is an error of law on the fact of the record<sup>6</sup>;
- 2607 (4) which is so unreasonable that no reasonable court could have made it; or (where a Convention right is at stake) which is disproportionate, which involves a more intense review than under the test of unreasonableness<sup>7</sup>.

A quashing order will also lie where a judgment on appeal has been obtained by fraud or by perjured evidence<sup>8</sup>.

1 A quashing order (formerly known as the order of certiorari: renamed by the Supreme Court Act 1981 s 29(1) (substituted by the Civil Procedure (Modification of Supreme Court Act 1981) Order 2004, SI 2004/1033, arts 2, 3(a))) is a discretionary remedy, but there is no rule that it will only lie where there is no alternative remedy: see JUDICIAL REVIEW vol 61 (2010) PARAS 657, 692. As from a day to be appointed, the Supreme Court Act 1981 is renamed the Senior Courts Act 1981: see the Constitutional Reform Act 2005 s 59(5), Sch 11 para 1. At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed. The High Court has jurisdiction to make quashing orders in those classes of case in which, immediately before 1 April 2004, it had jurisdiction to make orders of certiorari: Supreme Court Act 1981 s 29(1A) (added by the Civil Procedure (Modification of Supreme Court Act 1981) Order 2004, SI 2004/1033, arts 2, 3(a)). See further JUDICIAL REVIEW vol 61 (2010) PARA 693 et seq.

2 A quashing order cannot be made in relation to a decision where the proceedings in question are incomplete: R v Rochford Magistrates' Court, ex p Buck (1978) 68 Cr App Rep 114, DC; R (on the application of Hoar-Stevens) v Richmond upon Thames Magistrates' Court [2003] EWHC 2660 (Admin), [2004] Crim LR 474, DC.

6 JUDICIAL REVIEW vol 61 (2010) PARAS 612-613.

7 See JUDICIAL REVIEW vol 61 (2010) PARA 617 et seq. As to the circumstances in which the High Court will interfere with a sentence passed by the Crown Court, it has been held that the sentence will only be wrong in law or in excess of jurisdiction if it is truly astonishing by any acceptable standard: R v Crown Court at Croydon, ex p Miller (1986) 85 Cr App Rep 152, DC, explaining R v Crown Court at St Albans, ex p Cinnamond [1981] QB 480, [1981] 1 All ER 802, DC; R v Crown Court at Acton, ex p Bewley (1988) 10 Cr App Rep (S) 105, DC. However, it has also been held more recently that a sentence will be in excess of jurisdiction or otherwise wrong in law if it falls so far outside the broad area of the Crown Court's sentencing discretion as to constitute an excess of jurisdiction or an error of law (R (on the application of Sogbesan) v Inner London Crown Court [2002] EWHC Admin 1581, [2003] 1 Cr App Rep (S) 408, DC), or if it went beyond the spectrum of the Crown Court's discretion (R v Southwark Crown Court, ex p Smith [2001] 2 Cr App Rep (S) 163, DC), or if it was manifestly excessive (R v Bow Street Metropolitan Magistrate, ex p Screen Multimedia Ltd (1998) Times, 28 January, DC).

APPEALS/(11) REVIEW OF APPELLATE DECISIONS OF THE CROWN COURT/ (ii) Judicial Review/2018. Alteration of sentence on application for quashing order.

2018. Alteration of sentence on application for quashing order.

Where a person who has been sentenced for an offence: (1) by the Crown Court after being convicted of the offence by a magistrates' court and committed to the Crown Court for sentence; or (2) by the Crown Court on appeal against conviction or sentence, applies to the High Court<sup>1</sup> for a quashing order to remove the proceedings of the Crown Court into the High Court, then, if the High Court determines that the Crown Court had no power to pass the sentence, the High Court may, instead of quashing the conviction, amend the sentence by substituting for the sentence passed any sentence which the Crown Court had power to impose<sup>2</sup>.

Any sentence so passed by the High Court in substitution for the sentence passed in the proceedings of the Crown Court begins to run, unless the High Court otherwise directs, from the time when it would have begun to run if passed in those proceedings<sup>3</sup>.

The High Court will exercise its powers under the Supreme Court Act 1981 s 43 (as amended) if the Crown Court's sentence is in excess of jurisdiction or otherwise wrong in law: see PARA 2015 note 5 ante.

An order which would not have been made but for a conviction, but which was made after and for a different reason than that for which the original sentence was made, is not an order made on conviction: R v St Helen's Justices, ex p Jones; R v Ealing Justices, ex p Saleem; R v Stoke on Trent Justices, ex p Wilby; R v Manchester City Justices, ex p Lee; R v Greenwich Justices, ex p Wright; R v Same, ex p Davidson [1999] 2 All ER 73, 163 JP 369, DC.

The Supreme Court Act 1981 s 43(1), (2) (s 43(1) as amended) applies, with the necessary modifications, in relation to any order of the Crown Court which is made on, but does not form part of, the conviction of an offender as it applies in relation to a conviction and sentence: s 43(3). ### 2020. Right of appeal.

An appeal lies to the House of Lords from any decision of the High Court in a criminal cause or matter<sup>1</sup>, at the instance either of the defendant or the prosecutor<sup>2</sup>. However, no such appeal lies except with the leave of the High Court or of the House of Lords<sup>3</sup>; and such leave may not be granted unless it is certified by the High Court that a point of law of general public importance is involved in the decision and it appears to that court or to the House of Lords, as the case may be, that the point is one which ought to be considered by that House<sup>4</sup>.

As from a day to be appointed, in the Administration of Justice Act 1960 s 1 (as amended), the words 'Supreme Court' are substituted for the words 'House of Lords' and the words 'the Supreme Court' are substituted for the words 'that House' by the Constitutional Reform Act 2005 s 40(4), Sch 9 para 13(1), (2). At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed. For the purposes of disposing of any such appeal the House of Lords may exercise any powers of the court below or may remit the case to that court: Administration of Justice Act 1960 s 1(4) (as so prospectively amended).

3 There is no appeal against a refusal to grant a certificate: Gelberg v Miller [1961] 1 All ER 618n, [1961] 1 WLR 459, HL. The Appellate Jurisdiction Act 1876 s 5 (composition of the House of Lords for the hearing and determination of appeals: see COURTS vol 10 (Reissue) PARA 365) applies to the hearing and determination of an appeal or application for leave to appeal under the Administration of Justice Act 1960 s 1 (as amended; prospectively amended) as it applies to the hearing and determination of an appeal under the Appellate Jurisdiction Act 1876; and any order of that House which provides for the hearing of such applications by a committee constituted in accordance with s 5 may direct that the decision of that committee is to be taken on behalf of the House: Administration of Justice Act 1960 s 1(3). As from a day to be appointed, s 1(3) is repealed by the Constitutional Reform Act 2005 ss 40(4), 146, Sch 18 Pt 5, Sch 9 para 13. APPEALS/(13) CRIMINAL CASES REVIEW COMMISSION/2029. Power to obtain documents etc.

2029. Power to obtain documents etc.

Where the Criminal Cases Review Commission<sup>1</sup> believes that a person serving in a public body<sup>2</sup> has possession or control of a document or other material which may assist the Commission in the exercise of any of its functions, it may, where it is reasonable to do so, require the person who is the appropriate person<sup>3</sup> in relation to the public body: (1) to produce the document or other material to the Commission or to give the Commission access to it; and (2) to allow the Commission to take away the document or other material or to make and take away a copy of it in such form as it thinks appropriate, and may direct that person that the document or other material must not be destroyed, damaged or altered before the direction is withdrawn by the Commission<sup>4</sup>.

The documents and other material covered by the above provisions include, in particular, any document or other material obtained or created during any investigation or proceedings relating to the case in relation to which the Commission's function is being or may be exercised, or any other case which may be in any way connected with that case (whether or not any function of the Commission could be exercised in relation to that other case)<sup>5</sup>. The duty to comply with a requirement under those provisions is not affected by any obligation of secrecy or other limitation on disclosure (including any such obligation or limitation imposed by or by virtue of an enactment) which would otherwise prevent the production of the document or other material to the Commission or the giving of access to it to the Commission<sup>6</sup>.

Where a person on whom a requirement is imposed under the above provisions notifies the Commission that any information contained in any document or other material to which the requirement relates is not to be disclosed by the Commission without his prior consent, the Commission must not disclose the information without such consent<sup>7</sup>. Such consent may not be withheld unless the person would have been prevented by any obligation of secrecy or other limitation on disclosure from disclosing the information to the Commission<sup>8</sup>, and it is reasonable for the person to withhold his consent to disclosure of the information by the Commission<sup>9</sup>.

The Commission's power to obtain documents<sup>10</sup> does not apply to any document or other material in the possession or control of a person serving in a government department if the document or other material is relevant to a case which the Secretary of State is already reviewing<sup>11</sup> and is in the possession or control of the person in consequence of the Secretary of State's consideration of the case<sup>12</sup>.

The Secretary of State must give to the Commission any document or other material which: (a) contains representations made to him in relation to any case to which this provision applies<sup>13</sup>; or (b) was received by him in connection with any such case otherwise than from a person serving in a government department, and may give to the Commission any document or other material which is relevant to any such case but does not fall within head (a) or head (b) above<sup>14</sup>.

The above provisions<sup>15</sup> are without prejudice to the taking by the Commission of any steps which it considers appropriate for assisting it in the exercise of any of its functions including, in particular, undertaking, or arranging for others to undertake, inquiries, and obtaining, or arranging for others to obtain, statements, opinions and reports<sup>16</sup>.

2030. Power to require appointment of investigating officers.

Where the Criminal Cases Review Commission<sup>1</sup> believes that inquiries should be made for assisting it in the exercise of any of its functions in relation to any case it may require the appointment of an investigating officer to carry out the inquiries<sup>2</sup>. Where any offence to which the case relates was investigated by persons serving in a public body<sup>3</sup>, a requirement may be imposed on the person who is the appropriate person<sup>4</sup> in relation to the public body, or where the public body has ceased to exist, on any chief officer of police or on the person who is the appropriate person in relation to any public body which appears to the Commission to have functions which consist of or include functions similar to any of those of the public body which has ceased to exist<sup>5</sup>. Where no offence to which the case relates was investigated by persons serving in a public body, such a requirement may be imposed on any chief officer of police<sup>6</sup>. Such a requirement imposed on a chief officer of police<sup>7</sup> may be a requirement to appoint a person serving in the police force<sup>8</sup> in relation to which he is the chief officer of police, or a requirement to appoint a person serving in another police force selected by the chief officer<sup>9</sup>. A requirement<sup>10</sup> imposed on a person who is the appropriate person in relation to a public body other than a police force may be a requirement to appoint a person serving in the public body, or a requirement to appoint a person serving in a police force, or in a public body (other than a police force) having functions which consist of or include the investigation of offences, selected by the appropriate person<sup>11</sup>. The Commission may direct that a person must not be appointed, or that a police force or other public body must not be selected, without the Commission's approval<sup>12</sup>.

Where an appointment is made<sup>13</sup> by the person who is the appropriate person in relation to any public body, that person must inform the Commission of the appointment; and if the Commission is not satisfied with the person appointed it may direct that the person who is the appropriate person in relation to the public body must, as soon as is reasonably practicable, select another person in his place and notify the Commission of the proposal to appoint the other person, and the other person must not be appointed without the Commission's approval<sup>14</sup>.

The above provisions are without prejudice to the taking by the Commission of any steps which it considers appropriate for assisting it in the exercise of any of its functions including, in particular, undertaking, or arranging for others to undertake, inquiries, and obtaining, or arranging for others to obtain, statements, opinions and reports<sup>15</sup>.

APPEALS/(13) CRIMINAL CASES REVIEW COMMISSION/2031. Inquiries by investigating officers.

2031. Inquiries by investigating officers.

A person appointed as the investigating officer<sup>1</sup> in relation to a case must undertake such inquiries as the Criminal Cases Review Commission<sup>2</sup> may from time to time reasonably direct him to undertake in relation to the case<sup>3</sup>. A person so appointed must be permitted to act as such by the person who is the appropriate person<sup>4</sup> in relation to the public body<sup>5</sup> in which he is serving<sup>6</sup>. Where the chief officer of an England and Wales police force<sup>7</sup> appoints a member of the Police Service of Northern Ireland as an investigating officer, the member appointed has in England and Wales the same powers and privileges as a member of the police force has there as a constable; and where the Chief Constable of the Police Service of Northern Ireland appoints a member of an England and Wales police force as an investigating officer, the member appointed has in Northern Ireland the same powers and privileges as a member of the Police Service of Northern Ireland has there as a constable<sup>8</sup>.

The Commission may take any steps which it considers appropriate for supervising the undertaking of inquiries by an investigating officer<sup>9</sup>. It may at any time direct that a person appointed as the investigating officer in relation to a case cease to act as such; but the making of such a direction does not prevent the Commission from imposing a requirement<sup>10</sup> to appoint another investigating officer in relation to the case<sup>11</sup>.

When a person appointed as the investigating officer in relation to a case has completed the inquiries which he has been directed by the Commission to undertake in relation to the case, he must prepare a report of his findings, submit it to the Commission, and send a copy of it to the person by whom he was appointed<sup>12</sup>. When a person so appointed submits to the Commission a report of his findings he must also submit to it any statements, opinions and reports received by him in connection with the inquiries which he was directed to undertake in relation to the case<sup>13</sup>.

The above provisions are without prejudice to the taking by the Commission of any steps which it considers appropriate for assisting it in the exercise of any of its functions including, in particular, undertaking, or arranging for others to undertake, inquiries, and obtaining, or arranging for others to obtain, statements, opinions and reports<sup>14</sup>.

APPEALS/(13) CRIMINAL CASES REVIEW COMMISSION/2032. Disclosure of information.

2032. Disclosure of information.

A person who is or has been a member or employee of the Criminal Cases Review Commission<sup>1</sup> must not disclose any information obtained by the Commission in the exercise of any of its functions unless the disclosure of the information is excepted<sup>2</sup> from the obligations of non-disclosure<sup>3</sup>; and a person who is or has been an investigating officer<sup>4</sup> must not disclose any information obtained by him in his inquiries unless the disclosure of the information is so excepted<sup>5</sup>.

A member of the Commission may not authorise the disclosure by an employee of the Commission of any information obtained by it in the exercise of any of its functions, or the disclosure by an investigating officer of any information obtained by him in his inquiries, unless the authorisation of the disclosure of the information is excepted<sup>6</sup> from the obligations of non-disclosure<sup>7</sup>.

The disclosure of information is also excepted if the information is disclosed by an employee of the Commission, or an investigating officer, who is authorised to disclose the information by a member of the Commission<sup>16</sup>. The disclosure of information, or the authorisation of the disclosure of information, is also excepted if the information is disclosed, or is authorised to be disclosed, for the purposes of the investigation of an offence, or deciding whether to prosecute a person for an offence, unless the disclosure is or would be prevented by an obligation of secrecy or other limitation on disclosure (including any such obligation or limitation imposed by or by virtue of an enactment) otherwise<sup>17</sup> arising<sup>18</sup>.

23. COMPENSATION, REWARDS AND COSTS

(1) THE CRIMINAL INJURIES COMPENSATION SCHEME

2033. The Criminal Injuries Compensation Scheme.

In accordance with a statutory duty to do so<sup>1</sup>, the Secretary of State has made arrangements for the payment of compensation to, or in respect of, persons who have sustained one or more criminal injuries<sup>2</sup>. Those arrangements include the making of a scheme<sup>3</sup>, providing in particular for: (1) the circumstances in which awards may be made; and (2) the categories of person to whom awards may be made<sup>4</sup>. The scheme is entitled the Criminal Injuries Compensation Scheme<sup>5</sup>.

1    In accordance with the Criminal Injuries Compensation Act 1995 s 1(1).

2    'Criminal injury' has such meaning as may be specified: ibid s 1(4); see PARA 2035 post.

3    Copies of the Scheme can be obtained, together with notes for guidance and application forms, from the Criminal Injuries Compensation Authority, Tay House, 300 Bath St, Glasgow G2 4LN.

The current scheme came into force on 1 April 2001. The Scheme provides transitional arrangements for applications for compensation made before that date under its predecessors: see Criminal Injuries Compensation Scheme (2001) PARAS 84-86.

As required by the Criminal Injuries Compensation Act 1995 s 6(1), (3), the Scheme includes provision as to annual reports, accounts and financial records: Criminal Injuries Compensation Scheme (2001) PARA 1.4. The general working of the Scheme is kept under review by the Secretary of State. The Accounting Officers for the Criminal Injuries Compensation Authority and the Criminal Injuries Compensation Appeals Panel ('the Panel') must each submit reports to the Secretary of State and the Scottish Ministers as soon as possible after the end of each financial year, dealing with the operation of the Scheme and the discharge of functions under it. The Accounting Officers must each keep proper accounts and proper records in relation to those accounts, and must each prepare a statement of accounts in each financial year in a form directed by the Secretary of State. These statements of accounts must be submitted to the Secretary of State and the Scottish Ministers as soon as possible after the end of each financial year: Criminal Injuries Compensation Scheme (2001) PARA 4.

The Secretary of State must lay before each House of Parliament, and the Scottish Ministers (as defined by the Scotland Act 1998 s 44) must lay before the Scottish Parliament, a copy of every such annual report: Criminal Injuries Compensation Act 1995 s 6(2) (amended by the Scotland Act 1998 (Consequential Modifications) (No 2) Order 1999, SI 1999/1820, art 4, Sch 2 para 123(1), (3)). A statement of accounts must be submitted to the Secretary of State at such time as the Secretary of State may direct, and where such a statement is so submitted the Secretary of State must send a copy of it to the Comptroller and Auditor General as soon as is reasonably practicable; and the Comptroller and Auditor General must examine, certify and report on any statement of accounts so sent to him; and lay copies of the statement and of his report before each House of Parliament and the Scottish Parliament: Criminal Injuries Compensation Act 1995 s 6(4), (5) (amended by the Scotland Act 1998 (Consequential Modifications) (No 2) Order 1999, SI 1999/1820, Sch 2 para 123(1), (5)).

The Secretary of State may: (1) pay such remuneration, allowances or gratuities to or in respect of claims officers and other persons appointed by him under the Criminal Injuries Compensation Act 1995 (other than adjudicators) as he considers appropriate; (2) pay, or make such payments towards the provision of, such remuneration, pensions, allowances or gratuities to or in respect of adjudicators, as he considers appropriate; (3) make such payments by way of compensation for loss of office to any adjudicator who is removed from office under the Criminal Injuries Compensation Act 1995 s 5(7) (see PARA 2034 note 3 post), as he considers appropriate: Criminal Injuries Compensation Act 1995 s 9(1)-(3).

Sums required for the payment of compensation in accordance with the Scheme must be provided by the Secretary of State out of money provided by Parliament: s 9(4). Where a Scheme manager (ie a person appointed by the Secretary of State to have overall responsibility for managing the provisions of the Scheme except those relating to appeals: see s 1(4)) has been appointed, the Secretary of State may make such payments to him, in respect of the discharge of his functions in relation to the Scheme, as the Secretary of State considers appropriate: s 9(5). Any expenses incurred by the Secretary of State under the Criminal Injuries Compensation Act 1995 must be paid out of money provided by Parliament: s 9(6). Any expenses incurred by the Secretary of State under s 9(6) as regards Scotland must be reimbursed to the Secretary of State by the Scottish Ministers: s 9(6A) (added by the Scotland Act 1998 (Consequential Modifications) (No 2) Order 1999, SI 1999/1820, Sch 2 para 123(1), (6)). Any sums received by the Secretary of State under any provision of the Scheme providing for repayment of compensation (ie under the Criminal Injuries Compensation Act 1995 s 3(1)(c)) or, as from a day to be appointed, by virtue of regulations made under s 7A(1) (as added: see PARA 2053 post) must be paid by him into the Consolidated Fund: s 9(7) (prospectively amended by the Domestic Violence, Crime and Victims Act 2004 s 57(1), (3)). At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed.

4 See the Criminal Injuries Compensation Act 1995 s 1(2). Section 2 provides the basis on which compensation is to be calculated; s 3 sets out the basic framework in relation to claims and awards to be adopted by the Scheme; ss 4, 5 respectively require the Scheme to make provision for reviews of decisions on claims for compensation and for appeals.

5 Ibid s 1(3). As to Parliamentary control over the making of the Scheme or over alterations to the Scheme or to the tariff under it see s 11 (amended by the Sexual Offences Act 2003 s 139, Sch 6 para 34; and prospectively amended by the Domestic Violence, Crime and Victims Act 2004 s 57(1), (4) from a day to be appointed).

COMPENSATION, REWARDS AND COSTS/(1) THE CRIMINAL INJURIES COMPENSATION SCHEME/2034. Administration of the Scheme.

2034. Administration of the Scheme.

Claims officers<sup>1</sup> in the Criminal Injuries Compensation Authority ('the Authority') determine claims for compensation in accordance with the Criminal Injuries Compensation Scheme<sup>2</sup>. Appeals against decisions taken on reviews under the Scheme are determined by adjudicators<sup>3</sup>. Persons appointed as adjudicators are appointed as members of the Criminal Injuries Compensation Appeals Panel ('the Panel'). One of the adjudicators is appointed as Chairman of the Panel by the Secretary of State. The Secretary of State also appoints persons as staff of the Panel to administer the provisions of the Scheme relating to the appeal system<sup>4</sup>.

Claims officers are responsible for deciding, in accordance with the Scheme, what awards (if any) should be made in individual cases, and how they should be paid. Their decisions are open to review and thereafter to appeal to the Panel, in accordance with the Scheme. No decision, whether by a claims officer or the Panel, is open to appeal to the Secretary of State<sup>5</sup>.

The Panel advises the Secretary of State on matters on which he seeks its advice, as well as on such other matters and at such times as it considers appropriate. Any advice given by the Panel is referred to by the Accounting Officer for the Panel in his annual report<sup>6</sup>.

1     le a person appointed by the Secretary of State under the Criminal Injuries Compensation Act 1995 s 3(4) (b): s 1(4). Claims officers are appointed by the Secretary of State (on such terms and conditions as he consider appropriate: s 3(5)(a)) to determine claims for compensation, and to make awards and payments of compensation, under the Criminal Injuries Compensation Scheme: s 3(4)(b). A claims officer is not to be regarded as having been appointed to exercise functions of the Secretary of State or to act on his behalf: s 3(5) (b). No decision taken by a claims officer is to be regarded as having been taken by, or on behalf of, the Secretary of State: s 3(6).

Adjudicators are appointed on such terms as the Secretary of State or the Scottish Ministers consider appropriate, but are not to be regarded as having been appointed to exercise functions of the Secretary of State or the Scottish Ministers or to act on his or their behalf: Criminal Injuries Compensation Act 1995 s 5(4) (substituted by the Scotland Act 1998 (Cross-Border Public Authorities) (Adaptation of Functions etc) Order 1999, SI 1999/1747, Sch 10 para 2(1), (5)). No decision taken by an adjudicator is to be regarded as having been taken by, or on behalf of, the Secretary of State or, as the case may be, the Scottish Ministers: Criminal Injuries Compensation Act 1995 s 5(5) (amended by the Scotland Act 1998 (Cross-Border Public Authorities) (Adaptation of Functions etc) Order 1999, SI 1999/1747, Sch 10 para 2(1), (6)). The Secretary of State may at any time after consultation with the Scottish Ministers or, in the case of an appointment made by the Scottish Ministers, the Scottish Ministers may at any time, after consultation with the Secretary of State, remove a person from office as an adjudicator if satisfied that: (1) he has been convicted of a criminal offence; (2) he has become bankrupt or had his estate sequestrated or has made an arrangement with, or granted a trust deed for, his creditors; or (3) he is otherwise unable or unfit to perform his duties: Criminal Injuries Compensation Act 1995 s 5(7).

UPDATE

2034 Administration of the Scheme

NOTE 3--Appeals are now to be made to the First-tier Tribunal: Criminal Injuries Compensation Act 1995 s 5(1) (s 5(1)-(7) substituted by SI 2008/2833).

Halsbury's Laws of England/CRIMINAL LAW, EVIDENCE AND PROCEDURE (VOLUME 11(1) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1-620; VOLUME 11(2) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 621-1049; VOLUME 11(3) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1050-1557; VOLUME 11(4) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1558-2180)/23. COMPENSATION, REWARDS AND COSTS/(1) THE CRIMINAL INJURIES COMPENSATION SCHEME/2035. Eligibility to apply for compensation.

2035. Eligibility to apply for compensation.

Compensation may be paid in accordance with the Criminal Injuries Compensation Scheme:

2612 (1) to an applicant who has sustained a criminal injury on or after 1 August 1964<sup>1</sup>;

2613 (2) where the victim of a criminal injury sustained on or after 1 August 1964 has since died, to an applicant who is a qualifying claimant<sup>2</sup>; and for the purposes of this Scheme, 'applicant' means any person for whose benefit an application for compensation is made, even where it is made on his behalf by another person<sup>3</sup>.

No compensation will be paid under the Scheme in the following circumstances:

2614 (a) where the applicant has previously lodged any claim for compensation in respect of the same criminal injury under this or any other scheme for the compensation of the victims of violent crime in operation in Great Britain<sup>4</sup>; or

2615 (b) where the criminal injury was sustained before 1 October 1979 and the victim and the assailant were living together at the time as members of the same family<sup>5</sup>.

For the purposes of the Scheme, 'criminal injury' means one or more personal injuries<sup>6</sup>, being an injury sustained in Great Britain<sup>7</sup> and directly attributable to:

2616 (i) a crime of violence<sup>8</sup> (including arson, fire-raising or an act of poisoning)<sup>9</sup>;

2617 (ii) an offence of trespass on a railway<sup>10</sup>; or

2618 (iii) the apprehension or attempted apprehension of an offender or a suspected offender, the prevention or attempted prevention of an offence, or the giving of help to any constable who is engaged in any such activity<sup>11</sup>.

It is not necessary for the assailant to have been convicted of a criminal offence in connection with the injury. Moreover, even where the injury is attributable to such conduct in respect of which the assailant cannot be convicted of an offence by reason of age, insanity or diplomatic immunity, the conduct may nevertheless be treated as constituting a criminal act<sup>12</sup>.

A personal injury is not a criminal injury for the purposes of the Scheme where the injury is attributable to the use of a vehicle, except where the vehicle was used so as deliberately to inflict, or attempt to inflict, injury on any person<sup>13</sup>.

Where an injury is sustained accidentally by a person who is engaged in any of the law enforcement activities described in head (iii) above, or any other activity directed to containing, limiting or remedying the consequences of a crime, compensation will not be payable unless the person injured was, at the time he sustained the injury, taking an exceptional risk which was justified in all the circumstances<sup>14</sup>.

- 1 Criminal Injuries Compensation Scheme (2001) PARA 6(a).
- 2 Criminal Injuries Compensation Scheme (2001) PARA 6(b). The reference to a qualifying claimant in the text refers to a qualifying claimant for the purposes of the Criminal Injuries Compensation Scheme (2001) PARA 38: see PARA 2042 post.
- 3 Criminal Injuries Compensation Scheme (2001) PARA 6.
- 4 Criminal Injuries Compensation Scheme (2001) PARA 7(a).
- 5 Criminal Injuries Compensation Scheme (2001) PARA 7(b). As to the meaning of 'family' see R (on the application of M) v Criminal Injuries Compensation Appeals Panel [2005] EWCA Civ 566, [2006] PIQR P75 (case decided under the Criminal Injuries Compensation Scheme 1969; suffered injuries by a foster parent; blood relationship not required for the exclusion to apply).
- 6 For the purposes of the Criminal Injuries Compensation Scheme, personal injury includes physical injury (including fatal injury), mental injury (that is temporary mental anxiety, medically verified, or a disabling mental illness confirmed by psychiatric diagnosis) and disease (that is a medically recognised illness or condition): Criminal Injuries Compensation Scheme (2001) PARA 9. Mental injury or disease may either result directly from the physical injury or from a sexual offence or may occur without any physical injury: Criminal Injuries Compensation Scheme (2001) PARA 9. Compensation will not be payable for mental injury or disease without physical injury, or in respect of a sexual offence, unless the applicant:
  - 270 (1) was put in reasonable fear of immediate physical harm to his own person (Criminal Injuries Compensation Scheme (2001) PARA 9(a)); or
  - 271 (2) had a close relationship of love and affection with another person at the time when that person sustained physical and/or mental injury (including fatal injury) directly attributable to conduct within heads (i), (ii) or (iii) in the text, and:
    4. (a) that relationship still subsists (unless the victim has since died) (Criminal Injuries Compensation Scheme (2001) PARA 9(b)(i)); and
    5. (b) the applicant either witnessed and was present on the occasion when the other person sustained the injury, or was closely involved in its immediate aftermath (Criminal Injuries Compensation Scheme (2001) PARA 9(b)(ii)); or
  - 272 (3) in a claim arising out of a sexual offence, was the non-consenting victim of that offence (which does not include a victim who consented in fact but was deemed in law not to have consented) (Criminal Injuries Compensation Scheme (2001) PARA 9(c)); or
  - 273 (4) being a person employed in the business of a railway, either witnessed and was present on the occasion when another person sustained physical (including fatal) injury directly attributable to an offence of trespass on a railway, or was closely involved in its immediate aftermath (Criminal Injuries Compensation Scheme (2001) PARA 9(d)).

Criminal Injuries Compensation Scheme (2001) PARA 12 (see the text to note 14 infra) does not apply where mental anxiety or mental illness is sustained as described in head (4) supra: Criminal Injuries Compensation Scheme (2001) PARA 9(d).

- 7 An injury is sustained in Great Britain where it is sustained:

- 274 (1) on a British aircraft, hovercraft or ship (Criminal Injuries Compensation Scheme (2001) note 1(a)(i));
- 275 (2) on, under or above an installation in a designated area within the meaning of the Continental Shelf Act 1964 s 1(7) or any waters within 500 metres of such an installation (Criminal Injuries Compensation Scheme (2001) note 1(a)(ii)); or
- 276 (3) in a lighthouse off the coast of Great Britain (Criminal Injuries Compensation Scheme (2001) note 1(a)(iii)).

An injury is sustained in Great Britain where it is sustained in that part of the Channel Tunnel system incorporated into England under the Channel Tunnel Act 1987 s 10: Criminal Injuries Compensation Scheme (2001) note 1(b)(i). However, if such an injury is sustained or caused by a non-United Kingdom officer acting in the exercise of his functions under the Channel Tunnel (International Arrangements) Order 1993, SI 1993/1813 (as amended), and the Channel Tunnel (Miscellaneous Provisions) Order 1994, SI 1994/1405 (see RAILWAYS, INLAND WATERWAYS AND CROSS-COUNTRY PIPELINES vol 39(1A) (Reissue) PARA 324), no compensation may be payable under the Criminal Injuries Compensation Scheme: Criminal Injuries Compensation Scheme (2001) note 1(b)(i).

Any injury caused in the following circumstances must be treated for the purposes of any application for compensation under the Criminal Injury Compensation Scheme as if the circumstances giving rise to the claim had occurred in Great Britain:

- 277 (a) an injury sustained by a United Kingdom officer acting in the exercise of his functions within French or Belgian territory under the Channel Tunnel (International Arrangements) Order 1993, SI 1993/1813 (as amended) and the Channel Tunnel (Miscellaneous Provisions) Order 1994, SI 1994/1405 (Criminal Injuries Compensation Scheme (2001) note 1(b)(ii)(a)); or
- 278 (b) an injury caused by a United Kingdom officer acting in the exercise of those functions within French or Belgian territory, other than an injury to any non-United Kingdom officer acting in the exercise of his functions (Criminal Injuries Compensation Scheme (2001) note 1(b)(ii)(b)).

'Officer' has the same meaning as in the Channel Tunnel (International Arrangements) Order 1993, SI 1993/1813 (as amended) and the Channel Tunnel (Miscellaneous Provisions) Order 1994, SI 1994/1405: Criminal Injuries Compensation Scheme (2001) note 1.

For the above purposes:

- 279 (i) 'British aircraft' means a British controlled aircraft within the meaning of the Civil Aviation Act 1982 s 92 (application of criminal law to aircraft: see AIR LAW vol 2 (2008) PARA 619), or one of Her Majesty's aircraft (Criminal Injuries Compensation Scheme (2001) note 2(a));
- 280 (ii) 'British hovercraft' means a British controlled hovercraft within the meaning of the Civil Aviation Act 1982 s 92 (as applied in relation to hovercraft by virtue of provision made under the Hovercraft Act 1968), or one of Her Majesty's hovercraft (Criminal Injuries Compensation Scheme (2001) note 2(b)); and
- 281 (iii) 'British ship' means one of Her Majesty's Ships or any vessel used in navigation which is owned wholly by persons of the following descriptions, namely, British citizens, or bodies corporate incorporated under the law of some part of, and having their principal place of business in, the United Kingdom, or Scottish partnerships (Criminal Injuries Compensation Scheme (2001) note 2(c)).

For these purposes, the references to Her Majesty's aircraft, hovercraft or ships are references to aircraft, hovercraft or ships which belong to, or are exclusively used in the service of, Her Majesty in right of the government of the United Kingdom: Criminal Injuries Compensation Scheme (2001) note 2.

8 le an offence of a violent nature, and not an offence with violent consequences: R v Criminal Injuries Compensation Board, ex p Webb [1987] QB 74, sub nom R v Criminal Injuries Compensation Board, ex p Warner [1986] 2 All ER 478, CA. The claimant's consent to the crime in respect of which he is claiming compensation, while not conclusive, is relevant to the question whether the crime is a crime of violence: R v Criminal Injuries Compensation Appeals Panel, ex p August; R v Criminal Injuries Compensation Appeals Panel, ex p Brown [2001] QB 774, [2001] 2 All ER 874, CA (boys aged 12-14 years old consenting to buggery; not a crime of violence). See also Gray v Criminal Injuries Compensation Board 1999 SC 137, 1999 SLT 425, IH (sexual intercourse by deception in a bigamous marriage entered into unknowingly by the claimant is a crime of fraud, not one of violence; no compensation payable), applied in LC v Criminal Injuries Compensation Board (1999) Times, 3 June, OH (indecent exposure not a crime of violence). A push can amount to a crime of violence unless done in self defence: R v Criminal Injuries Compensation Board, ex p Cowan (11 June 1998, unreported). The test of foreseeability has no application to compensation claims for criminal injury directly attributable to nervous shock: R v Criminal Injuries Compensation Board, ex p Johnson (1994) 21 BMLR 48, DC. The fact that a person suffers a psychiatric injury as a result of being told about an offence on another does not of itself necessarily mean that the injury is not directly attributable to the offence, but the more remote from the offence in time and place is the recounting of the experience, the more difficult it is to say that the psychiatric illness was directly attributable to the offence: R v Criminal Injuries Compensation Board, ex p K and M [1998] 1 WLR 1458.

'Injury' presupposes a pre-injury state capable of being assessed and compared with the post-injury state: P's Curator Bonis v Criminal Injuries Compensation Board 1997 SLT 1180 (child conceived and born as a result of an incestuous rape and suffering congenital defects did not have 'injuries' within the meaning of the Scheme).

2036. Eligibility to receive compensation.

A claims officer<sup>1</sup> may withhold or reduce an award<sup>2</sup> where he considers that:

- 2619 (1) the applicant failed to take<sup>3</sup>, without delay, all reasonable steps to inform the police, or other body or person considered by the Criminal Injuries Compensation Authority to be appropriate for the purpose, of the circumstances giving rise to the injury<sup>4</sup>;
- 2620 (2) the applicant failed to co-operate with the police or other authority in attempting to bring the assailant to justice<sup>5</sup>;
- 2621 (3) the applicant has failed to give all reasonable assistance to the Authority or other body or person in connection with the application<sup>6</sup>;
- 2622 (4) the conduct of the applicant before, during or after the incident giving rise to the application makes it inappropriate that a full award or any award at all be made<sup>7</sup>; or
- 2623 (5) the applicant's character as shown by his criminal convictions (excluding convictions spent under the Rehabilitation of Offenders Act 1974<sup>8</sup> at the date of application or death) or by evidence available to the claims officer makes it inappropriate<sup>9</sup> that a full award or any award at all be made<sup>10</sup>.

A claims officer will make an award only where he is satisfied:

- 2624 (a) that there is no likelihood that an assailant would benefit if an award were made<sup>11</sup>; or
- 2625 (b) where the applicant is under 18 years of age when the application is determined, that it would not be against his interest for an award to be made<sup>12</sup>.

COMPENSATION, REWARDS AND COSTS/(1) THE CRIMINAL INJURIES COMPENSATION SCHEME/2037. Consideration of applications.

2037. Consideration of applications.

An application for compensation under the Criminal Injuries Compensation Scheme in respect of a criminal injury must be made in writing on a form obtainable from the Criminal Injuries Compensation Authority. It should be made as soon as possible after the incident giving rise to the injury and must be received by the Authority within two years of the date of the incident. A claims officer<sup>1</sup> may waive this time limit where he considers that, by reason of the particular circumstances of the case, it is reasonable and in the interests of justice to do so<sup>2</sup>.

It will be for the applicant to make out his case<sup>3</sup> including, where appropriate:

- 2626 (1) making out his case for a waiver of the relevant time limit<sup>4</sup>; and
- 2627 (2) satisfying the claims officer dealing with his application<sup>5</sup> that an award should not be reconsidered, withheld or reduced under any provision of this Scheme<sup>6</sup>.

Where an applicant is represented, the costs of representation will not be met by the Authority<sup>7</sup>.

A claims officer may make such directions and arrangements for the conduct of an application, including the imposition of conditions, as he considers appropriate in all the circumstances. The standard of proof to be applied by a claims officer in all matters before him will be the balance of probabilities<sup>8</sup>.

Where a claims officer considers that an examination of the injury is required before a decision can be reached, the Authority will make arrangements for such an examination by a duly qualified medical practitioner. Reasonable expenses incurred by the applicant in that connection will be met by the Authority<sup>9</sup>.

2038. Types and limits of compensation.

Subject to the other provisions of the Criminal Injuries Compensation Scheme, the compensation payable under an award will be:

- 2628 (1) a standard amount of compensation determined by reference to the nature of the injury<sup>1</sup>;
- 2629 (2) where the applicant has lost earnings or earning capacity for longer than 28 weeks as a direct consequence of the injury (other than injury leading to his death), an additional amount in respect of such loss of earnings<sup>2</sup>;
- 2630 (3) where the applicant has lost earnings or earning capacity for longer than 28 weeks as a direct consequence of the injury (other than injury leading to his death) or, if not normally employed, is incapacitated to a similar extent, an additional amount in respect of any special expenses<sup>3</sup>;
- 2631 (4) where the victim has died in consequence of the injury, an additional amount or amounts<sup>4</sup>;
- 2632 (5) where the victim has died otherwise than in consequence of the injury, a supplementary amount<sup>5</sup>.

The maximum award that may be made in respect of the same injury may not exceed £500,000. For these purposes, where the victim has died in consequence of the injury, any application made by the victim before his death and any application made by any qualifying claimant or claimants after his death will be regarded as being in respect of the same injury<sup>6</sup>.

1 Criminal Injuries Compensation Scheme (2001) PARA 23(a). The amount of compensation by reference to the nature of the injury referred to in head (1) in the text is that determined in accordance with the Criminal Injuries Compensation Scheme (2001) PARAS 26-29: see PARA 2039 post.

6 Criminal Injuries Compensation Scheme (2001) PARA 24. The injury, or any exacerbation of a pre-existing condition, must be sufficiently serious to qualify for compensation equal at least to the minimum award under the Scheme in accordance with the Criminal Injuries Compensation Scheme (2001) PARA 26, but lesser compensation may be paid if an award is reduced under the Criminal Injuries Compensation Scheme (2001) PARAS 13, 14, or 15 (see PARA 2036 ante): Criminal Injuries Compensation Scheme (2001) PARA 25.

COMPENSATION, REWARDS AND COSTS/(1) THE CRIMINAL INJURIES COMPENSATION SCHEME/2039. Standard amount of compensation.

2039. Standard amount of compensation.

The standard amount of compensation is the amount shown in respect of the relevant description of injury in the Tariff of Injuries and Standard Amounts of Compensation<sup>1</sup>, which sets out:

- 2633 (1) a scale of fixed levels of compensation<sup>2</sup>;
- 2634 (2) the level and corresponding amount of compensation for each description of injury<sup>3</sup>; and
- 2635 (3) qualifying notes<sup>4</sup>.

Where the injury has the effect of accelerating or exacerbating a pre-existing condition, the compensation awarded will reflect only the degree of acceleration or exacerbation<sup>5</sup>.

Minor multiple physical injuries, eg grazing, lacerations with no permanent scarring, black eye(s) and loss of fingernails, will qualify for compensation only where the applicant has sustained at least three separate physical injuries of such type, at least one of which must still have had significant residual effects six weeks after the incident. The injuries must also have necessitated at least two visits to or by a medical practitioner within that six-week period<sup>6</sup>.

The standard amount of compensation for more serious but separate multiple injuries will, unless expressly provided for otherwise in the Tariff, be calculated as:

- 2636 (a) the Tariff amount for the highest-rated description of injury; plus
- 2637 (b) 30 per cent of the Tariff amount for the second highest-rated description of injury; plus, where there are three or more injuries,
- 2638 (c) 15 per cent of the Tariff amount for the third highest-rated description of injury<sup>7</sup>.

1 The Tariff is set out at the end of the Criminal Injuries Compensation Scheme (2001).

4 Criminal Injuries Compensation Scheme (2001) PARA 26(c).

5 Criminal Injuries Compensation Scheme (2001) PARA 26.

6 Criminal Injuries Compensation Scheme (2001) PARA 27, Tariff note 12.

7 Criminal Injuries Compensation Scheme (2001) PARA 27. Where the Authority considers that any description of injury for which no provision is made in the Tariff is sufficiently serious to qualify for at least the minimum award under this Scheme, it will, following consultation with the Panel, refer the injury to the Secretary of State. In doing so the Authority will recommend to the Secretary of State both the inclusion of that description of injury in the Tariff and also the amount of compensation for which it should qualify. Any such consultation with the Panel or reference to the Secretary of State must not refer to the circumstances of any individual application for compensation under this Scheme other than the relevant medical reports: Criminal Injuries Compensation Scheme (2001) PARA 28.

Where an application for compensation is made in respect of an injury for which no provision is made in the Tariff and the Authority decides to refer the injury to the Secretary of State under the Criminal Injuries Compensation Scheme (2001) PARA 28, an interim award may be made of up to half the amount of compensation for which it is recommended that such description of injury should qualify if subsequently included in the Tariff. No part of such an interim award will be recoverable if the injury is not subsequently included in the Tariff or, if included, qualifies for less compensation than the interim award paid: Criminal Injuries Compensation Scheme (2001) PARA 29.

Halsbury's Laws of England/CRIMINAL LAW, EVIDENCE AND PROCEDURE (VOLUME 11(1) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1-620; VOLUME 11(2) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 621-1049; VOLUME 11(3) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1050-1557; VOLUME 11(4) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1558-2180)/23.
 COMPENSATION, REWARDS AND COSTS/(1) THE CRIMINAL INJURIES COMPENSATION SCHEME/2040. Compensation for loss of earnings.

2040. Compensation for loss of earnings.

Where the applicant has lost earnings or earning capacity for longer than 28 weeks as a direct consequence of the injury (other than injury leading to his death), no compensation in respect of loss of earnings or earning capacity will be payable for the first 28 weeks of loss. The period of loss for which compensation may be payable will begin after 28 weeks incapacity for work and continue for such period as a claims officer may determine<sup>1</sup>.

For a period of loss ending before or continuing to the time the claim is assessed, the net loss of earnings or earning capacity will be calculated on the basis of:

- 2639 (1) the applicant's emoluments (being any profit or gain accruing from an office or employment) at the time of the injury and what those emoluments would have been during the period of loss<sup>2</sup>;
- 2640 (2) any emoluments which have become payable to the applicant in respect of the whole or part of the period of loss, whether or not as a result of the injury<sup>3</sup>;
- 2641 (3) any changes in the applicant's pension rights<sup>4</sup>;
- 2642 (4) in accordance with the Scheme's provisions for reductions to take account of other payments<sup>5</sup>, any social security benefits, insurance payments and pension which have become payable to the applicant during the period of loss<sup>6</sup>; and
- 2643 (5) any other pension which has become payable to the applicant during the period of loss, whether or not as a result of the injury<sup>7</sup>.

Where, at the time the claim is assessed, a claims officer considers that the applicant is likely to suffer continuing loss of earnings and/or earning capacity, an annual rate of net loss (the multiplicand) or, where appropriate, more than one such rate will be calculated on the basis of:

- 2644 (a) the current rate of net loss<sup>8</sup>;
- 2645 (b) such future rate or rates of net loss (including changes in the applicant's pension rights) as the claims officer may determine<sup>9</sup>;
- 2646 (c) the claims officer's assessment of the applicant's future earning capacity<sup>10</sup>;
- 2647 (d) in accordance with the Scheme's provisions for reductions to take account of other payments<sup>11</sup>, any social security benefits, insurance payments and pension which will become payable to the applicant in future<sup>12</sup>; and
- 2648 (e) any other pension which will become payable to the applicant in future, whether or not as a result of the injury<sup>13</sup>.

- 12 Criminal Injuries Compensation Scheme (2001) PARA 32(d).
- 13 Criminal Injuries Compensation Scheme (2001) PARA 32(e). The compensation payable in respect of each period of continuing loss will be a lump sum, which is the product of that multiplicand and an appropriate multiplier. When the loss does not start until a future date, the lump sum will be discounted to provide for the present value of the money. The claims officer will assess an appropriate multiplier, discount factor, or life expectancy by reference to the tables in note 3 of the Tariff, and may make such adjustments as he considers appropriate to take account of any factors and contingencies which appear to him to be relevant. The tables in note 3 of the Tariff set out the multipliers and (where applicable) discounts and life expectancies to be applied: Criminal Injuries Compensation Scheme (2001) PARA 32.

Where a claims officer considers that the approach in the Criminal Injuries Compensation Scheme (2001) PARA 32 is impracticable, the compensation payable in respect of continuing loss of earnings and/or earning capacity will be such other lump sum as he may determine: Criminal Injuries Compensation Scheme (2001) PARA 33.

Any rate of net loss of earnings or earning capacity (before any reduction in accordance with this Scheme) which is to be taken into account in calculating any compensation payable under the Criminal Injuries Compensation Scheme (2001) PARAS 30-33 must not exceed one and a half times the gross average industrial earnings at the time of assessment according to the latest figures published by the Office for National Statistics: Criminal Injuries Compensation Scheme (2001) PARA 34.

- 2649 (1) loss of or damage to property or equipment belonging to the applicant on which he relied as a physical aid, where the loss or damage was a direct consequence of the injury<sup>2</sup>;
- 2650 (2) costs (other than by way of loss of earnings or earning capacity) associated with National Health Service treatment for the injury<sup>3</sup>;

Where the victim has died in consequence of the injury, no compensation other than funeral expenses will be payable for the benefit of his estate. Such expenses will<sup>1</sup> be payable up to an amount considered reasonable by a claims officer, even where the person bearing the cost of the funeral is otherwise ineligible to claim under the Criminal Injuries Compensation Scheme<sup>2</sup>.

Where the victim has died since sustaining the injury, compensation may be payable<sup>3</sup> to any claimant (a 'qualifying claimant') who at the time of the deceased's death was:

- 2653 (1) the partner of the deceased, being only, for these purposes:

Where the victim has died otherwise than in consequence of the injury, and before title to the award has been vested in the victim<sup>9</sup>, no standard amount or other compensation will be payable to the estate or to a qualifying claimant other than supplementary compensation<sup>10</sup>.

A person who was criminally responsible for the death of a victim may not be a qualifying claimant<sup>11</sup>.

Additional compensation<sup>12</sup> may be payable to a qualifying claimant where a claims officer is satisfied that the claimant was financially or physically dependent on the deceased. A financial dependency will not be established where the deceased's only normal income was from:

- 2656 (i) United Kingdom social security benefits; or
- 2657 (ii) social security benefits or similar payments from the funds of other countries<sup>13</sup>.

Where a qualifying claimant was under 18 years of age at the time of the deceased's death and was dependent on him for parental services, additional compensation may also be payable<sup>14</sup>.

Each of these payments will be multiplied by an appropriate multiplier selected by a claims officer in accordance with the Criminal Injuries Compensation Scheme (2001) PARA 32 (future loss of earnings), taking account of the period remaining before the qualifying claimant reaches age 18 and of any other factors and contingencies which appear to the claims officer to be relevant: Criminal Injuries Compensation Scheme (2001) PARA 42.

Application may be made under the Criminal Injuries Compensation Scheme (2001) PARAS 37-42 (compensation in fatal cases) even where an award had been made to the victim in respect of the same injury before his death. Any such application will be subject to the conditions set out in the Criminal Injuries Compensation Scheme (2001) PARAS 56-57 (see PARA 2046 post) for the re-opening of cases, and any compensation payable to the qualifying claimant or claimants, except payments made under the Criminal Injuries Compensation Scheme (2001) PARAS 37, 39 (funeral expenses and standard amount of compensation), will be reduced by the amount paid to the victim. The amounts payable to the victim and the qualifying claimant or claimants will not in total exceed £500,000: Criminal Injuries Compensation Scheme (2001) PARA 43.

Where a victim who would have qualified for additional compensation under the Criminal Injuries Compensation Scheme (2001) PARA 23(b) (loss of earnings: see PARA 2038 head (2) ante) and/or the Criminal Injuries Compensation Scheme (2001) PARA 23(c) (special expenses: see PARA 2038 head (3) ante) has died, otherwise than in consequence of the injury, before such compensation was awarded, supplementary compensation under the Criminal Injuries Compensation Scheme (2001) PARA 44 may be payable to a qualifying claimant who was financially dependent on the deceased within the terms of the Criminal Injuries Compensation Scheme (2001) PARA 40 (dependency), whether or not a relevant application was made by the victim before his death. Payment may be made in accordance with the Criminal Injuries Compensation Scheme (2001) PARA 31 in respect of the victim's loss of earnings (except for the first 28 weeks of the victim's loss of earnings and/or earning capacity) and in accordance with the Criminal Injuries Compensation Scheme (2001) PARA 35 (see PARA 2041 ante) in respect of any special expenses incurred by the victim before his death. The amounts payable to the victim and the qualifying claimant or claimants will not in total exceed £500,000: Criminal Injuries Compensation Scheme (2001) PARA 44.

 COMPENSATION, REWARDS AND COSTS/(1) THE CRIMINAL INJURIES COMPENSATION SCHEME/2043. Effect on awards of other payments.

2043. Effect on awards of other payments.

All awards payable under the Criminal Injuries Compensation Scheme<sup>1</sup> will be subject to a reduction to take account of social security benefits (or other state benefits) or insurance payments made by way of compensation for the same contingency. The reduction will be applied to those categories or periods of loss or need for which additional or supplementary compensation is payable, including compensation calculated on the basis of a multiplicand or annual cost<sup>2</sup>.

Where, in the opinion of a claims officer, an applicant may be or may become eligible for any of the benefits and payments so mentioned, an award may be withheld until the applicant has taken such steps as the claims officer considers reasonable to claim them<sup>3</sup>.

Where the victim is alive, any compensation payable for loss of earnings<sup>4</sup> will be reduced to take account of any pension accruing as a result of the injury. Where the victim has died in consequence of the injury, any compensation in respect of dependency<sup>5</sup> will similarly be reduced to take account of any pension payable, as a result of the victim's death, for the benefit of the applicant<sup>6</sup>.

An award payable under the Scheme will be reduced by the full value of any payment in respect of the same injury which the applicant has received by way of:

- 2658 (1) any criminal injury compensation award made under or pursuant to arrangements in force at the relevant time in Northern Ireland<sup>7</sup>;
- 2659 (2) any compensation award or similar payment from the funds of other countries<sup>8</sup>;
- 2660 (3) any award where:
  - 603 85. (a) a civil court has made an order for the payment of damages<sup>9</sup>;
  - 86. (b) a claim for damages and/or compensation has been settled on terms providing for the payment of money<sup>10</sup>;
  - 87. (c) payment of compensation has been ordered by a criminal court in respect of personal injuries<sup>11</sup>.

In the case of head (1) or head (2) above, the reduction will also include the full value of any payment to which the applicant has any present or future entitlement<sup>12</sup>.

<sup>2</sup> Criminal Injuries Compensation Scheme (2001) PARA 45. The amount of the reduction will be the full value of any relevant payment which the applicant has received, or to which he has or may have any present or future entitlement, by way of: (1) United Kingdom social security benefits (or other state benefits); (2) social security benefits or similar payments from the funds of other countries; (3) payments under insurance arrangements, including, where a claim is made under the Criminal Injuries Compensation Scheme (2001) PARAS 35(c), (d), 36 (special expenses), insurance personally effected, paid for and maintained by the personal income of the victim or, in the case of a person under 18 years of age, by his parent. Insurance so personally effected will otherwise be disregarded: Criminal Injuries Compensation Scheme (2001) PARA 45. In assessing the value of any such benefits and payments, account may be taken of any income tax liability likely to reduce their value: Criminal Injuries Compensation Scheme (2001) PARA 45.

In the case of a child whose parent has been murdered, the benefit gained from care and support given by relatives is not a benefit for these purposes: R v Criminal Injuries Compensation Board, ex p K [1999] QB 1131, [1999] 2 WLR 948. A child's criminal injury compensation claim should be calculated and treated as distinct from his parent's claim, so as to avoid depletion due to any insurance benefit which was personal to the parent: R v Criminal Injuries Compensation Board, ex p Barrett [1994] 1 FLR 587, [1994] PIQR Q44.

6 Criminal Injuries Compensation Scheme (2001) PARA 47. Where such pensions are taxable, one half of their value will be deducted, but they will otherwise be deducted in full (where, for example, a lump sum payment not subject to income tax is made). For these purposes, 'pension' means any payment payable as a result of the injury or death in pursuance of pension or any other rights connected with the victim's employment, and includes any gratuity of that kind and similar benefits payable under insurance policies paid for by the victim's employers. Pension rights accruing solely as a result of payments by the victim or a dependant will be disregarded: Criminal Injuries Compensation Scheme (2001) PARA 47.

Where a person in whose favour an award under this Scheme is made subsequently receives any other payment in respect of the same injury in any of the circumstances mentioned in the Criminal Injuries Compensation Scheme (2001) PARA 48, but the award made under this Scheme was not reduced accordingly, he will be required to repay the Authority in full up to the amount of the other payment: Criminal Injuries Compensation Scheme (2001) PARA 49.

COMPENSATION, REWARDS AND COSTS/(1) THE CRIMINAL INJURIES COMPENSATION SCHEME/2044. Determination of applications and payment of awards.

2044. Determination of applications and payment of awards.

An application for compensation under the Criminal Injuries Compensation Scheme will be determined by a claims officer<sup>1</sup>, and written notification of the decision will be sent to the applicant or his representative<sup>2</sup>.

Compensation will normally be paid as a single lump sum, but one or more interim payments may be made where a claims officer considers this appropriate<sup>3</sup>.

<sup>2</sup> Criminal Injuries Compensation Scheme (2001) PARA 50. The claims officer may make such directions and arrangements, including the imposition of conditions, in connection with the acceptance, settlement or trust, payment, repayment and/or administration of an award as he considers appropriate in all the circumstances. Any such directions and arrangements, including any settlement or trust may be made having regard to the interests of the applicant (whether or not a minor or a person under an incapacity) as well as to considerations of public policy (including the desirability of providing for the return of any parts of an award which may prove to be surplus to the purposes for which they were awarded) on terms which do not exhaust the beneficial interest in the award and which provide, either expressly or by operation of law, for the balance of any trust fund to revert to the Criminal Injuries Compensation Authority. Subject to any such arrangements, including the special procedures in the Criminal Injuries Compensation Scheme (2001) PARA 52 (purchase of annuities: see note 3 infra), and to the Criminal Injuries Compensation Scheme (2001) PARAS 53-55 (reconsideration of decisions: see PARA 2045 post), title to an award offered will be vested in the applicant when the Authority has received notification in writing that he accepts the award: Criminal Injuries Compensation Scheme (2001) PARA 50.

As a matter of procedural fairness, proper reasons must be provided, together with at least general supporting evidence, for a decision to reduce or refuse compensation claims: R v Criminal Injuries Compensation Authority, ex p Leatherland; R v Criminal Injuries Compensation Board, ex p Bramall; R v Criminal Injuries Compensation Panel, ex p Kay [2001] ACD 76.

<sup>3</sup> Criminal Injuries Compensation Scheme (2001) PARA 51. Where prior agreement is reached between the Authority and the applicant or his representative, an award may consist in whole or in part of an annuity or annuities, purchased for the benefit of the applicant or to be held on trust for his benefit. Once that agreement is reached, the Authority will take the instructions of the applicant or his representative as to which annuity or annuities should be purchased. Any expenses incurred will be met from the award: Criminal Injuries Compensation Scheme (2001) PARA 52. However, once an award has been paid to an applicant or his representative under the Criminal Injuries Compensation Scheme (2001) PARA 51, then para 52 does not apply: Criminal Injuries Compensation Scheme (2001) PARA 51.

Halsbury's Laws of England/CRIMINAL LAW, EVIDENCE AND PROCEDURE (VOLUME 11(1) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1-620; VOLUME 11(2) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 621-1049; VOLUME 11(3) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1050-1557; VOLUME 11(4) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1558-2180)/23.
COMPENSATION, REWARDS AND COSTS/(1) THE CRIMINAL INJURIES COMPENSATION SCHEME/2045. Reconsideration of decisions.

2045. Reconsideration of decisions.

A decision made by a claims officer<sup>1</sup> may be reconsidered at any time before actual payment of a final award where there is new evidence or a change in circumstances. In particular, the fact that an interim payment has been made does not preclude a claims officer from reconsidering issues of eligibility for an award<sup>2</sup>.

<sup>2</sup> Criminal Injuries Compensation Scheme (2001) PARA 53. Where an applicant has already been sent written notification of the decision on his application, he will be sent written notice that the decision is to be reconsidered, and any representations which he sends to the Criminal Injuries Compensation Authority within 30 days of the date of such notice will be taken into account in reconsidering the decision. Whether or not any such representations are made, the applicant will be sent written notification of the outcome of the reconsideration, and where the original decision is not confirmed, such notification will include the revised decision: Criminal Injuries Compensation Scheme (2001) PARA 54.

Where a decision to make an award has been made by a claims officer in accordance with a direction by adjudicators on determining an appeal under the Criminal Injuries Compensation Scheme (2001) PARA 77 (see PARA 2051 post), but before the award has been paid the claims officer considers that there is new evidence or a change in circumstances which justifies reconsidering whether the award should be withheld or the amount of compensation reduced, the Authority will refer the case to the Panel for rehearing under the Criminal Injuries Compensation Scheme (2001) PARA 82 (see PARA 2052 post): Criminal Injuries Compensation Scheme (2001) PARA 55.

 COMPENSATION, REWARDS AND COSTS/(1) THE CRIMINAL INJURIES COMPENSATION SCHEME/2046. Re-opening of cases.

2046. Re-opening of cases.

A decision made by a claims officer<sup>1</sup> and accepted by the applicant, or a direction by adjudicators, will normally<sup>2</sup> be regarded as final. A claims officer may, however, subsequently re-open a case where there has been such a material change in the victim's medical condition that injustice would occur if the original assessment of compensation were allowed to stand, or where he has since died in consequence of the injury<sup>3</sup>.

A case will not be re-opened more than two years after the date of the final decision unless the claims officer is satisfied, on the basis of evidence presented in support of the application to re-open the case, that the renewed application can be considered without a need for further extensive inquiries<sup>4</sup>.

 COMPENSATION, REWARDS AND COSTS/(1) THE CRIMINAL INJURIES COMPENSATION SCHEME/2047. Review of decisions.

2047. Review of decisions.

An applicant may seek a review of any decision under the Criminal Injuries Compensation Scheme by a claims officer:

- 2661 (1) not to waive the time limit for application for compensation<sup>1</sup> or for application for review<sup>2</sup>;
- 2662 (2) not to re-open a case<sup>3</sup>;
- 2663 (3) to withhold an award, including such decision made on reconsideration of an award<sup>4</sup>;
- 2664 (4) to make an award, including a decision to make a reduced award whether or not on reconsideration of an award<sup>5</sup>; or
- 2665 (5) to seek<sup>6</sup> repayment of an award<sup>7</sup>.

An applicant may not, however, seek the review of any such decision where the decision was itself made on a review<sup>8</sup> and either the applicant did not appeal against it or the appeal was not referred for determination on an oral hearing, or where the decision was made in accordance with a direction by adjudicators on determining<sup>9</sup> an appeal<sup>10</sup>.

10   Criminal Injuries Compensation Scheme (2001) PARA 58. An application for the review of a decision by a claims officer must be made in writing to the Criminal Injuries Compensation Authority and must be supported by reasons together with any relevant additional information. It must be received by the Authority within 90 days of the date of the decision to be reviewed, but this time limit may, in exceptional circumstances, be waived where a claims officer more senior than the one who made the original decision considers that: (1) any extension requested by the applicant and received within the 90 days is based on good reasons; and (2) it would be in the interests of justice to do so: Criminal Injuries Compensation Scheme (2001) PARA 59.

All applications for review will be considered by a claims officer more senior than any claims officer who has previously dealt with the case. The officer conducting the review will reach his decision in accordance with the provisions of the Scheme applying to the original application, and he will not be bound by any earlier decision either as to the eligibility of the applicant for an award or as to the amount of an award. The applicant will be sent written notification of the outcome of the review, giving reasons for the review decision, and the Authority will, unless it receives notice of an appeal, ensure that a determination of the original application is made in accordance with the review decision: Criminal Injuries Compensation Scheme (2001) PARA 60.

COMPENSATION, REWARDS AND COSTS/(1) THE CRIMINAL INJURIES COMPENSATION SCHEME/2048. Appeals against review decisions.

2048. Appeals against review decisions.

An applicant who is dissatisfied with a decision taken on a review<sup>1</sup> may appeal against the decision by giving written notice of appeal to the Criminal Injuries Compensation Appeals Panel ('the Panel')<sup>2</sup>. Such notice of appeal must be supported by reasons for the appeal together with any relevant additional material which the appellant wishes to submit, and must be received by the Panel within 90 days<sup>3</sup> of the date of the review decision. The Panel will send to the Criminal Injuries Compensation Authority a copy of the notice of appeal and supporting reasons which it receives and of any other material submitted by the appellant<sup>4</sup>.

The standard of proof to be applied by the Panel in all matters before it is the balance of probabilities. It is for the appellant to make out his case including, where appropriate:

- 2666 (1) making out his case for a waiver of the time limit for appeals<sup>5</sup>; and
- 2667 (2) satisfying the adjudicator or adjudicators responsible for determining his appeal that an award should not be reconsidered, withheld or reduced under any provision of the Criminal Injuries Compensation Scheme. The adjudicator or adjudicators concerned must<sup>6</sup> ensure, before determining an appeal, that the appellant has had an opportunity to submit representations on any evidence or other material submitted by or on behalf of the Authority<sup>7</sup>.

1 le under the Criminal Injuries Compensation Scheme (2001) PARA 60: see PARA 2047 ante.

2 A form of appeal is obtainable from the Criminal Injuries Compensation Authority. As to the Panel see PARA 2034 ante.

3 A member of the staff of the Panel may, in exceptional circumstances, waive this time limit where he considers that: (1) any extension requested by the appellant and received within the 90 days is based on good reasons; and (2) it would be in the interests of justice to do so: Criminal Injuries Compensation Scheme (2001) PARA 62.

Where, on considering a request to waive the time limit, a member of the staff of the Panel does not waive it, he will refer the request to the Chairman of the Panel or to another adjudicator nominated by the Chairman to decide requests for waiver, and a decision by the adjudicator concerned not to waive the time limit will be final. Written notification of the outcome of the waiver request will be sent to the appellant and to the Authority, giving reasons for the decision where the time limit is not waived: Criminal Injuries Compensation Scheme (2001) PARA 62.

4 Criminal Injuries Compensation Scheme (2001) PARA 61. Where the applicant is represented for the purposes of the appeal, the costs of representation will not be met by the Authority or the Panel: Criminal Injuries Compensation Scheme (2001) PARA 61.

Where the Panel receives notice of an appeal against a review decision relating to a decision mentioned in the Criminal Injuries Compensation Scheme (2001) PARA 58(a) or (b) (see PARA 2047 heads (1), (2) ante), the appeal will be dealt with in accordance with the Criminal Injuries Compensation Scheme (2001) PARAS 66-68 (see PARA 2049 post). Where the Panel receives notice of an appeal against a review decision relating to a decision mentioned in the Criminal Injuries Compensation Scheme (2001) PARA 58(c), (d) or (e) (see PARA 2047 heads (3)-(5) ante), the appeal will be dealt with in accordance with the Criminal Injuries Compensation Scheme (2001) PARAS 69-71 (see PARA 2050 post) and may under those provisions be referred for an oral hearing in accordance with the Criminal Injuries Compensation Scheme (2001) PARAS 72-78 (see PARA 2051 post). The Panel may publish information in connection with individual appeals, but such information must not identify any appellant or other person appearing at an oral hearing or referred to during an appeal, or enable identification to be made of any such person without that person's consent: Criminal Injuries Compensation Scheme (2001) PARA 63.

The Panel may make such arrangements for the inspection of the injury as it considers appropriate. Reasonable expenses incurred by the appellant in that connection will be met by the Panel: Criminal Injuries Compensation Scheme (2001) PARA 65.

The Chairman of the Criminal Injuries Compensation Appeals Panel<sup>1</sup> or another adjudicator<sup>2</sup> nominated by him will determine any appeal against a decision taken on a review<sup>3</sup>: (1) not to waive the time limit<sup>4</sup>; or (2) not to re-open<sup>5</sup> a case<sup>6</sup>.

In determining such an appeal<sup>7</sup>, the adjudicator will allow the appeal where he considers it appropriate to do so. Where he dismisses the appeal, his decision will be final. Written notification of the outcome of the appeal, giving reasons for the decision, will be sent to the appellant and to the Criminal Injuries Compensation Authority<sup>8</sup>.

2050. Appeals concerning awards.

A member of the staff of the Criminal Injuries Compensation Appeals Panel may refer for an oral hearing<sup>1</sup> any appeal against a decision taken on a review:

- 2668 (1) to withhold an award, including such decision<sup>2</sup> made on reconsideration of an award<sup>3</sup>;
- 2669 (2) to make an award, including a decision<sup>4</sup> to make a reduced award whether or not on reconsideration of an award<sup>5</sup>; or
- 2670 (3) to seek repayment<sup>6</sup> of an award<sup>7</sup>.

A request for an oral hearing in such cases may also be made by the Criminal Injuries Compensation Authority<sup>8</sup>.

Where a member of the staff of the Panel does not refer an appeal for an oral hearing<sup>9</sup>, he will refer it to an adjudicator<sup>10</sup>. The adjudicator will refer the appeal for determination on an oral hearing<sup>11</sup> where, on the evidence available to him, he considers:

- 2671 (a) in a case where the review decision was to withhold an award on the ground that the injury was not sufficiently serious to qualify for an award equal to at least the minimum award payable under the Criminal Injuries Compensation Scheme, that an award in accordance with the Scheme could have been made<sup>12</sup>; or
- 2672 (b) in any other case, that there is a dispute as to the material facts or conclusions upon which the review decision was based and that a different decision in accordance with the Scheme could have been made<sup>13</sup>.

He may also refer the appeal for determination on an oral hearing<sup>14</sup> where he considers that the appeal cannot be determined on the basis of the material before him or that for any other reason an oral hearing would be desirable<sup>15</sup>.

Where an appeal is not referred<sup>16</sup> for an oral hearing, the adjudicator's dismissal of the appeal will be final and the decision taken on the review will stand. Written notification of the dismissal of the appeal, giving reasons for the decision, will be sent to the appellant and to the Authority<sup>17</sup>.

COMPENSATION, REWARDS AND COSTS/(1) THE CRIMINAL INJURIES COMPENSATION SCHEME/2051. Oral hearing of appeals.

2051. Oral hearing of appeals.

Where an appeal is referred for determination on an oral hearing, the hearing will take place before at least two adjudicators. Where the referral was made by an adjudicator<sup>1</sup>, that adjudicator<sup>2</sup> will not take part in the hearing. On application by the appellant, pending determination, the Chairman or an adjudicator nominated by him may direct that an interim payment be made. The procedure to be followed<sup>3</sup> for any particular appeal will be a matter for the adjudicators hearing the appeal<sup>4</sup>.

Written notice of the date proposed for the oral hearing will normally be sent to the appellant and the Criminal Injuries Compensation Authority at least 21 days beforehand. Any documents to be submitted to the adjudicators for the purposes of the hearing by the appellant, or by or on behalf of the Authority, will be made available at the hearing, if not before, to the Authority or the appellant respectively<sup>5</sup>.

The procedure at hearings will be as informal as is consistent with the proper determination of appeals<sup>6</sup>. Hearings will take place in private<sup>7</sup>.

Where the adjudicators adjourn the hearing, they may direct that an interim payment be made. Where the only issue remaining is the determination of the amount of compensation, the adjudicators may remit the application for final determination by one of themselves in the absence of the appellant, but subject to the right of the appellant to have a further oral hearing if not satisfied with that determination, in which the adjudicator who made that determination will not take part. On determining the appeal, the adjudicators will, where necessary, make such direction as they think fit as to the decision to be made by a claims officer on the application for compensation, but any such direction must be in accordance with the relevant provisions of the Criminal Injuries Compensation Scheme. Where they are of the opinion that the appeal was frivolous or vexatious, the adjudicators may reduce the amount of compensation to be awarded by such amount as they consider appropriate. The appellant and the Authority will be informed of the adjudicators' determination of the appeal and the reasons for it, normally at the end of the hearing, but otherwise by written notification as soon as is practicable thereafter<sup>8</sup>.

Adjudicators may determine an appeal on the available evidence in the absence of an appellant when they are satisfied that:

- 2673 (1) he has so requested, or agreed<sup>9</sup>;
- 2674 (2) he has failed to attend a hearing and has given no reasonable excuse for his non-attendance<sup>10</sup>;
- 2675 (3) he is at the time of the hearing detained in custody or in hospital and is likely to remain so for a period of at least six months<sup>11</sup>; or
- 2676 (4) he is not living in Great Britain<sup>12</sup>; and it would not be against the interests of justice to do so<sup>13</sup>.

It will be open to the appellant to bring a friend or legal adviser to assist in presenting his case at the hearing, but the costs of representation will not be met by the Authority or the Criminal Injuries Compensation Appeals Panel. The adjudicators may, however, direct the Panel to meet reasonable expenses incurred by the appellant and any person who attends to give evidence at the hearing: Criminal Injuries Compensation Scheme (2001) PARA 74. The adjudicators will not be bound by any rules of evidence which may prevent a court from admitting any document or other matter or statement in evidence. The appellant, the claims officer presenting the appeal and the adjudicators may call witnesses to give evidence and may cross-examine them: Criminal Injuries Compensation Scheme (2001) PARA 75.

7 Criminal Injuries Compensation Scheme (2001) PARA 76. The Panel may, however, subject to the consent of the appellant, give permission for the hearing to be attended by observers such as representatives of the press, radio and television: Criminal Injuries Compensation Scheme (2001) PARA 76. Any such permission will be subject to written undertakings being given:

287 (1) that the identity of the appellant and of any other persons appearing at the hearing or referred to during the appeal will be kept confidential and will not be disclosed in any account of the proceedings which is broadcast or in any way published without that person's consent (Criminal Injuries Compensation Scheme (2001) PARA 76(a)); and 288 (2) that no material will be disclosed or in any other way published from which those identities could be discovered without the consent of the subject (Criminal Injuries Compensation Scheme (2001) PARA 76(b)).

2052. Rehearing of appeals.

Where an appeal is determined in the appellant's absence, he may apply to the Criminal Injuries Compensation Appeals Panel<sup>1</sup> in writing for his appeal to be reheard, giving the reasons for his non-attendance or otherwise why it should be reheard. Any such application must be received by the Panel within 30 days<sup>2</sup> of the date of notification to the appellant of the outcome of the hearing which he did not attend. The Panel will send a copy of the application to the Criminal Injuries Compensation Authority<sup>3</sup>.

Where a member of the staff of the Panel considers that there are good reasons for an appeal determined in the appellant's absence to be reheard, he will refer it for a rehearing. Where he does not refer it for a rehearing, he will refer the application to the Chairman of the Panel or to another adjudicator nominated by the Chairman to decide such applications, and a decision by the adjudicator concerned not to rehear the appeal will be final. Written notification of the decision on the application for a rehearing will be sent to the appellant and to the Authority, giving reasons for the decision where the application is refused<sup>4</sup>.

Where an appeal is to be reheard, any adjudicator or adjudicators who determined the appeal originally will not take part in the rehearing<sup>5</sup>.

1 See PARA 2034 ante.

2 A member of the staff of the Panel may waive the time limit in Criminal Injuries Compensation Scheme (2001) PARA 79 where he considers that it would be in the interests of justice to do so. Where he does not waive the time limit, he will refer the application to the Chairman of the Panel or to another adjudicator nominated by the Chairman to decide such applications, and a decision by the adjudicator concerned not to waive the time limit will be final. Written notification of the waiver decision will be sent to the appellant and to the Authority, giving reasons for the decision where the time limit is not waived: Criminal Injuries Compensation Scheme (2001) PARA 80.

COMPENSATION, REWARDS AND COSTS/(1) THE CRIMINAL INJURIES COMPENSATION SCHEME/2053. Recovery of criminal injuries compensation from offenders.

2053. Recovery of criminal injuries compensation from offenders.

As from a day to be appointed, the following provisions have effect<sup>1</sup>. The Secretary of State may, by regulations made by statutory instrument, make provision for the recovery from an appropriate person of an amount equal to all or part of the compensation paid in respect of a criminal injury<sup>2</sup>. An appropriate person is a person who has been convicted of an offence in respect of the criminal injury<sup>3</sup>. The amount recoverable from a person under the regulations is to be determined by reference only to the extent to which the criminal injury is directly attributable to an offence of which he has been convicted<sup>4</sup>. The regulations may confer functions in respect of recovery on: (1) claims officers<sup>5</sup>; (2) if a Scheme manager<sup>6</sup> has been appointed, persons appointed<sup>7</sup> by the Scheme manager<sup>8</sup>.

If, under regulations so made<sup>9</sup>, an amount has been determined as recoverable from a person, he must be given a notice (a 'recovery notice') in accordance with the regulations which requires him to pay that amount, and contains the specified information<sup>10</sup>.

Regulations<sup>11</sup> must include provision for the review, in such circumstances as may be prescribed by the regulations, of a determination that an amount is recoverable from a person, and of the amount determined as recoverable from a person<sup>12</sup>.

A person from whom an amount has been determined as recoverable under the regulations may seek such a review only on the grounds:

- 2677 (a) that he has not been convicted of an offence to which the injury is directly attributable<sup>13</sup>;
- 2678 (b) that the compensation paid was not determined in accordance with the Scheme<sup>14</sup>;
- 2679 (c) that the amount determined as recoverable from him was not determined in accordance with the regulations<sup>15</sup>.

Any such review must be conducted by a person other than the person who made the determination under review<sup>16</sup>.

An amount determined as recoverable from a person under the regulations<sup>17</sup> is recoverable from him as a debt due to the Crown if (but only if):

- 2680 (i) he has been given a recovery notice<sup>18</sup>; and
- 2681 (ii) he has failed to pay the amount in accordance with the notice<sup>19</sup>.

In any proceedings for the recovery of the amount from a person<sup>20</sup>, it is a defence for the person to show: (A) that he has not been convicted of an offence to which the injury is directly attributable<sup>21</sup>; (B) that the compensation paid was not determined in accordance with the Scheme<sup>22</sup>; or (C) that the amount determined as recoverable from him was not determined in accordance with the regulations<sup>23</sup>.

<sup>1</sup> The Criminal Injuries Compensation Act 1995 ss 7A-7D (see the text and notes 2-23 infra) are prospectively added by the Domestic Violence, Crime and Victims Act 2004 s 57(1), (2) and are to be brought into force by order made by the Secretary of State under s 60 of that Act as from a day to be appointed. At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed.

For the meaning of 'criminal injury' see the Criminal Injuries Compensation Scheme (2001) PARA 8; and PARA 2035 ante (definition applied by the Criminal Injuries Compensation Act 1995 s 3(4)). The regulations may not authorise the recovery of an amount in respect of compensation from a person to the extent that the compensation has been repaid in accordance with the Scheme: s 7A(5) (as so added). No regulations under s 7A(1) (as added) or order under s 7B(3) (as added) (see note 10 infra) may be made unless a draft of the regulations or order has been laid before Parliament and approved by a resolution of each House: s 11(8A) (added by the Domestic Violence, Crime and Victims Act 2004 s 57(1), (4)).

290 (2) the basis on which the amount has been determined (s 7B(2)(b) (as so added));

291 (3) the way in which and the date before which the amount is required to be paid (s 7B(2)(c) (as so added));

292 (4) the means by which the amount may be recovered if it is not paid in accordance with the notice (s 7B(2)(d) (as so added));

293 (5) the grounds on which and the procedure by means of which he may seek a review if he objects to:

6. (a) the determination that an amount is recoverable from him (s 7B(2)(e)(i) (as so added));

But the person conducting any such review may increase the amount determined as recoverable if

(but only if) it appears to that person that the interests of justice require the amount to be increased: s 7C(5) (as so added).

19     Ibid s 7D(1)(b) (as added: see note 1 supra).

20     In any such proceedings, except for the purposes of head (B) in the text, no question may be raised or finding made as to the amount that was, or ought to have been, the subject of an award: ibid s 7D(3) (as added: see note 1 supra). For the purposes of the Limitation Act 1980 s 9 (time limit for actions for sums recoverable by statute to run from date on which cause of action accrued: see LIMITATION PERIODS vol 68 (2008) PARA 952) the cause of action to recover that amount is taken to have accrued on the date on which the compensation was paid, or, if later, on the date on which a person from whom an amount is sought to be recovered was convicted of an offence to which the injury is directly attributable: s 7D(4) (as so added). If that person is convicted of more than one such offence and the convictions are made on different dates, the reference to the date on which he was convicted of such an offence is taken to be a reference to the earlier or earliest (as the case may be) of the dates on which he was convicted of such an offence: s 7D(5) (as so added).

COMPENSATION, REWARDS AND COSTS/(2) COMPENSATION FOR MISCARRIAGES OF JUSTICE/2055. Compensation for miscarriages of justice.

(2) COMPENSATION FOR MISCARRIAGES OF JUSTICE

2055. Compensation for miscarriages of justice.

When a person<sup>1</sup> has been convicted of a criminal offence and when subsequently his conviction has been reversed<sup>2</sup> or he has been pardoned<sup>3</sup> on the ground that<sup>4</sup> a new or newly discovered fact<sup>5</sup> shows beyond reasonable doubt that there has been a miscarriage of justice<sup>6</sup>, the Secretary of State must pay compensation for the miscarriage of justice to the person who has suffered punishment<sup>7</sup> as a result of such conviction or, if he is dead, to his personal representatives, unless the non-disclosure of the unknown fact was wholly or partly attributable to the person convicted<sup>8</sup>. No such payment may be made, however, unless an application for such compensation has been made to the Secretary of State<sup>9</sup>; and the question whether there is a right to compensation must be determined by the Secretary of State<sup>10</sup>.

If the Secretary of State determines that there is a right to such compensation, the amount of the compensation must be assessed<sup>11</sup> by an assessor<sup>12</sup> appointed by him<sup>13</sup>. In assessing so much of any compensation payable to or in respect of a person as is attributable to suffering, harm to reputation or similar damage, the assessor must have regard in particular to:

- 2682 (1) the seriousness of the offence of which the person was convicted and the severity of the punishment resulting from the conviction<sup>14</sup>;
- 2683 (2) the conduct of the investigation and prosecution of the offence<sup>15</sup>; and
- 2684 (3) any other convictions of the person and any punishment resulting from them<sup>16</sup>.

1 le a natural person, and not a company: R v Secretary of State for the Home Department, ex p Atlantic Commercial Ltd [1997] BCC 692, [1997] COD 381.

2 For these purposes, 'reversed' is to be construed as referring to a conviction having been quashed: (1) on an appeal out of time; (2) on a reference under the Criminal Appeal Act 1995 (see PARA 1963 et seq ante); (3) on an appeal under the Terrorism Act 2000 s 7 (see PARA 386 ante); or (4) on an appeal under the Prevention of Terrorism Act 2005 s 12 (see SENTENCING AND DISPOSITION OF OFFENDERS vol 92 (2010) PARA 524): Criminal Justice Act 1988 s 133(5) (amended by the Criminal Appeal Act 1995 s 29, Sch 2 para 16(4), Sch 3; the Terrorism Act 2000 s 7(8); and the Prevention of Terrorism Act 2005 s 12(8)). For these purposes, a conviction is not 'quashed' when a lesser verdict is substituted on appeal; 'quashed' requires that the appeal must have been allowed in full: R (on the application of Christofides) v Secretary of State for the Home Department [2002] EWHC 1083 (Admin), [2002] 1 WLR 2769, DC.

3 As to pardons see PARAS 1271, 1978 ante. These provisions do not apply to a pardon granted during the course of a trial; as to compensation in such a case see note 5 infra.

4 'On the ground that' means that the new or newly discovered fact must be the principal, if not the only, reason for the quashing of a conviction; it is not enough that such a fact made some contribution to the quashing of that conviction: R (on the application of Murphy) v Secretary of State for the Home Department, R (on the application of Brannan) v Secretary of State for the Home Department [2005] EWHC 140 (Admin), [2005] 2 All ER 763, [2005] 1 WLR 3516, DC.

5 Neither judicial error, nor the subsequent declaration as invalid of the byelaws under which a person has been convicted and imprisoned, can amount to a 'new fact or newly discovered fact': R v Secretary of State for the Home Department, ex p Bateman and Howse (1994) 7 Admin LR 175, CA.

The Criminal Justice Act 1988 s 133 (as amended) is concerned only with facts which emerge after the ordinary appellate process has been exhausted. Where new evidence results in a finding of fact, and the fact so found can properly be described as a new or newly discovered fact, the present condition in s 133 (as amended) can be met even if the evidence and resulting finding of fact relate to a matter that was in issue at trial; but the disclosure of a fact between trial and the determination of an appeal brought within the normal time limit cannot engage the operation of s 133 (as amended): R (on the application of Murphy) v Secretary of State for the Home Department, R (on the application of Brannan) v Secretary of State for the Home Department [2005] EWHC 140 (Admin), [2005] 2 All ER 763, [2005] 1 WLR 3516, DC.

6 'Miscarriage of justice' includes cases where a person is convicted who is demonstrably innocent, and may also include cases where a person should not have been convicted due to a failure in the trial process, irrespective of whether he was guilty: R (on the application of Mullen) v Secretary of State for the Home Department [2004] UKHL 18, [2005] 1 AC 1, [2004] 3 All ER 65 (no entitlement to compensation arising from unlawful deportation to United Kingdom prior to commencement of trial process as it was an abuse of executive power rather than a failure in the trial process).

7 For these purposes, a person suffers punishment as a result of a conviction when sentence is passed on him for the offence of which he was convicted: Criminal Justice Act 1988 s 133(6).

8 Ibid s 133(1). Section 133 (as amended) was enacted to incorporate into domestic law the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights art 14(6). The discretionary scheme of ex gratia payments to persons who had spent a period in custody in circumstances which do not fall within the Criminal Justice Act 1988 s 133(1) no longer exists: see Home Office Press Release Home Secretary Outlines Changes to System for Compensating Miscarriages of Justice (19 April 2006).

9 Criminal Justice Act 1988 s 133(2).

11 The assessment must be by the application of all relevant common law principles governing the assessment of damages, whenever they are clear and analogous: R (on the application of O'Brien) v Independent Assessor, R (on the application of Hickey (Vincent)) v Independent Assessor, R (on the application of Hickey (Michael)) v Independent Assessor [2003] EWHC 855 (Admin), [2003] 26 LS Gaz R 36, [2003] NLJR 668.

A person holds<sup>1</sup> and vacates<sup>2</sup> office as an assessor in accordance with the terms of his appointment<sup>3</sup>; but he may at any time resign his office as an assessor by giving notice in writing to that effect to the Secretary of State<sup>4</sup>. The Secretary of State may at any time remove a person from office as an assessor if satisfied that:

- 2685 (1) he has been convicted of a criminal offence<sup>5</sup>;
- 2686 (2) he has become bankrupt or has had his estate sequestrated or has made an arrangement with, or granted a trust deed for, his creditors<sup>6</sup>;
- 2687 (3) he is incapacitated by physical or mental illness<sup>7</sup>; or

An assessor is paid such remuneration and allowances as the Secretary of State may, with the approval of the Treasury, determine<sup>9</sup>.

1 A person may only be appointed to be an assessor for the purposes of the Criminal Justice Act 1988 s 133 (as amended) (see PARA 2055 ante) if he is:

At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed.

3 Ibid Sch 12 para 2.

4 Ibid Sch 12 para 4.

5 Ibid Sch 12 para 5(a). The exercise of power conferred by Sch 12 para 5 is subject to the following provisions:

COMPENSATION, REWARDS AND COSTS/(4) COSTS AND ALLOWANCES/(i) Award of Costs/A. REGULATIONS/2058. Lord Chancellor's power to make regulations.

(4) COSTS AND ALLOWANCES

(i) Award of Costs

A. REGULATIONS

2058. Lord Chancellor's power to make regulations.

The Lord Chancellor may by regulations<sup>1</sup> make provision empowering magistrates' courts, the Crown Court and the Court of Appeal, in any case where the court is satisfied that one party to criminal proceedings<sup>2</sup> has incurred costs as a result of an unnecessary or improper<sup>3</sup> act or omission by, or on behalf of, another party to the proceedings, to make an order as to the payment of those costs<sup>4</sup>.

Regulations so made may, in particular:

- 2689 (1) allow the making of such an order at any time during the proceedings<sup>5</sup>;
- 2690 (2) make provision as to the account to be taken, in making such an order, of any other order as to costs which has been made in respect of the proceedings or any grant of a right to representation funded by the Legal Services Commission as part of the Criminal Defence Service<sup>6</sup>;
- 2691 (3) make provision as to the account to be taken of any such order in the making of any other order as to costs in respect of the proceedings<sup>7</sup>; and
- 2692 (4) contain provisions similar to the statutory provisions relating to the restrictions<sup>8</sup> on orders for costs in a magistrates' court: (a) where the sum ordered to be paid as a fine, penalty, forfeiture or compensation does not exceed £5; and (b) in the case of a person under the age of 18<sup>9</sup>.

The Lord Chancellor may by regulations provide that any provision which would not otherwise apply in relation to any category of proceedings in which an offender is before a magistrates' court or the Crown Court is to apply in relation to proceedings of that category, subject to any specified modifications<sup>10</sup>.

The Lord Chancellor may make regulations<sup>11</sup> for carrying the statutory provisions relating to costs<sup>12</sup> into effect and the regulations may, in particular, make provision as to:

- 2693 (i) the scales or rates of payments of any costs payable out of central funds<sup>13</sup> in pursuance of any costs order<sup>14</sup>, the circumstances in which and the conditions under which such costs may be allowed and paid and the expenses which may be included in such costs<sup>15</sup>; and
- 2694 (ii) the review, as respects costs payable out of central funds in pursuance of any costs order, of any decision on taxation, or determination of the amount, of the costs<sup>16</sup>; and any statutory provision<sup>17</sup> enabling any sum to be paid out of central funds has effect subject to any such regulations<sup>18</sup>.

The Lord Chancellor may by regulations make provision for the recovery of sums paid by the Legal Services Commission or out of central funds in cases where:

- 2695 (A) a costs order has been made against a person; and
- 2696 (B) the person in whose favour the order was made is a legally assisted person<sup>19</sup> or a person in whose favour a defendant's costs order<sup>20</sup> or, as the case may be, an order for the payment of prosecution costs<sup>21</sup> has been made<sup>22</sup>.

1 In exercise of such power the Lord Chancellor has made the Costs in Criminal Cases (General) Regulations 1986, SI 1986/1335 (as amended).

2 In order for proceedings to constitute criminal proceedings, they must involve a formal accusation that a defendant is in breach of the criminal law and be proceedings which may lead to his conviction and condemnation: Customs and Excise Comrs v City of London Magistrates' Court [2000] 4 All ER 763, [2000] 2 Cr App Rep 348, DC.

3 See DPP v Denning [1991] 2 QB 532, [1991] 3 All ER 439, DC.

4 Prosecution of Offences Act 1985 s 19(1). Before making any regulations under ss 19(1), 19A (as added) (see PARA 2060 post) or s 19B (as added) (see PARA 2061 post) which affect the procedure of any court, the Lord Chancellor must, so far as is reasonably practicable, consult any rule committee by whom, or on whose advice, rules of procedure for the court may be made or whose concurrence is required to any such rules: s 20(7) (amended by the Courts Act 2003 s 109(1), Sch 8 para 288(1), (4)). Any regulation under the Prosecution of Offences Act 1985 Pt II (ss 16-21) (as amended) may contain such incidental and supplemental and transitional provisions as the Lord Chancellor considers appropriate: s 20(6) (amended by the Courts Act 2003 Sch 8 para 288(1), (3)).

5 Prosecution of Offences Act 1985 s 19(2)(a).

6 Ibid s 19(2)(b) (amended by the Legal Aid Act 1988 s 45, Sch 6; and the Access to Justice Act 1999 s 24, Sch 4 paras 27, 28). As to the grant of a right to representation under the Legal Aid Act 1988 see LEGAL AID.

7 Prosecution of Offences Act 1985 s 19(2)(c).

8 Ie the provisions in ibid ss 18(4), (5): see PARA 2063 post.

9 Ibid s 19(2)(d).

10 Ibid s 19(5). See also s 20(6); and note 4 supra.

11 See note 1 supra.

12 Ie the Prosecution of Offences Act 1985 Pt II (as amended).

13 'Central funds', in an enactment providing in relation to England and Wales for the payment of costs out of central funds, means money provided by Parliament: Interpretation Act 1978 s 5, Sch 1.

14 For these purposes, 'costs order' means: (1) an order made under or by virtue of the Prosecution of Offences Act 1985 Pt II (as amended) for payment to be made out of central funds or by any person; or (2) an order made in a criminal case by the House of Lords for the payment of costs by a party to proceedings: s 20(8) (amended by the Courts Act 2003 Sch 8 para 288(1), (5)).

17 Ie any provision made by or under ibid Pt II (as amended).

18 Ibid s 20(1). Regulations made under s 20(1) may provide that rates or scales of allowances payable out of central funds under a costs order is to be determined by the Lord Chancellor with the consent of the Treasury: s 20(3). See also s 20(6); and note 4 supra.

19 For these purposes, 'legally assisted person', in relation to any proceedings, means a person to whom a right to representation funded by the Legal Services Commission as part of the Criminal Defence Service has been granted for the purposes of the proceedings: ibid s 21(1) (substituted by the Legal Aid Act 1988 Sch 5 para 14; and amended by the Access to Justice Act 1999 s 24, Sch 4 paras 27, 30(1), (2)).

Where one party to any proceedings is a legally assisted person, then: (1) for the purposes of the Prosecution of Offences Act 1985 s 16 (as amended) (see PARA 2059 post), s 17 (see PARA 2062 post), his costs are to be taken not to include the cost of representation funded for him by the Legal Services Commission as part of the Criminal Defence Service (see LEGAL AID vol 65 (2008) PARAS 17 et seq, 120 et seq); and (2) for the purposes of the Prosecution of Offences Act 1985 s 18 (as amended) (see PARA 2063 post), s 19 (as amended), s 19A (as added), s 19B (as added) and s 20 (as amended) (see PARA 2060 post), his costs are to be taken to include the cost of representation funded for him by the Legal Services Commission as part of the Criminal Defence Service: Prosecution of Offences Act 1985 s 21(4A) (added by the Legal Aid Act 1988 s 45(1), (3), Sch 5 para 15; and amended by the Access to Justice Act 1999 Sch 4 paras 27, 30(1), (3)).

20 For the meaning of 'defendant's costs order' see PARA 2059 note 3 post.

21 It is an order under the Prosecution of Offences Act 1985 s 17: see PARA 2062 post.

22 Ibid s 20(2) (amended by the Legal Aid Act 1988 s 45(1), (3), Sch 5 para 13; the Courts and Legal Services Act 1990 s 125(3), Sch 18 para 53; and the Access to Justice Act 1999 Sch 4 paras 27, 29). Regulations made under the Prosecution of Offences Act 1985 s 20(2) (as amended) may, in particular: (1) require the person mentioned in s 20(2)(a) (see head (A) in the text) to pay sums due under the costs order in accordance with directions given by the Lord Chancellor (either generally or in respect of the particular case); and (2) enable the Lord Chancellor to enforce those directions in cases to which they apply: s 20(4).

NOTE 6--Legal Aid Act 1988 repealed: Access to Justice Act 1999 Sch 15 Pt I. See LEGAL AID vol 65 (2008) PARA 2 et seq.

Halsbury's Laws of England/CRIMINAL LAW, EVIDENCE AND PROCEDURE (VOLUME 11(1) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1-620; VOLUME 11(2) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 621-1049; VOLUME 11(3) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1050-1557; VOLUME 11(4) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1558-2180)/23.

COMPENSATION, REWARDS AND COSTS/(4) COSTS AND ALLOWANCES/(i) Award of Costs/B. COST ORDERS/2059. Award out of central funds; defence costs.

B. COST ORDERS

2059. Award out of central funds; defence costs.

An order in favour of the defendant<sup>1</sup> for a payment to be made out of central funds in respect of his costs<sup>2</sup> (a 'defendant's costs order')<sup>3</sup> may be made<sup>4</sup>:

2697 (1) by a magistrates' court<sup>5</sup> where:

605

- 88. (a) an information laid<sup>6</sup> before a justice of the peace for any area, charging any person with an offence, is not proceeded with<sup>7</sup>;
- 89. (b) the court inquiring into an indictable offence as examining justices determines not to commit the defendant for trial<sup>8</sup>;
- 90. (c) the court dealing summarily with an offence dismisses the information<sup>9</sup>;

2698 (2) by the Crown Court<sup>10</sup> where:

607

- 91. (a) any person is not tried for an offence for which he has been indicted or committed or sent for trial<sup>11</sup>;
- 92. (b) a notice of transfer is given under a relevant transfer provision<sup>12</sup> but a person in relation to whose case it is given is not tried on a charge to which it relates<sup>13</sup>;
- 93. (c) any person is tried on indictment and acquitted on any count in the indictment<sup>14</sup>; or
- 94. (d) a person convicted of an offence before a magistrates' court appeals to the Crown Court against conviction or sentence<sup>15</sup> and, in consequence of the decision on appeal, his conviction is set aside or a less severe punishment is awarded<sup>16</sup>;

2699 (3) by the High Court where any proceedings in a criminal cause or matter are determined before it<sup>17</sup>;

2700 (4) by the Court of Appeal<sup>18</sup> where:

- 95. (a) it allows an appeal<sup>19</sup> against conviction, a verdict of not guilty by reason of insanity<sup>20</sup> or a finding<sup>21</sup> that the appellant is under disability, or that he did the act or made the omission charged against him<sup>22</sup>;
- 96. (b) it directs<sup>23</sup> the entry of a judgment and verdict of acquittal<sup>24</sup>;
- 97. (c) on an appeal against conviction it substitutes a verdict of guilty of another offence; in a case where a special verdict has been found, it orders a different conclusion on the effect of that verdict to be recorded; or it is of the opinion<sup>25</sup> that the case is one where a finding of insanity or unfitness to plead should be substituted<sup>26</sup>;
- 98. (d) on an appeal against sentence<sup>27</sup>, it exercises its power<sup>28</sup> to sentence the appellant differently<sup>29</sup>;

99. (e) it allows, to any extent, an appeal<sup>30</sup> against an order made in cases of insanity or unfitness to plead<sup>31</sup>;
100. (f) it determines<sup>32</sup> an application for leave to appeal to the House of Lords<sup>33</sup>;
101. (g) the defendant appeals against an order or ruling<sup>34</sup> at a preparatory hearing or under the provisions<sup>35</sup> relating to prosecution appeals<sup>36</sup>;
- 610
2701 (5) by the House of Lords where:
- 611
102. (a) it determines an appeal, or application for leave to appeal, from the High Court in a criminal cause or matter<sup>37</sup>;
103. (b) it determines<sup>38</sup> an appeal, or application for leave to appeal, from the Court of Appeal<sup>39</sup>.

Where the court makes a defendant's costs order but is of the opinion that there are circumstances which make it inappropriate that the person in whose favour the order is made should recover the full amount<sup>40</sup>, the court must assess what amount would, in its opinion, be just and reasonable, and specify that amount in the order<sup>41</sup>.

The amount to be paid out of central funds in pursuance of a defendant's costs order must be specified in the order, in any case where the court considers it appropriate for the amount to be so specified and the person in whose favour the order is made agrees the amount; and in any other case, must be determined in accordance with regulations made by the Lord Chancellor<sup>42</sup>.

Where a person ordered to be retried is acquitted at his re-trial, the costs which may be ordered to be paid out of central funds include any costs which, at the original trial, could have been ordered to be so paid if he had been acquitted, and, if no such order was made in respect of his expenses on appeal, any sums for the payment of which such an order could have been made<sup>43</sup>.

A court should give reasons for declining to make a defendant's costs order<sup>44</sup>.

1 In R v Crown Court at Preston, ex p Lancashire County Council, R v Crown Court at Burnley, ex p Lancashire County Council [1998] 3 All ER 765, [1999] 1 WLR 142, DC, a decision under the Prosecution of Offences Act 1985 s 16(5)(a) (see note 17 infra), it was held that, although a local authority in whose care a defendant child was, was not the defendant, it was to be treated as the defendant for these purposes. 'Defendant' includes 'appellant' (as the context requires); and 'defendant' and 'appellant' include a person approved under the Criminal Appeal Act 1968 s 44A (as added) (see PARA 1977 ante): see the Prosecution of Offences Act 1985 s 21(1) (added by the Criminal Appeal Act 1995 s 29(1), Sch 2 para 15).

2 For the purposes of the Prosecution of Offences Act 1985 s 16 (as amended) (see the text and notes 3-43 infra), s 17 (see PARA 2062 post), the costs of any party to proceedings are to be taken to include the expense of compensating any witness for the expenses, trouble or loss of time properly incurred in or incidental to his attendance: s 21(4). For these purposes, 'witness' means any person properly attending to give evidence, whether or not he gives evidence or is called at the instance of one of the parties or of the court, but does not include a person attending as a witness to character only unless the court has certified that the interests of justice required his attendance: s 21(1). See also s 21(4A) (as added and amended); and PARA 2058 note 19 ante.

Where an interpreter is required because of the defendant's lack of English: (1) in any proceedings in a criminal cause or matter; (2) where an information charging the defendant with an offence is laid before a justice of the peace but not proceeded with and the expenses are incurred on the employment of an interpreter for the proceedings on the information; or (3) where the defendant is committed or sent for trial but not tried and the expenses are incurred on the employment of an interpreter for the proceedings in the Crown Court, the expenses properly incurred on his employment may not be treated as costs of any party to the proceedings: s 21(5), (6) (amended by the Access to Justice Act 1999 s 106, Sch 15, Pt V(3)). The Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 41, Sch 3 para 57(1), (4) amends the Prosecution of Offences Act 1985 s 21(5), (6) so as to refer to persons being sent rather than committed for trial, but at the date at which this volume states the law this amendment only has effect in relation to cases sent for trial under the Crime and Disorder Act 1998 s 51 or s 51A(3)(d) (as added) (see PARAS 1132-1133 ante).

Except as provided by or under the Prosecution of Offences Act 1985 Pt II (ss 16-21) (as amended), no costs may be allowed on the hearing or determination of, or of any proceedings preliminary or incidental to, an appeal to the Court of Appeal under the Criminal Appeal Act 1968 Pt I (ss 1-32) (as amended) (see PARA 1837 et seq ante): Prosecution of Offences Act 1985 s 21(2).

No interest is payable on costs awarded from central funds: Westminster City Council v Wingrove [1991] 1 QB 652, 92 Cr App Rep 179, DC.

Further provisions relating to a defendant's costs order are set out in PARAS 2067-2073 post.

3 A defendant's costs order is an order for the payment out of central funds, to the person in whose favour the order is made, of such amount as the court considers reasonably sufficient to compensate him for any expenses properly incurred by him in the proceedings: Prosecution of Offences Act 1985 ss 16(6), 21(1). For these purposes, 'proceedings' includes proceedings in any court below and, in relation to the determination of an appeal by any court, any application made to that court for leave to bring the appeal: s 21(1). Where a court orders that costs of a defendant or an appellant should be paid from central funds, the order will be for such amount as the court considers sufficient reasonably to compensate the party for expenses incurred by him in the proceedings. This will include the costs incurred in the proceedings in the lower courts unless for good reason the court directs that such costs are not included in the order, but it cannot include expenses incurred which do not directly relate to the proceedings themselves, such as loss of earnings. Where the party in whose favour the costs order is made is Criminal Defence Service funded he will only recover his personal costs: Practice Direction (Costs: Criminal Proceedings) [2004] 2 All ER 1070, [2004] 2 Cr App Rep 395 at I.3.1, CA. Costs incurred for a solicitor's attendance when the defendant was on bail before being charged are expenses incurred in the proceedings: R (on the application of Hale) v North Sefton Justices [2002] EWHC 257 (Admin), [2002] All ER (D) 10 (Jan), (2002) Times 29 January, DC.

For the meaning of 'central funds' see PARA 2058 note 13 ante.

The Prosecution of Offences Act 1985 s 16(6) has effect, in relation to any case falling within s 16(1)(a) or s 16(2)(a) (see heads (1)(a), (2)(a) in the text), as if for the words 'in the proceedings' there were substituted the words 'in or about the defence': s 16(10).

A solicitor's fees and expenses incurred in acting for himself in defending a criminal charge before a magistrates' court are expenses for these purposes and may be paid out of central funds: R v Stafford, Stone and Eccleshall Magistrates' Court, ex p Robinson [1988] 1 All ER 430, [1987] 1 WLR 369, DC (decided under the Costs in Criminal Cases Act 1973 s 1(3) (repealed)).

Costs are incurred by a defendant if he, as a client, is personally responsible and liable for those costs, even though they are in fact paid by a third party, such as his employer, and may be paid out of central funds (R v Miller (Raymond) [1983] 3 All ER 186, 78 Cr App Rep 71 (decided under the Costs in Criminal Cases Act 1973 s 3(3)(a) (repealed))), or even though the defendant knew, when forming his contract with his solicitors, that he would be unlikely to be able to pay them (R (on the application of McCormick) v Liverpool City Magistrates' Court; R (on the application of L) v Liverpool City Magistrates' Court [2001] 2 All ER 705, 165 JP 3, DC). Payment to an informer by an appellant to support his appeal is not included in the phrase 'properly incurred by' the applicant: R v Whitby (1977) 65 Cr App Rep 257, CA (decided under the Costs in Criminal Cases Act 1973 s 7 (repealed)).

4 Prosecution of Offences Act 1985 s 16(1).

5 It is not a proper exercise of discretion where the justices' approach is not to award costs against the police: R v Lytham Justices, ex p Carter [1975] Crim LR 225, DC; see also Mercer v Oldham [1984] Crim LR 232, DC (both applying David v Metropolitan Police Comr [1962] 2 QB 135, [1962] 1 All ER 491n, DC). The magistrates cannot delegate this function to a clerk: Bunston v Rawlings [1982] 2 All ER 697, 75 Cr App Rep 40, DC (decided under the Costs in Criminal Cases Act 1973 s 2 (repealed)). Such an award of costs out of central funds should normally be made whether or not an order for costs between the parties is made, unless there are positive reasons for not doing so, as for example, where the defendant's own conduct has brought suspicion on himself and has misled the prosecution into thinking that the case against him is stronger than it is: Practice Direction (Costs: Criminal Proceedings) [2004] 2 All ER 1070, [2004] 2 Cr App Rep 395 at II.1.1, CA. See also R v Dengie and Maldon Justices, ex p Saunders and Southend Transport Ltd (1988) 152 JP 539, DC. Also see R v Spens (No 2) [1992] NIJR 528, Crown Ct (fact that defendant had brought prosecution on himself a reason for not making order, as to which see also Mooney v Cardiff Magistrates' Court (1999) 164 JP 220, DC; R v South West Surrey Justices, ex p James [2000] Crim LR 690, DC; R v Stewart (Christopher) [2004] 3 Costs LR 501).

6 As from a day to be appointed, any reference (however expressed) in any enactment which is or includes a reference to an information within the meaning of the Magistrates' Courts Act 1980 s 1 (or to the laying of such an information) is to be read as including a reference to a written charge (or to the issue of a written charge): Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 30(5)(a) (not yet in force): see MAGISTRATES vol 29(2) (Reissue) PARA 681. At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed.

Costs can be ordered in favour of the defendant where the magistrates' court has no jurisdiction to proceed because the information was laid outside the limitation period under the Magistrates' Courts Act 1980 s 127(1)

(see MAGISTRATES vol 29(2) (Reissue) PARA 589); and information is laid when the contents of the information and the fact that the prosecutor wished to pursue criminal process are brought to the attention of a magistrate or justices' clerk as part of the prosecution process: Patel and Patel v Blakey [1988] RTR 65, DC (decided under the Costs in Criminal Cases Act 1973 s 12(3) (repealed)). As to the laying of informations see PARA 912 ante.

7 Prosecution of Offences Act 1985 s 16(1)(a). In a case falling within head (1)(a) in the text the court is a magistrates' court for the area in question: s 16(1). Where an information is withdrawn, an application for costs may be made to a magistrates' court for the same area as that in which the information was laid either on the date on which the proceedings were withdrawn or at a later date: R v Bolton Justices, ex p Wildish (1982) 147 JP 309, DC.

8 Prosecution of Offences Act 1985 s 16(1)(b). As from a day to be appointed, s 16(1)(b) is repealed by the Criminal Justice Act 2003 ss 41, 332, Sch 3 para 57(1), (3), Sch 37 Pt 4). At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed.

9 Prosecution of Offences Act 1985 s 16(1)(c). The power in head (1)(c) in the text confers a wide discretion with which, unless not exercised judicially, the High Court will not interfere: R v Scunthorpe Justices, ex p Holbrey (1985) Times, 24 May, DC (decided under the Costs in Criminal Cases Act 1973 s 2(1) (repealed)). As to assessment of costs see R v Dudley Magistrates' Court, ex p Power City Stores Ltd (1990) 154 JP 654, Times, 18 January, CA; R v Leeds Magistrates' Court, ex p Castle [1991] Crim LR 770, DC; R (on the application of Hale) v North Sefton Justices [2002] EWHC 257 (Admin), [2002] All ER (D) 10 (Jan), (2002) Times, 29 January, DC.

Any magistrates' court has jurisdiction to make an order under the Prosecution of Offences Act 1985 s 16(1)(c), and not only the bench of magistrates which dismissed the information; an order does not have to be made in a timely manner: R v Liverpool Magistrates' Court, ex p Abiaka (1999) 163 JP 497, DC. An order can be made under the Prosecution of Offences Act 1985 s 16(1)(c) where information is dismissed on the prosecution offering no evidence against a defendant who has accepted a caution: R (on the application of Stoddart) v Oxford Magistrates' Court [2005] EWHC 2733 (Admin), 169 JP 683, [2005] All ER (D) 97 (Oct), DC.

The Prosecution of Offences Act 1985 s 16 (as amended) applies also to proceedings in a magistrates' court or the Crown Court in which it is alleged that an offender required to enter into a recognisance to keep the peace or be of good behaviour has failed to comply with a condition of that recognisance, as if that failure were an indictable offence: Costs in Criminal Cases (General) Regulations 1986, SI 1986/1335, reg 14(4).

10 See note 3 supra. Where a person is convicted of some count(s) in the indictment but acquitted on others, the court may exercise its discretion to make a defendant's costs order but may order that only part of the costs incurred be paid. Where the court considers that it would be inappropriate that the defendant recovers all the costs properly incurred, the amount must be specified in the order: Practice Direction (Costs: Criminal Proceedings) [2004] 2 All ER 1070, [2004] 2 Cr App Rep 395 at II.2.2, CA.

11 Prosecution of Offences Act 1985 s 16(2)(a). The Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 41, Sch 3 para 57(1), (3)(b)(i) amends the Prosecution of Offences Act 1985 s 16(2)(a) so as to refer to persons being sent rather than committed for trial, but at the date at which this volume states the law this amendment only has effect in relation to cases sent for trial under the Crime and Disorder Act 1998 s 51 or s 51A(3)(d) (as added) (see PARAS 1132-1133 ante). See note 14 infra.

12 For these purposes, 'relevant transfer provision' means the Criminal Justice Act 1987 s 4 (as amended; prospectively repealed) or the Criminal Justice Act 1991 s 53 (as amended; prospectively repealed) (see PARA 1105 ante): Prosecution of Offences Act 1985 s 16(12) (added by the Criminal Justice and Public Order Act 1994 s 168(1), Sch 9 para 25(b)). As from a day to be appointed, this definition of relevant transfer provision is repealed by the Criminal Justice Act 2003 Sch 3 para 57(1), (3)(c). At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed.

13 Prosecution of Offences Act 1985 s 16(2)(aa) (added by the Criminal Justice Act 1987 s 15, Sch 2 para 14). As from a day to be appointed, head (2)(b) in the text is repealed by the Criminal Justice Act 2003 ss 41, 331, Sch 3 para 57(1), (3)(b)(ii), Sch 37 Pt 4. At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed. See note 14 infra.

14 Prosecution of Offences Act 1985 s 16(2)(b). In respect of s 16(2)(a), (aa), (b) (s 16(2)(a) as amended; s 16(2)(aa) as added and amended) see also Practice Direction (Costs: Criminal Proceedings) [2004] 2 All ER 1070, [2004] 2 Cr App Rep 395 at II.2.1, CA which includes the same provision as that in Practice Direction (Costs: Criminal Proceedings) [2004] 2 All ER 1070, [2004] 2 Cr App Rep 395 at II.1.1, CA (see note 5 supra).

18 See Practice Direction (Costs: Criminal Proceedings) [2004] 2 All ER 1070, [2004] 2 Cr App Rep 395 at II.4.1-II.4.2, CA. In considering whether to make an order, the court will have in mind the principles applied by the Crown Court in relation to an acquitted defendant: Practice Direction (Costs: Criminal Proceedings) [2004] 2 All ER 1070, [2004] 2 Cr App Rep 395 at II.4.3, CA; as to these principles see Practice Direction (Costs: Criminal Proceedings) [2004] 2 All ER 1070, [2004] 2 Cr App Rep 395 at II.2.1-II.2.2, CA (see notes 5, 14 supra). Subject to rules of court made under the Supreme Court Act 1981 s 53(1) (power by rules to distribute business of Court of Appeal between its civil and criminal divisions: see COURTS vol 10 (Reissue) PARAS 639-640), the jurisdiction of the Court of Appeal under the Prosecution of Offences Act 1985 Pt II (ss 16-21) (as amended), or under regulations made under Pt II (as amended), must be exercised by the criminal division of that court; and references in Pt II (as amended) to the Court of Appeal are to be construed as references to that division: s 21(3). As from a day to be appointed the Supreme Court Act 1981 is renamed the Senior Courts Act 1981: see the Constitutional Reform Act 2005 s 59(5), Sch 11 para 1. At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed. The Court of Appeal, Civil Division, has no power to order the payment of costs out of central funds to solicitors representing defendants in criminal trials who have successfully appealed against orders that they pay prosecution costs: Steele Ford & Newton (a firm) v Crown Prosecution Service [1994] 1 AC 22, [1993] 2 All ER 769, HL.

At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed.

37 Prosecution of Offences Act 1985 s 16(5)(b) (prospectively amended: see note 33 supra). In the case of proceedings in the House of Lords, the costs payable to any person under s 16(5) or s 17(1) (see PARA 2062 post) must be determined by such officer as may be prescribed by order of the House of Lords: Costs in Criminal Cases (General) Regulations 1986, SI 1986/1335, reg 13(1). Subject to reg 13(1), the Costs in Criminal Cases (General) Regulations 1986 Pt III (regs 4-13) (costs out of central funds) do not apply to proceedings in the House of Lords: reg 13(2).

40 le the full amount mentioned in the Prosecution of Offences Act 1985 s 16(6): see note 3 supra.

41 Ibid s 16(7). Where the court is required to specify the amount of costs to be paid, it cannot delegate the decision. Wherever practicable, instructing solicitors should provide advocates with details of costs incurred at each stage of proceedings. The court may, however, require the appropriate officer of the court to make inquiries to inform the court as to the costs incurred and may adjourn the proceedings for inquiries to be made, if necessary: Practice Direction (Costs: Criminal Proceedings) [2004] 2 All ER 1070, [2004] 2 Cr App Rep 395 at I.4.3, CA.

Except where the court has directed in an order for costs from central funds that only a specified sum is to be paid, the amount of costs to be paid is determined by the appropriate officer of the court. The court may, however, order the disallowance of costs out of central funds not properly incurred or direct the determining officer to consider whether or not specific items have been properly incurred. The court may also make observations regarding Criminal Defence Service funded costs: Practice Direction (Costs: Criminal Proceedings) [2004] 2 All ER 1070, [2004] 2 Cr App Rep 395 at I.4.1, CA.

COMPENSATION, REWARDS AND COSTS/(4) COSTS AND ALLOWANCES/(i) Award of Costs/B. COST ORDERS/2060. Costs against legal representatives etc.

2060. Costs against legal representatives etc.

In any criminal proceedings<sup>1</sup>:

- 2702 (1) the Court of Appeal<sup>2</sup>;
- 2703 (2) the Crown Court<sup>3</sup>; or
- 2704 (3) a magistrates' court<sup>4</sup>,

may disallow, or (as the case may be) order the legal or other representative<sup>5</sup> concerned to meet, the whole of any wasted costs<sup>6</sup> or such part of them as may be determined in accordance with regulations<sup>7</sup>. Such regulations must provide that a legal or other representative against whom action is so taken by a magistrates' court may appeal to the Crown Court and that a legal or other representative against whom action is so taken by the Crown Court may appeal to the Court of Appeal<sup>8</sup>.

The jurisdiction to make such an order (known as a 'wasted costs order') is not restricted to making orders against the applicant's own legal representatives<sup>9</sup>.

1 As to 'criminal proceedings' see PARA 2058 note 2 ante. For these purposes, 'in any criminal proceedings' includes proceedings initiated by summons for the attendance of a witness before the Crown Court to produce a document or documents: Re a Solicitor (Wasted Costs Order) (No 1 of 1994) [1996] 3 FCR 365, [1996] 1 FLR 40, CA.

2 Prosecution of Offences Act 1985 s 19A(1)(a) (s 19A added by the Courts and Legal Services Act 1990 s 111).

3 Prosecution of Offences Act 1985 s 19A(1)(b) (as added: see note 2 supra).

4 Ibid s 19A(1)(c) (as added: see note 2 supra).

5 'Legal or other representative', in relation to any proceedings, means a person who is exercising a right of audience, or a right to conduct litigation, on behalf of any party to the proceedings: ibid s 19A(3) (as added: see note 2 supra).

6 'Wasted costs' means any costs incurred by a party: (1) as a result of any improper, unreasonable or negligent act or omission on the part of any representative or any employee of a representative; or (2) which, in the light of any such act or omission occurring after they were incurred, the court considers it is unreasonable to expect that party to pay: ibid s 19A(3) (as added: see note 2 supra).

'Improper' covers any significant breach of a substantial duty imposed by the relevant code of professional conduct, as well as conduct which would be improper according to the consensus of professional opinion, whether it violated the letter of a professional code or not. 'Unreasonable' describes conduct which was vexatious, designed to harass the other side rather than advance the resolution of the case, and it makes no difference that the conduct was the product of excessive zeal and not improper motive, since the acid test is whether the conduct permitted of a reasonable explanation. 'Negligent' is to be understood in an untechnical way to denote failure to act with the competence reasonably expected of ordinary members of the profession: Ridehalgh v Horsefield [1994] Ch 205, [1994] 3 All ER 848, CA (case concerned with identical definition of 'wasted costs', for purposes of a civil wasted costs order, in the Supreme Court Act 1981 s 51(7)). See also R v Duffy (Michael) (wasted costs) [2004] EWCA Crim 330, [2004] PNLR 717.

It is generally appropriate for the trial judge to preside in wasted costs proceedings brought against a legal representative, even where they are brought on the basis of alleged incompetence and the trial judge is a witness of fact: Re a Barrister (Wasted Costs Order) [2001] EWCA Crim 1728, [2002] 1 Cr App Rep 207.

7 Prosecution of Offences Act 1985 s 19A(1) (as added: see note 2 supra). 'Regulations' means regulations made by the Lord Chancellor: s 19A(7) (as so added). For guidance as to the making of such an order see Re A Barrister (Wasted Costs Order No 1 of 1991) [1993] QB 293, [1992] 3 All ER 429, CA; Re a Barrister (Wasted Costs Order) [2001] EWCA Crim 1728, [2002] 1 Cr App Rep 207; Practice Direction (Costs: Criminal Proceedings) [2004] 2 All ER 1070, [2004] 2 Cr App Rep 395 at VIII.1.1-VIII.2.1, CA. An order should not be made without taking account of the daily demands of practice, and the difficulties associated with time estimates: Re A Barrister (Wasted Costs Order No 4 of 1993) (1995) Times 21 April, CA. Where a wasted costs order is sought against a practitioner precluded by legal professional privilege from giving his full answer to the application, the court should not make an order unless, proceeding with extreme care, it is: (1) satisfied that there was nothing the practitioner could say, if unconstrained, to resist the order; and (2) that it was in all the circumstances fair to make the order: Medcalf v Mardell [2002] UKHL 27, [2003] 1 AC 120, [2002] 3 All ER 721.

Where the court disallows or orders a legal or other representative to meet any wasted costs, the order for costs must specify the sum to be paid or disallowed. Where the court is required to specify the amount of costs to be paid it cannot delegate the decision. Wherever practicable those instructing counsel should provide counsel with details of costs incurred at each stage in the proceedings. The court may, however, require the appropriate officer of the court to make inquiries to inform the court as to the costs incurred and may adjourn the proceedings for inquiries to be made if necessary: Practice Direction (Costs: Criminal Proceedings) [2004] 2 All ER 1070, [2004] 2 Cr App Rep 395 at I.4.2-I.4.3, CA.

A wasted costs order may provide for the whole or any part of the wasted costs to be disallowed or ordered to be paid and the court must specify the amount of such costs: Costs in Criminal Cases (General) Regulations 1986, SI 1986/1335, reg 3B(1) (regs 3A-3D added by SI 1991/789).

Where a wasted costs order has been made, the court must notify any interested party of the order and the amount disallowed or ordered to be paid: Costs in Criminal Cases (General) Regulations 1986, SI 1986/1335, reg 3B(4) (as so added; and amended by SI 2004/2408). 'Interested party' means the party benefiting from the wasted costs order and, where he was receiving services funded for him as part of the Criminal Defence Service, or an order for the payment of costs out of central funds was made in his favour, includes the authority responsible for determining costs payable in respect of work done under the representation order or out of central funds as the case may be: Costs in Criminal Cases (General) Regulations 1986, SI 1986/1335, reg 3A (as so added; and amended by SI 2004/2408). Before making a wasted costs order the court must allow the legal or other representative and any party to the proceedings to make representations: Costs in Criminal Cases (General) Regulations 1986, SI 1986/1335, reg 3B(2) (as so added). When making a wasted costs order the court may take into account any other order as to costs in respect of the proceedings and may take the wasted costs order into account when making any other such order: reg 3B(3) (as so added; and amended by SI 2004/2408).

Where the person required to make a payment in respect of sums due under a wasted costs order fails to do so, the payment may be recovered summarily as a sum adjudged to be paid as a civil debt by order of a magistrates' court by the party benefiting from the order, save that where he was receiving services funded for him as part of the Criminal Defence Service or an order for the payment of costs out of central funds was made in his favour, the power to recover is exercisable by the Lord Chancellor: Costs in Criminal Cases (General) Regulations 1986, SI 1986/1335, reg 3D (as so added; and amended by SI 2004/2408).

8 Prosecution of Offences Act 1985 s 19A(2) (as added: see note 2 supra). A legal or other representative against whom the wasted costs order is made may appeal: (1) in the case of an order made by a magistrates' court, to the Crown Court; and (2) in the case of an order made at first instance by the Crown Court, to the Court of Appeal: Costs in Criminal Cases (General) Regulations 1986, SI 1986/1335, reg 3C(1) (as added: see note 7 supra). An appeal must be instituted within 21 days of the wasted costs order being made by the appellant's giving notice in writing to the court which made the order, stating the grounds of appeal: reg 3C(2) (as so added). The appellant must serve a copy of the notice of appeal and grounds, including any application for an extension of time in which to appeal, on any interested party: reg 3C(3) (as so added).

The time limit within which an appeal may be instituted may, for good reason, be extended before or after it expires: (a) in the case of an appeal to the Crown Court, by a judge of that court; (b) in the case of an appeal to the Court of Appeal, a judge of the High Court or Court of Appeal, or by the Registrar of Criminal Appeals, and in each case the court to which the appeal is made must give notice of the extension to the appellant, the court which made the wasted costs order and any interested party: reg 3C(4) (as so added; and amended by SI 2004/2408).

The court must give notice of the hearing date to the appellant, the court which made the wasted costs order and any interested party and must allow the interested party to make representations which may be made orally or in writing: Costs in Criminal Cases (General) Regulations 1986, SI 1986/1335, reg 3C(5) (as so added). The court may affirm, vary or revoke the order as it thinks fit and must notify its decision to the appellant, any interested party and the court which made the order: reg 3C(6) (as so added). On an appeal under reg 3C (as added), there is no power to award the costs of a successful appellant out of central funds: Steele Ford & Newton (a firm) v Crown Prosecution Service [1994] 1 AC 22, [1993] 2 All ER 769, HL. See also Re A Barrister (Wasted Costs Order) (No 1 of 1991) [1993] QB 293, [1992] 3 All ER 429, CA.

9 Medcalf v Mardell [2002] UKHL 27, [2003] 1 AC 120, [2002] 3 All ER 721, HL. In the case of barristers such an order is not restricted to their conduct when exercising their right of audience, since such an order can be made in respect of conduct immediately relevant to that right but not involving advocacy in open court: Medcalf v Mardell supra.

COMPENSATION, REWARDS AND COSTS/(4) COSTS AND ALLOWANCES/(i) Award of Costs/B. COST ORDERS/2061. Provision for award of costs against third parties.

2061. Provision for award of costs against third parties.

The Lord Chancellor may by regulations<sup>1</sup> make provision empowering magistrates' courts, the Crown Court and the Court of Appeal to make a third party costs order, that is an order as to the payment of costs incurred by a party to criminal proceedings by a person who is not a party to those proceedings ('the third party')<sup>2</sup> if the following condition is satisfied:

- 2705 (1) there has been serious misconduct (whether or not constituting a contempt of court) by the third party<sup>3</sup>; and
- 2706 (2) the court considers it appropriate, having regard to that misconduct, to make a third party costs order against him<sup>4</sup>.

The Lord Chancellor has made such regulations<sup>5</sup>, which provide as follows where there are, or have been, criminal proceedings in a magistrates' court, the Crown Court and the Court of Appeal<sup>6</sup>. If:

- 2707 (a) there has been serious misconduct (whether or not constituting a contempt of court) by a third party<sup>7</sup>; and
- 2708 (b) the court<sup>8</sup> considers it appropriate, having regard to that misconduct, to make a third party costs order<sup>9</sup> against him<sup>10</sup>, the court may order the third party to pay all or part of the costs incurred or wasted by any party<sup>11</sup> as a result of the misconduct<sup>12</sup>.

The court may make a third party costs order at any time during or after the criminal proceedings; and on the application of any party or of its own initiative (but not otherwise)<sup>13</sup>.

The court must make a third party costs order during the proceedings only if it decides that there are good reasons to do so, rather than making the order after the proceedings, and it must notify the parties and the third party of those reasons and allow any of them to make representations<sup>14</sup>.

Before making a third party costs order the court must allow the third party and any party to make representations and may hear evidence<sup>15</sup>. When making a third party costs order the court may vary or take into account any other order as to costs in respect of the criminal proceedings and may take the third party costs order into account when making any other order as to costs in respect of the criminal proceedings<sup>16</sup>. When a third party costs order has been made the court must notify the third party and any interested party<sup>17</sup> of the order and the amount ordered to be paid<sup>18</sup>.

An application by a party ('the applicant') for a third party costs order must be in writing and must contain:

- 2709 (i) the name and address of the applicant<sup>19</sup>;
- 2710 (ii) the names and addresses of the other parties<sup>20</sup>;
- 2711 (iii) the name and address of the third party against whom the order is sought<sup>21</sup>;

- 2712 (iv) the date of the end of the criminal proceedings<sup>22</sup>;
- 2713 (v) a summary of the facts upon which the applicant intends to rely in making the application, including details of the alleged misconduct of the third party<sup>23</sup>.

The application must be sent to the appropriate officer<sup>24</sup> and, upon receiving it, the appropriate officer must serve<sup>25</sup> copies of it on the third party and on the other parties<sup>26</sup>.

Where the court decides that it might make a third party costs order of its own initiative the appropriate officer must serve notice in writing accordingly on the third party and the parties<sup>27</sup>. At the same time as serving such a notice the appropriate officer must serve a summary of the reasons why the court might make a third party costs order, including details of the alleged misconduct of the third party<sup>28</sup>. When the appropriate officer serves copies<sup>29</sup> or serves notice<sup>30</sup> he must at the same time serve notice on the parties and the third party of the time and place fixed for the hearing<sup>31</sup>. At the time notified the court may proceed in the absence of the third party and of any party if it is satisfied that they have been duly served with the notice of the time and place of the hearing<sup>32</sup> and the copy of the application or (as the case may be) the notices given<sup>33</sup>, but the court may set aside any third party costs order if it is later shown that the third party did not receive them<sup>34</sup>.

A third party against whom a third party costs order is made may appeal in the case of an order made by a magistrates' court, to the Crown Court; and in the case of an order made at first instance by the Crown Court, to the Court of Appeal<sup>35</sup>. An appeal must be instituted within 21 days of the third party costs order being made by the appellant giving notice in writing to the court which made the order, stating the grounds of appeal<sup>36</sup>. The appellant must serve a copy of the notice of appeal and grounds, including any application for extension of time in which to appeal, on any interested party<sup>37</sup>. The time limit within which an appeal may be instituted may, for good reason, be extended before or after it expires:

- 2714 (A) in the case of an appeal to the Crown Court, by a judge of that court;
- 2715 (B) in the case of an appeal to the Court of Appeal, by a judge of the High Court or Court of Appeal, or by the Registrar of Criminal Appeals, and in each case the court to which the appeal is made ('the appeal court') must give notice of the extension to the appellant, the court which made the third party costs order and any interested party<sup>38</sup>. The appeal court must give notice of the hearing date to the appellant, the court which made the third party costs order and any interested party and must allow the interested party to make representations which may be made orally or in writing<sup>39</sup>. The appeal court may affirm, vary or revoke the order as it thinks fit and must notify its decision to the appellant, any interested party and the court which made the order<sup>40</sup>.

Where the person required to make a payment in respect of sums due under a third party costs order fails to do so, the payment may be recovered summarily as a sum adjudged to be paid as a civil debt by order of a magistrates' court by the party benefiting from the order, save that where he was receiving services funded for him as part of the Criminal Defence Service or an order for the payment of costs out of central funds was made in his favour, the power to recover is exercisable by the Lord Chancellor<sup>41</sup>.

COMPENSATION, REWARDS AND COSTS/(4) COSTS AND ALLOWANCES/(i) Award of Costs/B. COST ORDERS/2062. Award out of central funds; private prosecution costs.

2062. Award out of central funds; private prosecution costs.

A court may, in any proceedings<sup>1</sup> in respect of an indictable offence, and in any proceedings before a Divisional Court of the Queen's Bench Division or the House of Lords in respect of a summary offence, order the payment out of central funds<sup>2</sup> of such amount as the court considers reasonably sufficient to compensate the prosecutor<sup>3</sup> for any expenses properly incurred by him in the proceedings<sup>4</sup>. However, no order may be made in favour of: (1) a public authority<sup>5</sup>; or (2) a person acting on behalf of a public authority or in his capacity as an official appointed by such an authority<sup>6</sup>.

Where a court makes such an order but is of the opinion that there are circumstances which make it inappropriate that the prosecution should recover the full amount, the court must: (a) assess what amount would, in its opinion, be just and reasonable<sup>7</sup>; and (b) specify that amount in the order<sup>8</sup>. The amount to be paid out of central funds in pursuance of such an order must: (i) be specified in the order, in any case where the court considers it appropriate for the amount to be so specified and the prosecutor agrees the amount<sup>9</sup>; and (ii) in any other case, be determined in accordance with regulations<sup>10</sup> made by the Lord Chancellor<sup>11</sup>.

1 For the meaning of 'proceedings' see PARA 2059 note 2 ante.

2 For the meaning of 'central funds' see PARA 2058 note 13 ante.

3 Where the conduct of proceedings to which the Prosecution of Offences Act 1985 s 17(1) applies is taken over by the Crown Prosecution Service, s 17(1) has effect as if it referred to the prosecutor who had the conduct of the proceedings before the intervention of the Service and to expenses incurred by him up to the time of intervention: s 17(5). As to the Crown Prosecution Service see PARA 1079 et seq ante.

Further provisions relating to an order for private prosecution costs are set out in PARAS 2067-2073 post.

4 Ibid s 17(1). As from a day to be appointed, the words 'Supreme Court' are substituted for the words 'House of Lords' by the Constitutional Reform Act 2005 s 40, Sch 9 para 41(1), (3). At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed. The Prosecution of Offences Act 1985 ss 17, 18 (as amended) (see PARA 2063 post) apply to proceedings in the Crown Court in respect of a person committed by a magistrates' court to that court: (1) with a view to his being sentenced for an indictable offence in accordance with the Powers of Criminal Courts (Sentencing) Act 2000 s 5 (see SENTENCING AND DISPOSITION OF OFFENDERS vol 92 (2010) PARA 17); (2) with a view to his being sentenced by the Crown Court under the Bail Act 1976 s 6(6) (see PARA 1199 ante) or s 9(3) (see PARA 1201 ante); or (3) with a view to the making of a hospital order with an order restricting his discharge under the Mental Health Act 1983 Pt III (ss 35-55) (see SENTENCING AND DISPOSITION OF OFFENDERS vol 92 (2010) PARA 332 et seq), as they apply where a person is convicted in proceedings before the Crown Court: Costs in Criminal Cases (General) Regulations 1986, SI 1986/1335, reg 14(1) (amended by SI 1992/2956).

Where a court orders that the costs of a private prosecutor should be paid from central funds, the order will be for such amount as the court considers sufficient reasonably to compensate the party for expenses incurred by him in the proceedings. This will include the costs incurred in the proceedings in the lower courts unless for good reason the court directs that such costs are not included in the order, but it cannot include expenses incurred which do not directly relate to the proceedings themselves, such as loss of earnings: Practice Direction (Costs: Criminal Proceedings) [2004] 2 All ER 1070, [2004] 2 Cr App Rep 395 at I.3, CA.

5 Prosecution of Offences Act 1985 s 17(2)(a). For these purposes, 'public authority' means: (1) a police force within the meaning of s 3 (see PARA 1080 note 5 ante); (2) the Crown Prosecution Service or any other government department; (3) a local authority or other authority or body constituted for the purposes of: (a) the public service or of local government; or (b) carrying on under national ownership any industry or undertaking or part of an industry or undertaking; or (4) any other authority or body whose members are appointed by Her Majesty or by any Minister of the Crown or government department or whose revenues consist wholly or mainly of money provided by Parliament: s 17(6).

8 Ibid s 17(3)(b).

9 Ibid s 17(4)(a). Except where the court has directed in an order for costs from central funds that only a specified sum is to be paid, the amount of costs to be paid is determined by the appropriate officer of the court. The court may, however, order the disallowance of costs out of central funds not properly incurred or direct the determining officer to consider whether or not specific items have been properly incurred. The court may also make observations regarding Criminal Defence Service funded costs. The order for costs must specify the sum to be paid. Where the court is required to specify the amount of costs to be paid, it cannot delegate the decision. Wherever practicable, those instructing counsel should provide counsel with details of the costs incurred at each stage of proceedings. The court may, however, require the appropriate officer of the court to make inquiries to inform the court as to the costs incurred and may adjourn the proceedings for inquiries to be made if necessary: Practice Direction (Costs: Criminal Proceedings) [2004] 2 All ER 1070, [2004] 2 Cr App Rep 395 at I.4.1-I.4.2, CA.

COMPENSATION, REWARDS AND COSTS/(4) COSTS AND ALLOWANCES/(i) Award of Costs/B. COST ORDERS/2063. Award of costs against defendant.

2063. Award of costs against defendant.

Where:

- 2716 (1) any person is convicted of an offence before a magistrates' court;
- 2717 (2) the Crown Court dismisses an appeal against such a conviction or against the sentence imposed on that conviction; or
- 2718 (3) any person is convicted of an offence before the Crown Court, the court may make such order as to the costs<sup>1</sup> to be paid by the defendant<sup>2</sup> to the prosecutor as it considers just and reasonable<sup>3</sup>.

Where the Court of Appeal dismisses:

- 2719 (a) an appeal or application for leave to appeal<sup>4</sup>;
- 2720 (b) an application by the defendant for leave to appeal to the House of Lords<sup>5</sup>;
- or
- 2721 (c) an appeal or application for leave to appeal from any order or ruling by a judge in a preparatory hearing<sup>6</sup>, the court may make such order as to the costs to be paid by the defendant, to such person as may be named in the order, as it considers just and reasonable<sup>7</sup>.

Where the Court of Appeal reverses or varies<sup>8</sup> a ruling on an appeal against a ruling by the trial judge, it may make such order as to costs to be paid by the defendant, to such person named in the order, as it considers just and reasonable<sup>9</sup>.

The amount to be paid by the defendant in pursuance of such an order must be specified in the order<sup>10</sup>.

Where any person is convicted of an offence before a magistrates' court and: (i) under the conviction the court orders payment of any sum as a fine, penalty, forfeiture or compensation; and (ii) the sum so ordered to be paid does not exceed £5, the court may not order the defendant to pay any costs under the above provisions unless in the particular circumstances of the case it considers it right to do so<sup>11</sup>.

Where any person under the age of 18 is convicted of an offence before a magistrates' court, the amount of any costs ordered to be paid by the defendant under the above provisions may not exceed the amount of any fine imposed on him<sup>12</sup>.

<sup>2</sup> Not every defendant convicted after pleading not guilty should be ordered to pay the costs of the prosecution, but there is a discretion which the judge should exercise if he takes into account such matters as the fact that the defendant has chosen to contest a strong case against him or the fact that the defendant must have known the real truth of the matter. If the defendant, knowing his guilt, has elected trial by jury, it is permissible, if the trial judge decides on all the facts that costs ought to be paid, to refer to the waste of time and money when passing sentence: R v Singh (1982) 4 Cr App Rep (S) 38, CA (decided under the Costs in Criminal Cases Act 1973 (repealed)). As to the meaning of 'defendant' see PARA 2059 note 1 ante. Such a rule of practice does not necessarily have to be followed in all cases: R v Mountain, R v Kilminster (1978) 68 Cr App Rep 41, CA.

3 Prosecution of Offences Act 1985 s 18(1). An order should be made where the court is satisfied that the offender or appellant has the means and ability to pay: Practice Direction (Costs: Criminal Proceedings) [2004] 2 All ER 1070, [2004] 2 Cr App Rep 395 at VI.1.4, CA. It is unlawful to impose an order for costs which a defendant has no chance of paying in the expectation that it would be paid by a third party, even if the third party is a discretionary trust under the control of the defendant's family: R v Barnet Magistrates' Court, ex p Cantor [1998] 2 All ER 333, [1999] 1 WLR 334, DC. It is wholly wrong to impose an order in relation to costs, backed with a sentence of imprisonment, unless there is evidence from which the trial judge can infer that the sum concerned can be paid, and, if it is not paid, it is as a result of the wilful default of the defendant: R v Carter (1980) 2 Cr App Rep (S) 71, CA; R v Murruzzaman (1979) 1 Cr App Rep (S) 320, CA. Where a fine is imposed, a costs order should not be disproportionate to the level of fine and, if the total of fine and costs is excessive, the latter should be reduced accordingly: R v Northallerton Magistrates' Court, ex p Dove [2000] 1 Cr App Rep (S) 136, (1999) 163 JP 657, DC, considering R v Whalley (1972) 56 Cr App Rep 304, CA (wrong in principle to impose small fine and heavy order for costs); R v Firmston (1984) 6 Cr App Rep (S) 189, DC (order for costs and fine should go in step); R v Nottingham Magistrates' Court, ex p Fohmann (1986) 84 Cr App Rep 316, DC (order for costs should be at reasonable level having regard to fine imposed); R v Jones (NCJ) (1988) 10 Cr App Rep (S) 95, DC (see below); R v Bushell (1980) 2 Cr App Rep (S) 77, CA (no necessary relationship between fine and costs); Cozens v Hobbs [1999] COD 24, DC (to same effect). The order as made should be within the means of the person ordered to pay, such that it can be paid off within a reasonable time, which should be about 12 months (R v Nottingham Magistrates' Court, ex p Fohmann supra (decided under the Costs in Criminal Cases Act 1973 s 2(2) (repealed))). See, however, R v Olliver, R v Olliver (1989) 11 Cr App Rep (S) 10, CA (a period of two years for payment is seldom too long) and R v Rollco Screw and Rivet Co Ltd [1999] 2 Cr App Rep (S) 436, CA (legitimate for a costs order against a corporate defendant to be payable over a longer period of time than would be reasonable for an individual defendant). If the defendant fails to provide evidence of his means, the court is entitled to draw reasonable inferences as to his means from the evidence and all the circumstances of the case: R v Northallerton Magistrates' Court, ex p Dove supra. Although it is wrong in principle to award a very heavy costs order after imposing a small fine, it is right to consider the lateness of the guilty plea: R v Jones (1988) 10 Cr App Rep (S) 95, DC. The conduct of the defendant should be taken into account, but an order to pay costs cannot be imposed as a penalty: R v Hall [1989] Crim LR 228, CA. Where a defendant was convicted at a third trial on some counts and acquitted on others, after two previous trials had been aborted due to the unsatisfactory nature of CCTV evidence, it was held that the judge had been wrong in making a prosecution costs order by adopting a global approach. The defendant should not have been ordered to pay the prosecution costs of the aborted trials, and allowance should have been made for the defendant's acquittals on some counts: R v B & Q plc [2005] EWCA Crim 2297, (2005) Times, 3 November. There is no rule that an order for costs cannot be made against a defendant who pleads guilty; such a plea is a factor to be taken into account in deciding whether to make an order, and its weight depends on the nature of the case: R v Maher [1983] QB 784, 76 Cr App Rep 309, CA. Where there are several defendants and only some of them have the means to pay costs, it is wrong to divide up the total costs between those defendants with the means; if it is impossible to say what part of the total costs is attributable to any defendant, the court should divide the total costs between all the defendants and order those defendants with the means to pay their share only: R v Ronson, R v Parnes (1992) 13 Cr App Rep (S) 153, CA. Contrast R v Harrison (Bernard) (1993) 14 Cr App Rep (S) 419, CA (where several defendants, usually appropriate to look to see what would be a reasonable estimate of costs if each defendant were tried alone; fact that a particular defendant was the principal defendant relevant; substantial costs order upheld, although no order had been made against the defendant who had played a minor role); R v Fresha Bakeries Ltd [2002] EWCA Crim 1451, [2003] 1 Cr App Rep (S) 202 (greater amount of costs order against corporate defendant than against individual co-defendants upheld because corporate defendant held to bear a greater responsibility than the individuals).

On an appeal to the Crown Court, the Crown Court is not expected normally to interfere with a costs order made by a magistrates' court: Johnson v Royal Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals (2000) 164 JP 345, DC.

An order for costs against the defendant is a 'sentence' for the purposes of an appeal to the Court of Appeal against sentence (see SENTENCING AND DISPOSITION OF OFFENDERS vol 92 (2010) PARA 45): R v Hayden [1975] 2 All ER 558, 60 Cr App Rep 304, CA. An order for costs against the defendant by a magistrates' court cannot be appealed to the Crown Court, but an appeal can be made to the High Court if the magistrates' court acted so far outside the normal discretionary limits as to show that they acted on an improper principle, took into consideration something which they should not or failed to take into consideration something which they should have considered: R v Tottenham Justices, ex p Joshi [1982] 2 All ER 507, 75 Cr App Rep 72, DC.

As to the application of the Prosecution of Offences Act 1985 s 18 (as amended: see note 7 infra) in the case of persons committed by a magistrates' court to the Crown Court see PARA 2062 note 4 ante. Section 18 (as amended) applies to proceedings in the Crown Court: (1) in respect of a person committed by a magistrates' court as an incorrigible rogue under the Vagrancy Act 1824 s 5 (as amended; prospectively repealed) (see PARA 835 ante) as if he were committed for trial before the Crown Court and as if the committing court were examining justices; and (2) in respect of an appeal under the Vagrancy Act 1824 s 14 (as amended) (see PARA 836 ante) as if the hearing of the appeal were a trial on indictment and as if the magistrates' court from which the appeal was brought were examining justices: Costs in Criminal Cases (General) Regulations 1986, SI 1986/1335, reg 14(2). The Prosecution of Offences Act 1985 s 18 (as amended) applies to proceedings in a magistrates' court or the Crown Court: (a) for dealing with an offender under the Powers of Criminal Courts (Sentencing) Act 2000 s 13, Sch 3 paras 4, 5 (see SENTENCING AND DISPOSITION OF OFFENDERS vol 92 (2010) PARAS 234-235); (b) under ss 119(1), (2), 123, 125 (repealed); (c) under Sch 5 paras 2, 3 (see SENTENCING AND DISPOSITION OF OFFENDERS vol 92 (2010) PARAS 268-269), as if the offender had been tried in such proceedings for the offence for which the order was made or the sentence passed: Costs in Criminal Cases (General) Regulations 1986, SI 1986/1335, reg 14(3) (amended by SI 1992/2956).

Where the court orders an offender to pay costs to the prosecutor, or orders one party to pay costs to another party, the order for costs must specify the sum to be paid. Where the court is required to specify the amount of costs to be paid, it cannot delegate the decision. Wherever practicable, those instructing counsel should provide advocates with details of costs incurred at each stage of proceedings. The court may, however, require the appropriate officer of the court to make inquiries to inform the court as to the costs incurred and may adjourn the proceedings for inquiries to be made if necessary: Practice Direction (Costs: Criminal Proceedings) [2004] 2 All ER 1070, [2004] 2 Cr App Rep 395 at I.4.2-I.4.3, CA.

NOTE 3--SI 1986/1335 reg 14(3) substituted: SI 2008/2448. It may be just and reasonable to order a defendant to pay to the prosecutor costs incurred by a third party where the prosecutor will pass on those costs to the third party: R v Balshaw [2009] EWCA Crim 470, [2009] 1 WLR 2301, [2009] All ER (D) 184 (Mar) (costs incurred by police in commissioning expert report).

2064. Costs unnecessarily or improperly incurred.

Where at any time during criminal proceedings<sup>1</sup> a magistrates' court<sup>2</sup>, the Crown Court or the Court of Appeal is satisfied that costs have been incurred in respect of the proceedings by one of the parties as a result of an unnecessary or improper<sup>3</sup> act or omission<sup>4</sup> by, or on behalf of, another party to the proceedings, the court may, after hearing the parties, order that all or part of the costs<sup>5</sup> so incurred by that party are to be paid to him by the other party<sup>6</sup>. Before making such an order, the court must take into account any other order as to costs (including any legal aid order<sup>7</sup>) which has been made in respect of the proceedings<sup>8</sup>.

1 See PARA 2058 note 2 ante.

2 No such order may be made by a magistrates' court which requires a person under the age of 17 who has been convicted of an offence to pay an amount by way of costs which exceeds the amount of any fine imposed upon him: Costs in Criminal Cases (General) Regulations 1986, SI 1986/1335, reg 3(5).

3 'Improper' in this context encompasses an act or omission resulting in costs which could not have been incurred in the proper conduct of the party's case; it does not connote 'grave impropriety': DPP v Denning [1991] 2 QB 532, 94 Cr App Rep 272, DC.

4 A causal connection must be established between the unnecessary or improper act or omission and the costs incurred: R v Crown Court at Wood Green, ex p DPP [1993] 2 All ER 656, [1993] 1 WLR 723, DC.

5 An order so made must specify the amount of costs to be paid in pursuance of the order: Costs in Criminal Cases (General) Regulations 1986, SI 1986/1335, reg 3(3).

6 Ibid reg 3(1). Where an order under reg 3(1) has been made, the court may take that order into account when making any other order as to costs in respect of the proceedings: reg 3(4).

As to the disallowance of costs out of central funds see Practice Direction (Costs: Criminal Proceedings) [2004] 2 All ER 1070, [2004] 2 Cr App Rep 395 at V.1.1, CA; and as to the award of costs against solicitors see Practice Direction (Costs: Criminal Proceedings) [2004] 2 All ER 1070, [2004] 2 Cr App Rep 395 at IX, CA.

An order made by a trial judge in the Crown Court is not susceptible to judicial review if he has acted within the scope of his jurisdiction because his decision will constitute a matter 'relating to trial on indictment': R v Leicester Crown Court, ex p Comrs of Customs and Excise [2001] EWHC Admin 33, (2001) Times, 23 February, DC.

7 The reference to a legal aid order has yet to be revoked.

The appropriate authority is:

- 2722 (1) the Registrar of Criminal Appeals in the case of proceedings in the Court of Appeal<sup>4</sup>;
- 2723 (2) the master of the Crown Office in the case of proceedings in a Divisional Court of the Queen's Bench Division<sup>5</sup>;
- 2724 (3) an officer appointed by the Lord Chancellor in the case of proceedings in the Crown Court<sup>6</sup>;
- 2725 (4) the justices' clerk in the case of proceedings in a magistrates' court<sup>7</sup>.

The appropriate authority may appoint or authorise the appointment of determining officers to act on its behalf in accordance with directions given by it or on its behalf<sup>8</sup>.

2068. Claims for costs payable out of central funds.

No claim for costs payable out of central funds<sup>1</sup> may be entertained<sup>2</sup> unless it is submitted within three months of the date on which the costs order<sup>3</sup> was made<sup>4</sup>.

A claim for costs must be submitted to the designated officer in the case of proceedings in a magistrates' court, or to the appropriate authority<sup>5</sup> in the case of proceedings in the Court of Appeal, a Divisional Court of the Queen's Bench Division, or the Crown Court, in such form and manner as he or it may direct and must be accompanied by any receipts or other evidence of the applicant's payment of the costs claimed, and any receipts or other documents in support of any disbursements claimed<sup>6</sup>. A claim must:

- 2726 (1) summarise the items of work done by a solicitor<sup>7</sup>;
- 2727 (2) state, where appropriate, the dates on which items of work were done, the time taken and the sums claimed<sup>8</sup>;
- 2728 (3) specify any disbursements<sup>9</sup> claimed, including counsel's fee, the circumstances in which they were incurred and the amounts claimed in respect of them<sup>10</sup>; and
- 2729 (4) contain either full particulars, including the date and outcome, of any claim that provisions<sup>11</sup> relating to urgently needed representation or advice in proceedings in a magistrates' court should be applied in respect of any work comprised in the claim<sup>12</sup>, or a certificate by the solicitor that he has not made, and will not make, any such claim<sup>13</sup>.

Where there are any special circumstances which should be drawn to the attention of the appropriate authority, the applicant<sup>14</sup> must specify them<sup>15</sup>.

The applicant must supply such further particulars, information and documents as the appropriate authority may require<sup>16</sup>.

The appropriate authority<sup>1</sup> must consider the claim, any further particulars, information or documents submitted<sup>2</sup> by the applicant<sup>3</sup> and must allow such costs in respect of:

- 2730 (1) such work as appears to it to have been actually and reasonably done;
- 2731 (2) such disbursements<sup>4</sup> as appear to it to have been actually and reasonably incurred, as it considers reasonably sufficient to compensate the applicant for any expenses properly incurred by him in the proceedings<sup>5</sup>.

In determining costs, the appropriate authority must take into account all the relevant circumstances of the case including the nature, importance, complexity or difficulty of the work and the time involved<sup>6</sup>. When determining costs, there must be allowed a reasonable amount in respect of all costs reasonably incurred and any doubts which the appropriate authority may have as to whether the costs were reasonably incurred or were reasonable in amount must be resolved against the applicant<sup>7</sup>.

When the appropriate authority has determined<sup>8</sup> the costs payable to an applicant, the designated officer for the court, in the case of proceedings in a magistrates' court, or the appropriate authority<sup>9</sup>, in the case of proceedings in the Court of Appeal, Divisional Court of the Queen's Bench Division or the Crown Court, must notify the applicant of the costs payable and authorise payment accordingly<sup>10</sup>.

An applicant<sup>1</sup> who is dissatisfied with the costs payable out of central funds<sup>2</sup> determined<sup>3</sup> by an appropriate authority<sup>4</sup> in respect of proceedings, other than proceedings before a magistrates' court, may apply to the appropriate authority to redetermine them<sup>5</sup>.

The application must be made<sup>6</sup>, within 21 days of the receipt of notification of the costs payable<sup>7</sup>, by giving notice in writing to the appropriate authority specifying the items in respect of which the application is made and the grounds of objection and must be made in such form and manner as the appropriate authority may direct<sup>8</sup>. The notice of application must state whether the applicant wishes to appear or to be represented and, if the applicant so wishes, the appropriate authority must notify the applicant of the time at which it is prepared to hear him or his representative<sup>9</sup>.

The appropriate authority must redetermine the costs, whether by way of increase, decrease or at the level previously determined, in the light of the objections made by the applicant or on his behalf and must notify him of its decision<sup>10</sup>. The applicant may request the appropriate authority to give reasons in writing for its decision and, if so requested, the appropriate authority must comply with the request<sup>11</sup>.

2071. Appeals to a costs judge.

Where the appropriate authority<sup>1</sup> has given its reasons for its decision on a redetermination<sup>2</sup>, an applicant<sup>3</sup> who is dissatisfied with that decision may appeal to a costs judge<sup>4</sup>. An appeal must be instituted<sup>5</sup> within 21 days of the receipt of the appropriate authority's reasons by giving notice in writing to the Senior Costs Judge specifying the items in respect of which the appeal is brought and the grounds of objection<sup>6</sup>.

The notice of appeal must be accompanied by:

- 2732 (1) a copy of the written notice from the applicant<sup>7</sup>;
- 2733 (2) any particulars, information and documents supplied to the appropriate authority<sup>8</sup>;
- 2734 (3) the appropriate authority's reasons for giving<sup>9</sup> its decision<sup>10</sup>.

The notice of appeal must state whether the appellant wishes to appear or to be represented or whether he will accept a decision in his absence<sup>11</sup>.

The Senior Costs Judge may, and if so directed by the Lord Chancellor either generally or in a particular case must, send to the Lord Chancellor a copy of the notice of appeal together with copies of such other documents as the Lord Chancellor may require<sup>12</sup>.

With a view to ensuring that the public interest is taken into account, the Lord Chancellor may arrange for written or oral representations to be made on his behalf and, if he intends to do so, he must inform the Senior Costs Judge and the appellant<sup>13</sup>. Any written representations so made on behalf of the Lord Chancellor must be sent to the Senior Costs Judge and to the appellant and, in the case of oral representations, the Senior Costs Judge and the appellant must be informed of the grounds on which such representations will be made<sup>14</sup>. The appellant must be permitted a reasonable opportunity to make representations in reply<sup>15</sup>. The costs judge must inform the appellant (or his representative) and the Lord Chancellor, where representations have been or are to be made on his behalf, of the date of any hearing and may<sup>16</sup> give directions as to the conduct of the appeal<sup>17</sup>. The costs judge may consult the presiding judge<sup>18</sup>, and the appropriate authority or the determining officer who redetermined the costs on its behalf, as the case may be, and may require the appellant to provide any further information which he requires for the purposes of the appeal and, unless the costs judge otherwise directs, no further evidence may be received on the hearing of the appeal and no ground of objection is valid which was not raised on the redetermination<sup>19</sup>. The costs judge has the same powers<sup>20</sup> as the appropriate authority and, in the exercise of such powers, may alter the redetermination of the appropriate authority in respect of any sum allowed, whether by increase or decrease, as he thinks fit<sup>21</sup>. The costs judge must communicate his decision and the reasons for it in writing to the appellant, the Lord Chancellor, and the appropriate authority or the determining officer who redetermined the costs on its behalf, as the case may be<sup>22</sup>. Save where he confirms or decreases the sums redetermined<sup>23</sup>, the costs judge may allow the appellant a sum in respect of part or all of any reasonable costs (including any fee payable in respect of an appeal) incurred by him in connection with the appeal<sup>24</sup>.

2072. Appeals to the High Court.

An applicant<sup>1</sup> who is dissatisfied with the decision of a costs judge<sup>2</sup> on an appeal<sup>3</sup> may apply to a costs judge to certify a point of principle of general importance<sup>4</sup>. Any such application must be made<sup>5</sup> within 21 days of notification<sup>6</sup> of a costs judge's decision<sup>7</sup>. Where a costs judge certifies such a point of principle, the applicant may appeal to the High Court against the decision of the costs judge on an appeal against redetermination of costs<sup>8</sup>, and the Lord Chancellor must be a respondent to that appeal<sup>9</sup>. Any such appeal must be instituted<sup>10</sup> within 21 days of receiving a costs judge's certificate<sup>11</sup>. Where the Lord Chancellor is dissatisfied with the decision of a costs judge on an appeal, he may, if no such appeal has been made by the applicant, appeal to the High Court against that decision and the applicant must be a respondent to such an appeal<sup>12</sup>. Such an appeal must be instituted<sup>13</sup> within 21 days of receiving notification of the costs judge's decision<sup>14</sup>.

An appeal by either an applicant<sup>15</sup> or the Lord Chancellor<sup>16</sup> must be brought in the Queen's Bench Division, follow the prescribed procedure<sup>17</sup> and be heard and determined by a single judge whose decision is final<sup>18</sup>. The judge has the same powers<sup>19</sup> as the appropriate authority<sup>20</sup> and a costs judge and may reverse, affirm or amend the decision appealed against or make such other order as he thinks fit<sup>21</sup>.

COMPENSATION, REWARDS AND COSTS/(4) COSTS AND ALLOWANCES/(i) Award of Costs/D. GENERAL POINTS ABOUT COSTS PAYABLE OUT OF CENTRAL FUNDS/2073. Time limits.

2073. Time limits.

The time limit within which there must be made or instituted:

- 2735 (1) a claim for costs by an applicant<sup>1</sup>, an application for a redetermination<sup>2</sup>, or a request for an appropriate authority<sup>3</sup> to give reasons for its decision on a redetermination<sup>4</sup>;
- 2736 (2) an appeal to a Senior Costs Judge<sup>5</sup> or an application for a certificate<sup>6</sup>; or may, for good reason, be extended by the appropriate authority, the Senior Costs Judge or the High Court, as the case may be<sup>8</sup>. Where an applicant without good reason has failed (or, if an extension were not granted, would fail) to comply with a time limit, the appropriate authority, the Senior Costs Judge or the High Court, as the case may be, may, in exceptional circumstances, extend the time limit and must consider whether it is reasonable in the circumstances to reduce the costs; provided that the costs are not to be reduced unless the representative has been allowed a reasonable opportunity to show cause orally or in writing why the costs should not be reduced<sup>9</sup>.
- 2737 (3) an appeal to the High Court<sup>7</sup>,

An applicant may appeal to the Senior Costs Judge against a decision made<sup>10</sup> by an appropriate authority in respect of proceedings other than proceedings before a magistrates' court and such an appeal must be instituted within 21 days of the decision being given by giving notice in writing to the Senior Costs Judge specifying the grounds of appeal<sup>11</sup>.

306 (1) the reference to 'solicitor' in the Costs in Criminal Cases (General) Regulations 1986, SI 1986/1335, reg 6(3)(a) (see PARA 2068 ante) and any reference to 'applicant' in Pt III (as amended) is to be construed as including a reference to a court appointee;

307 (2) any reference to 'costs' in Pt III (as amended) is to be construed as including a reference to the proper fee or costs of a court appointee; and 308 (3) the words after reg 7(1)(b) (see PARA 2069 ante) are omitted.

2075. Recovery of sums paid out of the Criminal Defence Service or central funds.

The Lord Chancellor must recover in accordance with directions given by him<sup>1</sup> any sums paid out of the Criminal Defence Service or central funds<sup>2</sup> where a costs order<sup>3</sup> has been made against a person in favour of a person receiving services funded for him as part of the Criminal Defence Service or a person in whose favour an order for the payment of costs out of central funds has been made<sup>4</sup>.

Where the person required to make a payment in respect of sums due under a costs order fails to do so, the payment may be recovered summarily by the Lord Chancellor as a sum adjudged to be paid as a civil debt by order of a magistrates' court<sup>5</sup>.

1 Directions so given by the Lord Chancellor may be given generally or in respect of a particular case and may require the payment of sums due under a costs order and stipulate the mode of payment and the person to whom payment is to be made: Costs in Criminal Cases (General) Regulations 1986, SI 1986/1335, reg 26(2).

2 For the meaning of 'central funds' see PARA 2058 note 13 ante.

3 For the meaning of 'costs order' see PARA 2068 note 3 ante. For these purposes, and for the purposes of the Costs in Criminal Cases (General) Regulations 1986, SI 1986/1335, reg 27 (see the text to note 5 infra), 'costs order' also includes a wasted costs order as defined by reg 3A (as added) (see PARA 2060 ante), or a third party costs order as defined by reg 3E (as added) (see PARA 2061 ante): reg 26(3) (added by SI 1991/789; amended by SI 2004/2408).

Halsbury's Laws of England/CRIMINAL LAW, EVIDENCE AND PROCEDURE (VOLUME 11(1) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1-620; VOLUME 11(2) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 621-1049; VOLUME 11(3) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1050-1557; VOLUME 11(4) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1558-2180)/23. COMPENSATION, REWARDS AND COSTS/(4) COSTS AND ALLOWANCES/(ii) Witnesses' Allowances/A. PAYMENT FROM CENTRAL FUNDS/2077. In general.

2077. In general.

Where, in any proceedings in a criminal cause or matter<sup>1</sup> in a magistrates' court, the Crown Court, a Divisional Court of the Queen's Bench Division, the Court of Appeal or the House of Lords:

- 2744 (1) a witness<sup>2</sup> attends at the instance of the defendant, a private prosecutor<sup>3</sup> or the court<sup>4</sup>;
- 2745 (2) an interpreter is required because of the defendant's lack of English<sup>5</sup>; or
- 2746 (3) a medical practitioner makes a report otherwise than in writing<sup>6</sup>, the expenses<sup>7</sup> properly incurred by that witness, interpreter or medical practitioner must be allowed<sup>8</sup> out of central funds<sup>9</sup>, unless the court directs that the expenses are not to be so allowed<sup>10</sup>.

Any entitlement to such an allowance is the same whether the witness, interpreter or medical practitioner attends on the same day in one case or more than one case<sup>11</sup>.

The Lord Chancellor must, with the consent of the Treasury, determine the rates or scales of allowances payable to witnesses, interpreters or medical practitioners<sup>12</sup>.

1 For these purposes, 'proceedings in a criminal cause or matter' includes any case in which: (1) an information charging the defendant with an offence is laid before a justice of the peace for any area but not proceeded with; or (2) the defendant is committed for trial but not tried: Costs in Criminal Cases (General) Regulations 1986, SI 1986/1335, reg 15. As from a day to be appointed, any reference (however expressed) in any enactment which is or includes a reference to an information within the meaning of the Magistrates' Courts Act 1980 s 1 (or to the laying of such an information) is to be read as including a reference to a written charge (or to the issue of a written charge): Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 30(5)(a) (not yet in force): see MAGISTRATES vol 29(2) (Reissue) PARA 681. At the date at which this volume states the law, no such day had been appointed.

2 For these purposes, 'witness' means any person properly attending to give evidence, whether or not he gives evidence or is called at the instance of one of the parties or of the court, but does not include: (1) a person attending as a witness to character only unless the court has certified that the interests of justice required his attendance; (2) a member of a police force attending court in his capacity as such; (3) a full-time officer of an institution to which the Prison Act 1952 (see PRISONS) applies attending court in his capacity as such; or (4) a prisoner in respect of any occasion on which he is conveyed to court in custody: Costs in Criminal Cases (General) Regulations 1986, SI 1986/1335, reg 15.

3 For these purposes, 'private prosecutor' means any person in whose favour an order for the payment of costs out of central funds could be made under the Prosecution of Offences Act 1985 s 17 (see PARA 2062 ante): Costs in Criminal Cases (General) Regulations 1986, SI 1986/1335, reg 15.

6 Ibid reg 16(1)(c).

7 For these purposes, 'expenses' includes compensation to a witness for his trouble or loss of time and out of pocket expenses: ibid reg 15.

8 Ie in accordance with ibid Pt V (regs 15-25): see PARA 2078 et seq post.

9 For the meaning of 'central funds' see PARA 2058 note 13 ante.

10 Costs in Criminal Cases (General) Regulations 1986, SI 1986/1335, reg 16(1). If, and only if, the court makes such a direction can the expense of the witness be claimed as a disbursement out of Criminal Defence Service funds: Practice Direction (Costs: Criminal Proceedings) [2004] 2 All ER 1070, [2004] 2 Cr App Rep 395 at IV.1, CA.

11 Costs in Criminal Cases (General) Regulations 1986, SI 1986/1335, reg 16(2). Regulation 16(2) does not apply to allowances under reg 25 (written medical reports: see PARA 2085 post): reg 16(3).

12 Ibid reg 17. A reference in Pt V (regs 15-25) to an allowance not exceeding the relevant amount means an amount calculated in accordance with the rates or scales so determined: regs 15, 17.

B. CROWN PROSECUTION SERVICE

2086. Attorney General's power to make regulations.

The Attorney General may, with the approval of the Treasury, by regulations<sup>1</sup> make such provision as he considers appropriate in relation to the costs and expenses of: (1) witnesses attending to give evidence at the instance of the Crown Prosecution Service<sup>2</sup>; and (2) any other person who, in the opinion of the Service, necessarily attends<sup>3</sup> for the purpose of the case otherwise than to give evidence<sup>4</sup>. The power so conferred on the Attorney General by head (2) above only relates to the costs and expenses of an interpreter if the interpreter is required because of the lack of English of a person attending to give evidence at the instance of the Service<sup>5</sup>.

1 In exercise of such power the Attorney General has made the Crown Prosecution Service (Witnesses' etc Allowances) Regulations 1988, SI 1988/1862: see PARA 2087 et seq post.

2 As to the Crown Prosecution Service see PARA 1079 et seq ante.

3 For these purposes, 'attending' means attending at the court or elsewhere: Prosecution of Offences Act 1985 s 14(1B) (added by the Criminal Justice Act 1988 s 166(1)).

4 Prosecution of Offences Act 1985 s 14(1)(b) (amended by the Criminal Justice Act 1988 s 166(1)). Regulations made under the Prosecution of Offences Act 1985 s 14(1)(b) (as amended) may provide that scales or rates of costs and expenses are to be determined by the Attorney General with the consent of the Treasury: s 14(3) (added by the Criminal Justice Act 1988 s 166(1)). As to the power to make such regulations see PARA 1077 note 2 ante.

5 Prosecution of Offences Act 1985 s 14(1A) (added by the Criminal Justice Act 1988 s 166(1)).

2087. In general.

Without prejudice to the power of the Director of Public Prosecutions to allow more than the prescribed entitlements where he sees fit to do so, the Crown Prosecution Service (Witnesses' etc Allowances) Regulations 1988<sup>1</sup> provide for the entitlements to costs and expenses of:

- 2755 (1) a witness who attends court or elsewhere to give evidence at the instance of the Crown Prosecution Service<sup>2</sup>, whether he gives evidence or not<sup>3</sup>; and
- 2756 (2) any other person who, in the opinion of the appropriate officer<sup>4</sup>, necessarily attends court or elsewhere for the purpose of the prosecution case otherwise than to give evidence, including an interpreter<sup>5</sup>, but only if he is required because of the lack of English of a person attending to give evidence at the instance of the Service<sup>6</sup>, in any proceedings conducted by the Director in the discharge of his functions<sup>7</sup>; but nothing in the regulations gives an entitlement to a person who, when called, refuses to give evidence<sup>8</sup>.

Such entitlements are the same for a person whether his attendance on any occasion is for the purpose of one case or more than one case<sup>9</sup>.

Where a person claims such an entitlement, it is for the appropriate officer to satisfy himself of the person's entitlement before authorising the claim to be met<sup>10</sup>.

The scales or rates of the costs and expenses for which entitlements are so provided are to be determined by the Attorney General with the consent of the Treasury<sup>11</sup>.

However, in the case of:

- 2757 (a) a member of, or special constable appointed or person employed for the purposes of, a police force, attending in his capacity as such<sup>12</sup>;
- 2758 (b) a whole-time officer of an institution to which the Prison Act 1952<sup>13</sup> applies attending in his capacity as such<sup>14</sup>;
- 2759 (c) an inmate of such an institution in respect of any occasion on which he is conveyed to attend at any place in custody<sup>15</sup>,

there is no entitlement to any allowance or reimbursement of travelling expenses<sup>16</sup>.

<sup>5</sup> For these purposes, 'interpreter' is to be construed in accordance with the qualification imposed by ibid reg 4(1)(b): reg 3.

COMPENSATION, REWARDS AND COSTS/(4) COSTS AND ALLOWANCES/(ii) Witnesses' Allowances/B. CROWN PROSECUTION SERVICE/2088. Allowances to professional witnesses for attendance.

2088. Allowances to professional witnesses for attendance.

A professional witness<sup>1</sup> is entitled for attending to give professional evidence on any day to receive a professional witness allowance, which may be either:

- 2760 (1) where the witness has necessarily incurred expenditure in providing a substitute professional person to take care of his practice during that day, a locum allowance of an amount equal to actual expenditure incurred not exceeding the relevant amount<sup>2</sup>; or
- 2761 (2) where no claim is made under head (1) above, a compensatory allowance of the relevant amount<sup>3</sup>.

Any witness who attends to give evidence, other than professional or expert evidence, and any other person who, in the opinion of the appropriate officer<sup>1</sup>, necessarily attends for the purpose of the prosecution case otherwise than to give evidence, excluding an interpreter<sup>2</sup>, whose attendance causes him:

- 2762 (1) to incur any expenditure, other than on travelling, lodging or subsistence, to which he would not otherwise be subject; or
- 2763 (2) to suffer any loss of earnings, or of benefit under the enactments relating to National Insurance, which he would otherwise have received, is entitled to receive a financial loss allowance of an amount equal to the actual expenditure incurred or loss suffered not exceeding any relevant amount<sup>3</sup> in respect of that expense or loss<sup>4</sup>.

Any witness who attends to give evidence, other than professional or expert evidence, and any other person who, in the opinion of the appropriate officer<sup>1</sup>, necessarily attends for the purpose of the prosecution case otherwise than to give evidence, excluding an interpreter<sup>2</sup>, who attends court or elsewhere is entitled to a day subsistence allowance of the relevant amount<sup>3</sup> or, if his attendance makes it necessary for him to stay overnight away from home, to an overnight subsistence allowance<sup>4</sup> of the relevant amount for each night of absence<sup>5</sup>.

Where a person who is entitled to an allowance<sup>1</sup> travels to or from the place of his attendance by public transport, including by air, he is entitled to be reimbursed the fare actually paid<sup>2</sup>.

Unless the appropriate officer<sup>3</sup> for special reason authorises otherwise, only the standard fare may be reimbursed for travel by railway<sup>4</sup>.

Where such a person travels to or from such place by air, his entitlement to be reimbursed the fare actually paid arises only if, in the opinion of the appropriate officer:

- 2764 (1) there was no reasonable alternative to travel by air and the class of fare paid was reasonable in all the circumstances<sup>5</sup>; or
- 2765 (2) travel by air was more economical in the circumstances, taking into account any savings of time resulting from the adoption of such mode of travel and its consequent effect in reducing the amount of allowances otherwise payable<sup>6</sup>.

Where such person travels to or from such place by a hired vehicle, he is entitled to be reimbursed in respect thereof:

- 2766 (a) in a case of urgency or where no public service is reasonably available, the amount of the fare and any reasonable gratuity paid<sup>7</sup>; and
- 2767 (b) in any other case, the amount of the fare for travel by the appropriate public service<sup>8</sup>.

Where such person travels to or from such place by a private motor vehicle, other than one in respect of which reimbursement is otherwise claimed by another person in respect of the same journey, he is entitled to be reimbursed in respect thereof:

- 2768 (i) where a journey to or from such place is necessarily undertaken by private motor vehicle or where the use of the vehicle is more economical in the circumstances<sup>9</sup> or is otherwise reasonable, by payment of mileage at the standard rate<sup>10</sup> and of any parking fee actually and reasonably incurred; and
- 2769 (ii) in any other case, by payment of mileage at the public transport rate<sup>11</sup>.

2093. Attorney General's power to make regulations.

The Attorney General may, with the approval of the Treasury, by regulations<sup>1</sup> make such provision as he considers appropriate in relation to the costs and expenses of: (1) witnesses attending to give evidence at the instance of the Serious Fraud Office<sup>2</sup>; and (2) any other person who, in the opinion of the Serious Fraud Office, necessarily attends<sup>3</sup> for the purpose of the case otherwise than to give evidence<sup>4</sup>. The power so conferred on the Attorney General by head (2) above only relates to the costs and expenses of an interpreter if the interpreter is required because of the lack of English of a person attending to give evidence at the instance of the Serious Fraud Office<sup>5</sup>.

1 In exercise of such power the Attorney General has made the Serious Fraud Office (Witnesses' etc Allowances) Regulations 1988, SI 1988/1863: see PARA 2094 et seq post.

2 As to the Serious Fraud Office see PARA 1089 et seq ante.

3 For these purposes, 'attends' means attends at the court or elsewhere: Criminal Justice Act 1987 s 1(15), Sch 1 para 8(5) (added by the Criminal Justice Act 1988 s 166(5)).

4 Criminal Justice Act 1987 Sch 1 para 8(1)(b) (amended by the Criminal Justice Act 1988 s 166(5)). Regulations made under the Criminal Justice Act 1987 Sch 1 para 8(1)(b) (as amended) may: (1) prescribe scales or rates of costs or expenses and specify conditions for the payment of costs or expenses; and (2) provide that scales or rates of costs and expenses are to be determined by the Attorney General with the consent of the Treasury: Sch 1 para 8(3), (4). The power to make such regulations is exercisable by statutory instrument subject to annulment in pursuance of a resolution of either House of Parliament; and any such regulations may make different provisions with respect to different cases or classes of case: Sch 1 para 9.

2094. In general.

Without prejudice to the power of the Director of the Serious Fraud Office to allow more than the prescribed entitlements where he sees fit to do so, the Serious Fraud Office (Witnesses' etc Allowances) Regulations 1988<sup>1</sup> provide for the entitlements to costs and expenses of:

- 2770 (1) a witness who attends court or elsewhere to give evidence at the instance of the Serious Fraud Office<sup>2</sup>, whether he gives evidence or not<sup>3</sup>; and
- 2771 (2) any other person who, in the opinion of the appropriate officer<sup>4</sup>, necessarily attends court or elsewhere for the purpose of the prosecution case otherwise than to give evidence, including an interpreter<sup>5</sup>, but only if he is required because of the lack of English of a person attending to give evidence at the instance of the Serious Fraud Office<sup>6</sup>,

The scales or rates of the costs and expenses for which entitlements are so provided are to be determined by the Attorney General with the consent of the Treasury<sup>11</sup>.

However, in the case of:

- 2773 (b) a whole-time officer of an institution to which the Prison Act 1952<sup>13</sup> applies attending in his capacity as such<sup>14</sup>;
- 2774 (c) an inmate of such an institution in respect of any occasion on which he is conveyed to attend at any place in custody<sup>15</sup>,

there is no entitlement to any allowance or reimbursement of travelling expenses<sup>16</sup>.

2099. Reimbursement of travelling expenses incurred by witnesses and others.

Where a person who is entitled to an allowance<sup>1</sup> travels to or from the place of his attendance by public transport, including by air, he is entitled to be reimbursed the fare actually paid<sup>2</sup>.

Unless the appropriate officer<sup>3</sup> for special reason authorises otherwise, only the standard fare may be so reimbursed for travel by railway<sup>4</sup>.

Where such a person travels to or from such place by air, his entitlement to be reimbursed the fare actually paid arises only if, in the opinion of the appropriate officer:

- 2779 (1) there was no reasonable alternative to travel by air and the class of fare paid was reasonable in all the circumstances<sup>5</sup>; or
- 2780 (2) travel by air was more economical in the circumstances, taking into account any savings of time resulting from the adoption of such mode of travel and its consequent effect in reducing the amount of allowances otherwise payable<sup>6</sup>.

Where such person travels to or from such place by a hired vehicle, he is entitled to be reimbursed in respect thereof:

- 2781 (a) in a case of urgency or where no public service is reasonably available, the amount of the fare and any reasonable gratuity paid<sup>7</sup>; and
- 2782 (b) in any other case, the amount of the fare for travel by the appropriate public service<sup>8</sup>.

Where such person travels to or from such place by a private motor vehicle, other than one in respect of which reimbursement is otherwise claimed by another person in respect of the same journey, he is entitled to be reimbursed in respect thereof:

- 2783 (i) where a journey to or from such place is necessarily undertaken by private motor vehicle or where the use of the vehicle is more economical in the circumstances<sup>9</sup> or is otherwise reasonable, by payment of mileage at the standard rate<sup>10</sup> and of any parking fee actually and reasonably incurred<sup>11</sup>; and
- 2784 (ii) in any other case, by payment of mileage at the public transport rate<sup>12</sup>.

(iii) Enforcement

2100. Enforcement of costs etc payable by parties.

Where, in specified<sup>1</sup> criminal proceedings, a court makes an order against the defendant for the payment of costs, compensation etc, any sum required to be paid by such an order is to be treated, for the purposes of collection and enforcement, as if it had been adjudged to be paid on a conviction by a magistrates' court, being:

- 2785 (1) where the order is made by a magistrates' court, that court; and
- 2786 (2) in any other case, such magistrates' court as may be specified in the order<sup>2</sup>.

Where a court makes an order against the prosecutor in specified<sup>3</sup> criminal proceedings, any sum required to be paid by such an order is enforceable as if the order were for the payment of money recoverable summarily as a civil debt<sup>4</sup>.

Any sum required to be paid by such an order<sup>5</sup> is enforceable by the High Court or a county court (otherwise than by issue of a writ of fieri facias or other process against goods or by imprisonment or attachment of earnings) as if the sum were due in pursuance of a judgment or order of the High Court or county court, as the case may be<sup>6</sup>.

Where the Crown Court makes any order against a person for the payment of costs<sup>7</sup>, compensation etc, then, if that person is before it, the Crown Court may order him to be searched<sup>8</sup>. Any money found on a person in such a search may be applied towards payment of the fine or other sum payable by him, unless the court otherwise directs; and the balance, if any, must be returned to him<sup>9</sup>.

1 The specified criminal proceedings are:

- 309 (1) where a magistrates' court, on the summary trial of an information, makes an order as to costs to be paid by the defendant to the prosecutor (Administration of Justice Act 1970 s 41, Sch 9 para 1);
- 310 (2) where a magistrates' court makes an order as to costs to be paid by the defendant in exercise of any power in that behalf conferred by regulations made under the Prosecution of Offences Act 1985 s 19(1) (see PARA 2058 ante) (Administration of Justice Act 1970 Sch 9 para 1A (added by the Prosecution of Offences Act 1985 s 31(5), Sch 1 Pt II));
- 311 (3) where an appellant to the Crown Court against conviction or sentence by a magistrates' court abandons his appeal and the magistrates' court orders him to pay costs to the other party to the appeal (Administration of Justice Act 1970 Sch 9 para 2 (amended by the Courts Act 1971 s 56(1), Sch 8 para 60));
- 312 (4) where a person appeals to the Crown Court against conviction or sentence by a magistrates' court, and the Crown Court makes an order as to costs to be paid by him (Administration of Justice Act 1970 Sch 9 para 3 (amended by the Courts Act 1971 Sch 8 para 60));

- 313 (5) where a person is prosecuted or tried on indictment before the Crown Court and is convicted, and the court makes an order as to costs to be paid by him (Administration of Justice Act 1970 Sch 9 para 4 (amended by the Criminal Law Act 1977 s 65, Sch 13; the Courts Act 1971 Sch 8 para 60; and the Prosecution of Offences Act 1985 Sch 1 Pt II));
- 314 (6) where the Crown Court makes an order as to costs to be paid by the defendant in exercise of any power in that behalf conferred by regulations made under the Prosecution of Offences Act 1985 s 19(1) (see PARA 2058 ante) (Administration of Justice Act 1970 Sch 9 para 4A (added by the Prosecution of Offences Act 1985 Sch 1 Pt II));
- 315 (7) where the criminal division of the Court of Appeal makes an order as to costs to be paid by: (a) an appellant; (b) an applicant for leave to appeal to that court; or (c) in the case of an application for leave to appeal to the House of Lords, an applicant who was the appellant before the criminal division (Administration of Justice Act 1970 Sch 9 para 6 (substituted by the Prosecution of Offences Act 1985 Sch 1 Pt II));
- 316 (8) where a court makes an order by virtue of regulations made under the Prosecution of Offences Act 1985 s 19(5) for the payment of costs by an offender (see PARA 2058 ante) (Administration of Justice Act 1970 Sch 9 para 9 (substituted by the Costs in Criminal Cases Act 1973 s 21, Sch 1 para 6; and amended by the Prosecution of Offences Act 1985 Sch 1 Pt II));
- 317 (9) where under the Powers of Criminal Courts (Sentencing) Act 2000 s 130 (as amended) (see SENTENCING AND DISPOSITION OF OFFENDERS vol 92 (2010) PARAS 375-378) a court orders the payment of compensation (Administration of Justice Act 1970 Sch 9 para 10 (substituted by the Powers of Criminal Courts (Sentencing) Act 2000 s 165(1), Sch 9 para 43(1), (2));
- 318 (10) where under the Powers of Criminal Courts (Sentencing) Act 2000 s 137 (as amended) (see SENTENCING AND DISPOSITION OF OFFENDERS vol 92 (2010) PARA 383) a court orders any fine, compensation or costs, or any sum awarded by way of satisfaction or compensation to be paid by the parent or guardian of a child or young person (Administration of Justice Act 1970 Sch 9 para 12 (amended by the Criminal Justice Act 1972 s 64(2), Sch 6 Pt II; the Powers of Criminal Courts (Sentencing) Act 2000 Sch 9 para 43(1), (3));
- 319 (11) as from a day to be appointed, where a court under the Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 161A (as added) (see SENTENCING AND DISPOSITION OF OFFENDERS vol 92 (2010) PARA 158) orders a surcharge (Administration of Justice Act 1970 Sch 9 para 13 (added by the Domestic Violence, Crime and Victims Act 2004 s 14(3) (not yet in force)). At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed.

As from days to be appointed:

- 320 (i) the reference in head (1) supra to an information within the meaning of the Magistrates' Courts Act 1980 s 1 (or to the laying of such an information) is to be read as including a reference to a written charge (or to the issue of a written charge) (Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 30(5)(a) (not yet in force): see MAGISTRATES vol 29(2) (Reissue) PARA 681);
- 321 (ii) in head (7) supra the words 'Supreme Court' are substituted for the words 'House of Lords' by the Constitutional Reform Act 2005 s 40(4), Sch 9 para 22 (not yet in force).

At the date at which this volume states the law no such days had been appointed.

Where in the case specified in head (9) supra the Crown Court thinks that the period for which the person subject to the order is otherwise liable to be committed to prison for default under the order is insufficient, it may specify a longer period for that purpose; and then, in the case of default: (A) the specified period must be substituted as the maximum for which the person may be imprisoned under the Magistrates' Courts Act 1980 s 76 (as amended) (see MAGISTRATES vol 29(2) (Reissue) PARA 860); and (B) Sch 4 para 2 (see MAGISTRATES vol 29(2) (Reissue) PARA 865) applies, with any necessary modifications, for the reduction of the specified period where, at the time of the person's imprisonment, he has made part payment under the order: Administration of Justice Act 1970 s 41(8) (substituted by the Criminal Justice Act 1988 s 106). However, the Crown Court may not specify a period of imprisonment longer than that which it could order a person to undergo on imposing on him a fine equal in amount to the sum required to be paid by the order: Administration of Justice Act 1970 s 41(8A) (added by the Criminal Justice Act 1988 s 106).

A magistrates' court may make an attachment of earnings order to secure the payment of any sum adjudged to be paid by a conviction or treated (by any enactment relating to the collection and enforcement of fines, costs, compensation or forfeited recognisances) as so adjudged to be paid: see the Attachment of Earnings Act 1971 s 1(3)(b).

2 Administration of Justice Act 1970 s 41(1). Where a magistrates' court has power to commit a person to prison for default in paying a sum due under an order enforceable as mentioned in s 41 (as amended), the court may not exercise the power unless it is satisfied that all other methods of enforcing payment have been tried or considered and either have proved unsuccessful or are likely to do so: s 41(9).

3 The specified criminal proceedings are:

322 (1) where a magistrates' court makes an order as to costs to be paid by the prosecutor in exercise of any power in that behalf conferred by regulations made under the Prosecution of Offences Act 1985 s 19(1) (see PARA 2058 ante) (Administration of Justice Act 1970 s 41(2), Sch 9 para 13 (substituted by the Prosecution of Offences Act 1985 s 31(5), Sch 1 para 7(7));

323 (2) where an appellant to the Crown Court from a magistrates' court (otherwise than against conviction or sentence) abandons his appeal and the magistrates' court orders him to pay costs to the other party to the appeal (Administration of Justice Act 1970 Sch 9 para 14 (amended by the Courts Act 1971 Sch 8 para 60));

324 (3) any order for the payment of costs made by the Crown Court, other than an order falling within the Administration of Justice Act 1970 Sch 9 Pt I (as amended) (see note 1 supra), or an order for costs to be paid out of money to be provided by Parliament (Administration of Justice Act 1970 Sch 9 para 16 (substituted by the Courts Act 1971 Sch 8 para 60));

325 (4) where the criminal division of the Court of Appeal makes an award as to costs to be paid by the respondent or, in the case of an application for leave to appeal to the House of Lords, an applicant who was the respondent before the criminal division, and does so in exercise of any power in that behalf conferred by regulations made under the Prosecution of Offences Act 1985 s 19(1) (see PARA 2058 ante) (Administration of Justice Act 1970 Sch 9 para 16A (added by the Prosecution of Offences Act 1985 Sch 1 Pt II)).

As from a day to be appointed, in head (4) supra the words 'Supreme Court' are substituted for the words 'House of Lords' by the Constitutional Reform Act 2005 s 40(4), Sch 9 para 22. At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed.

6 Ibid s 41(3).

7 Ie any order such as is mentioned in note 1 heads (4), (5) or (8) supra.

8 Powers of Criminal Courts (Sentencing) Act 2000 s 142(1). It is the duty of a prisoner custody officer acting in pursuance of prisoner escort arrangements who is on any premises in which the Crown Court is sitting to give effect to any order of that court under s 34A (as added): Criminal Justice Act 1991 s 82(4). The powers arising by virtue of s 82(4) include power to use reasonable force where necessary: s 82(5).

PROTECTION OF WITNESSES ETC UNDER SOCPA 2005/2101. Protection of persons involved in investigations or proceedings.

24. PROTECTION OF WITNESSES ETC UNDER

2101. Protection of persons involved in investigations or proceedings.

A protection provider<sup>1</sup> may make such arrangements under the Serious Organised Crime and Police Act 2005 as he considers appropriate for the purpose of protecting a person of a specified description<sup>2</sup> if:

- 2787 (1) the protection provider considers that the person's safety is at risk by virtue of his being a person of a description so specified<sup>3</sup>; and
- 2788 (2) the person is ordinarily resident in the United Kingdom<sup>4</sup>.

A protection provider may vary or cancel any such arrangements if he considers it appropriate to do so<sup>5</sup>, and if he makes or cancels arrangements he must record that he has done so<sup>6</sup>. A person is a protected person if arrangements have been made for his protection, and those arrangements have not been cancelled<sup>7</sup>.

In determining whether to make arrangements or to vary or cancel such arrangements, a protection provider must, in particular, have regard to:

- 2789 (a) the nature and extent of the risk to the person's safety<sup>8</sup>;
- 2790 (b) the cost of the arrangements<sup>9</sup>;
- 2791 (c) the likelihood that the person, and any person associated with him, will be able to adjust to any change in their circumstances which may arise from the making of the arrangements or from their variation or cancellation (as the case may be)<sup>10</sup>; and
- 2792 (d) if the person is or might be a witness in legal proceedings (whether or not in the United Kingdom), the nature of the proceedings and the importance of his being a witness in those proceedings<sup>11</sup>.

Any power which a person has (otherwise than by virtue of the power under the Serious Organised Crime and Police Act 2005 described above) to make arrangements for the protection of another person is not affected by this provision<sup>12</sup>.

The protection provider must inform the person to whom the arrangements relate of the provisions of the Serious Organised Crime and Police Act 2005<sup>13</sup> as they apply in relation to the arrangements<sup>14</sup>. If the protection provider considers that the person would be unable to understand the information, by reason of his age or of any incapacity, the information must instead be given to a person who appears to the protection provider to be interested in the welfare of the person to whom the arrangements relate, and to be the appropriate person to whom to give the information<sup>15</sup>.

1 A protection provider is: (1) a chief officer of a police force in England and Wales; (2) a chief constable of a police force in Scotland; (3) the Chief Constable of the Police Service of Northern Ireland; (4) the Director General of SOCA; (5) any of the Commissioners for Her Majesty's Revenue and Customs; (6) the Director of the Scottish Drug Enforcement Agency; (7) a person designated by any such person to exercise his functions under

(4) a person who has been given a restricted use undertaking under s 72(1) (see PARA 1478 ante) if the undertaking continues to have effect in relation to him (Sch 5 para 3(2)); (5) a person who is or has been a member of a jury (Sch 5 para 4); (6) a person who holds or has held judicial office (whether or not in the United Kingdom) (Sch 5 para 5); (7) a person who is or has been a justice of the peace or who holds or has held a position comparable to that of a justice of the peace in a place outside the United Kingdom (Sch 5 para 6); (8) a person who is or has been a member of an international tribunal which has jurisdiction in criminal matters (Sch 5 para 7); (9) a person who conducts or has conducted criminal prosecutions (whether or not in the United Kingdom) (Sch 5 para 8); PROTECTION OF WITNESSES ETC UNDER SOCPA 2005/2102. Joint arrangements and transfer of responsibility between protection providers.

2102. Joint arrangements and transfer of responsibility between protection providers.

Arrangements may be made by two or more protection providers<sup>1</sup> acting jointly<sup>2</sup>, and if they are, any powers conferred on such a protection provider<sup>3</sup> are exercisable in relation to the arrangements by (1) all of the protection providers acting together<sup>4</sup>; or (2) one of the protection providers, or some of the protection providers acting together, with the agreement of the others<sup>5</sup>.

A protection provider who makes arrangements for the protection of a person of a specified description may agree with another protection provider that, as from a date specified in the agreement the protection provider will cease to discharge any responsibilities which he has in relation to the arrangements, and the other protection provider will discharge those responsibilities instead<sup>6</sup>. If such an agreement is made, any powers conferred on a protection provider<sup>7</sup> are, as from the date specified in the agreement, exercisable by the other protection provider as if he had made the arrangements for the protection of the specified person<sup>8</sup>. Each protection provider who makes an agreement must record that he has done so<sup>9</sup>.

1 For the meaning of 'protection provider' see PARA 2101 note 1 ante.

2 'Public authority' includes any person certain of whose functions are of a public nature but does not include: (1) a court or tribunal; (2) either House of Parliament or a person exercising functions in connection with proceedings in Parliament; or (3) the Scottish Parliament or a person exercising functions in connection with proceedings in the Scottish Parliament: Serious Organised Crime and Police Act 2005 s 85(3).

PROTECTION OF WITNESSES ETC UNDER SOCPA 2005/2107. Arrangements made before 1 April 2006.

Where arrangements were made before 1 April 2006<sup>1</sup> by a protection provider<sup>2</sup>, or any person acting with his authority, for the purpose of protecting a person of a specified description<sup>3</sup> then if the following three conditions are satisfied, the arrangements are to be treated as having been made by the protection provider under the relevant provision of the Serious Organised Crime and Police Act 2005<sup>4</sup>.

The first condition is that the protection provider could have made the arrangements under the relevant provision of the Serious Organised Crime and Police Act 2005<sup>5</sup> had it been in force at the time when the arrangements were made<sup>6</sup>. The second condition is that the arrangements were in operation immediately before the commencement of the relevant statutory provision<sup>7</sup>. The third condition is that the protection provider determines that it is appropriate to treat the arrangements as having been made under that provision<sup>8</sup>.

If (1) at any time before 1 April 2006, arrangements were made by the Director General of the National Criminal Intelligence Service, the Director General of the National Crime Squad, or any of the Commissioners of Her Majesty's Customs and Excise (now the Commissioners for Her Majesty's Revenue and Customs)<sup>9</sup>, or any person acting with the authority of such a person, for the purpose of protecting a specified person<sup>10</sup>; and (2) functions in relation to the arrangements were, at any time before the end of the period of six months from 1 April 2006<sup>11</sup>, exercisable by a protection provider<sup>12</sup>, then the provisions described above<sup>13</sup> apply in relation to the arrangements as if they had been made by the protection provider<sup>14</sup>. Accordingly, if the three conditions<sup>15</sup> are satisfied in relation to the arrangements, they are to be treated as having been made by the protection provider under the relevant provision<sup>16</sup> of the Serious Organised Crime and Police Act 2005<sup>17</sup>.

Provision is made<sup>1</sup> for the purposes of:

- 2797 (1) enabling the enforcement authority<sup>2</sup> to recover, in civil proceedings before the High Court, property<sup>3</sup> which is, or represents, property obtained through unlawful conduct<sup>4</sup>; and
- 2798 (2) enabling cash<sup>5</sup> which is, or represents, property obtained through unlawful conduct, or which is intended to be used in unlawful conduct, to be forfeited in civil proceedings before a magistrates' court<sup>6</sup>.

The powers conferred by these provisions are exercisable in relation to any property (including cash) whether or not any proceedings have been brought for an offence in connection with the property<sup>7</sup>.

1    Ie in the Proceeds of Crime Act 2002 Pt 5 (ss 240-316) (as amended) (see PARA 2148 et seq post).

2    The enforcement authority is the Director of the Assets Recovery Agency: ibid s 316(1).

In spite of s 1(6), nothing which the Director is authorised or required to do for the purposes of Pt 5 (as amended) may be done by a member of a police force: s 313(1)(a). For these purposes, 'member of a police force' has the same meaning as in the Police Act 1996 (see POLICE vol 36(1) (2007 Reissue) PARA 102) and includes a person who would be a member of a police force but for s 97(3) (police officers engaged on service outside their force: see POLICE vol 36(1) (2007 Reissue) PARA 428): Proceeds of Crime Act 2002 s 313(2)(a).

3    'Property' is all property wherever situated and includes money (ibid s 316(4)(a)), all forms of property, real or personal, heritable or moveable (s 316(4)(b)), and things in action and other intangible or incorporeal property (s 316(4)(c)). Any reference to a person's property (whether expressed as a reference to the property he holds or otherwise) is to be read as follows (s 316(5)): in relation to land, it is a reference to any interest which he holds in the land (s 316(6)); and in relation to property other than land, it is a reference either to the property (if it belongs to him) (s 316(7)(a)) or to any other interest which he holds in the property (s 316(7)(b)). 'Interest', in relation to land, means any legal estate and any equitable interest or power (in the case of land in England and Wales or Northern Ireland) or any estate, interest, servitude or other heritable right in or over land, including a heritable security (in the case of land in Scotland); and in relation to property other than land includes any right (including a right to possession of the property): s 316(1).

4    Ibid s 240(1)(a). As to 'unlawful conduct', and as to when property is obtained through unlawful conduct, see PARA 2148 post.

5    'Cash' means: (1) notes and coins in any currency (ibid ss 289(6)(a), 316(1)); (2) postal orders (s 289(6)(b)); (3) cheques of any kind, including travellers' cheques (s 289(6)(c)); (4) bankers' drafts (s 289(6)(d)); and (5) bearer bonds and bearer shares (s 289(6)(e)), found at any place in the United Kingdom (s 289(6)). 'Cash' also includes any kind of monetary instrument which is found at any place in the United Kingdom, if the instrument is specified by the Secretary of State by an order made after consultation with the Scottish Ministers: s 289(7). At the date at which this volume states the law no such order had been made. As to the making of orders under the Proceeds of Crime Act 2002 see PARA 789 note 7 ante. As to the meaning of 'United Kingdom' see PARA 45 note 2 ante.

6    Ibid s 240(1)(b).

7 Ibid s 240(2). The emphasis of the Proceeds of Crime Act 2002 is on the criminal side of the recovery of the proceeds of crime process (see SENTENCING AND DISPOSITION OF OFFENDERS vol 92 (2010) PARA 390 et seq), and civil process is intended to be subsidiary to the criminal process: Singh v Director of the Assets Recovery Agency [2005] EWCA Civ 580, [2005] 1 WLR 3747, [2005] Crim LR 665.

2148. Unlawful conduct; property obtained through unlawful conduct.

Conduct occurring in any part of the United Kingdom<sup>1</sup> is 'unlawful conduct' if it is unlawful under the criminal law of that part of the United Kingdom<sup>2</sup>. Conduct which: (1) occurs in a country or territory outside the United Kingdom and is unlawful under the criminal law applying in that country or territory<sup>3</sup>; and (2) if it occurred in a part of the United Kingdom, would be unlawful under the criminal law of that part of the United Kingdom, is also unlawful conduct<sup>4</sup>. The court must decide on a balance of probabilities whether it is proved that any matters alleged to constitute unlawful conduct have occurred<sup>5</sup> or that any person intended to use any cash<sup>6</sup> in unlawful conduct<sup>7</sup>.

A person obtains property<sup>8</sup> through unlawful conduct (whether his own conduct or another's) if he obtains property by or in return for the conduct<sup>9</sup>. In deciding whether any property was obtained through unlawful conduct, it is immaterial whether or not any money, goods or services were provided in order to put the person in question in a position to carry out the conduct<sup>10</sup>; and it is not necessary to show that the conduct was of a particular kind if it is shown that the property was obtained through conduct of one of a number of kinds, each of which would have been unlawful conduct<sup>11</sup>.

2149. Recoverable property.

Property<sup>1</sup> obtained through unlawful conduct<sup>2</sup> is 'recoverable property'<sup>3</sup>. But if property obtained through unlawful conduct has been disposed of (since it was so obtained)<sup>4</sup>, it is recoverable property only if it is held by a person into whose hands it may be followed<sup>5</sup>.

In general, recoverable property obtained through unlawful conduct may be followed into the hands of a person obtaining it on a disposal by the person who through the conduct obtained the property<sup>6</sup> or by a person into whose hands it may (by virtue of this provision) be followed<sup>7</sup>.

Where property obtained through unlawful conduct ('the original property') is or has been recoverable, property which represents the original property is also recoverable property<sup>8</sup>.

If a person enters into a transaction by which:

- 2799 (1) he disposes of recoverable property, whether the original property or property which (by virtue of these provisions) represents the original property<sup>9</sup>; and the other property represents the original property<sup>11</sup>.
- 2800 (2) he obtains other property in place of it<sup>10</sup>,

If a person disposes of recoverable property which represents the original property, the property may be followed into the hands of the person who obtains it (and it continues to represent the original property)<sup>12</sup>.

If a person's recoverable property is mixed with other property (whether his property or another's), the portion of the mixed property which is attributable to the recoverable property represents the property obtained through unlawful conduct<sup>13</sup>.

Where a person who has recoverable property obtains further property consisting of profits accruing in respect of the recoverable property, the further property is to be treated as representing the property obtained through unlawful conduct<sup>14</sup>.

If a person disposes of recoverable property, and the person who obtains it on the disposal does so in good faith, for value and without notice that it was recoverable property, the property may not be followed into that person's hands and, accordingly, it ceases to be recoverable<sup>15</sup>. There are a number of other exceptions under which property ceases to be recoverable property<sup>16</sup>. In addition, orders may be made providing that property within the terms of the order is not recoverable<sup>17</sup>.

If a person grants an interest in his recoverable property, the question whether the interest is also recoverable is to be determined in the same manner as it is on any other disposal of recoverable property<sup>18</sup>. Accordingly, on his granting an interest in the property ('the property in question'):

- 2801 (a) where the property in question is property obtained through unlawful conduct, the interest is also to be treated as obtained through that conduct<sup>19</sup>; and

1 For the meaning of 'property' see PARA 2147 note 3 ante.

2 For the meaning of 'unlawful conduct', and as to when property is obtained through unlawful conduct, see PARA 2148 ante.

3 Proceeds of Crime Act 2002 s 304(1). For the purposes of Pt 5 (ss 240-316) (as amended) and Pt 8 (ss 341-416), 'recoverable property' is to be read in accordance with ss 304-310 (see the text and notes 4-20 infra): ss 316(1), 414(2), 416(9).

4 References to a person disposing of his property include a reference to his disposing of a part of it or to his granting an interest in it or to both; and references to the property disposed of are references to any property obtained on the disposal: s 314(1). 'Part' in relation to property, includes a portion: s 316(1). A person who makes a payment to another is to be treated as making a disposal of his property to the other, whatever form the payment takes: s 314(2). Where a person's property passes to another under a will or intestacy or by operation of law, it is to be treated as disposed of by him to the other: s 314(3). A person is only to be treated as having obtained his property for value in a case where he gave unexecuted consideration if the consideration has become executed consideration: s 314(4). For the meaning of 'interest' see PARA 2147 note 3 ante.

(2) CIVIL RECOVERY IN THE HIGH COURT

(i) Proceedings for Recovery Orders

2150. Proceedings for recovery orders.

Proceedings for a recovery order<sup>1</sup> may be taken by the enforcement authority<sup>2</sup> in the High Court against any person who the authority thinks holds recoverable property<sup>3</sup>.

The enforcement authority must serve the claim form<sup>4</sup>:

- 2803 (1) on the respondent<sup>5</sup>; and
- 2804 (2) unless the court dispenses with service, on any other person who the authority thinks holds any associated property<sup>6</sup> which the authority wishes to be subject to a recovery order<sup>7</sup>, wherever domiciled, resident or present<sup>8</sup>.

If any property which the enforcement authority wishes to be subject to a recovery order is not specified in the claim form, it must be described in the form in general terms; and the form must state whether it is alleged to be recoverable property or associated property<sup>9</sup>.

The enforcement authority may not start proceedings for a recovery order unless the authority reasonably believes that the aggregate value of the recoverable property which it wishes to be subject to such an order is not less than £10,000<sup>10</sup>.

In seeking to recover money pursuant to these provisions<sup>11</sup> there is no reason why the Director of the Assets Recovery Agency cannot apply<sup>12</sup> for summary judgment<sup>13</sup>.

3 Proceeds of Crime Act 2002 s 243(1). For the meaning of 'property' see PARA 2147 note 3 ante. For the meaning of 'recoverable property' see PARA 2149 ante. Nothing in ss 245A-255 (as amended) (see PARAS 2151-2153 post) limits any power of the court apart from those provisions to grant interim relief in connection with proceedings (including prospective proceedings) under ss 243-288 (as amended): s 243(5) (added by the Serious Organised Crime and Police Act 2005 s 109, Sch 6 para 9). An order may be made providing that property within the terms of the order is not recoverable property: Proceeds of Crime Act 2002 s 309; and see the Proceeds of Crime Act 2002 (Exemption from Civil Recovery) Order 2003, SI 2003/336. As to the making of orders under the Proceeds of Crime Act 2002 see PARA 789 note 7 ante. Property which, apart from the Proceeds of Crime Act 2002 (Exemption from Civil Recovery) Order 2003, SI 2003/336, would be recoverable property and is: (1) prescribed in Schedule Pt 1 (art 2(1)(a)); or (2) disposed of in pursuance of an enactment prescribed in Schedule Pt 2 (art 2(1)(b)), is not recoverable or (as the case may be) associated property (art 2(1)). However, where particular circumstances are prescribed in Schedule Pt 2 in relation to an enactment, head (2) supra applies only in those circumstances: art 2(2).

4 The references in the text to the 'claim form' include the particulars of claim, where they are served subsequently: Proceeds of Crime Act 2002 s 243(4).

5 Ibid s 243(2)(a). 'Respondent' means: (1) where proceedings are brought by the enforcement authority by virtue of Pt 5 Ch 2 (ss 242-288) (as amended), the person against whom the proceedings are brought; and (2) where no such proceedings have been brought but the enforcement authority has applied for a property freezing order (see PARAS 2151-2152 post), an interim receiving order (see PARA 2153 post), a prohibitory property order or an interim administration order, the person against whom he intends to bring such proceedings: s 316(1) (amended by the Serious Organised Crime and Police Act 2005 s 109, Sch 6 paras 4, 22(1), (3)). Prohibitory property orders and interim administration orders are Scottish orders which are not dealt with in this work.

6 'Associated property' means property of any of the following descriptions (including property held by the respondent) which is not itself the recoverable property: (1) any interest in the recoverable property (Proceeds of Crime Act 2002 ss 245(1)(a), 316(1)); (2) any other interest in the property in which the recoverable property subsists (s 245(1)(b)); (3) if the recoverable property is a tenancy in common, the tenancy of the other tenant (s 245(1)(c)); (4) if (in Scotland) the recoverable property is owned in common, the interest of the other owner (s 245(1)(d)); and (5) if the recoverable property is part of a larger property, but not a separate part, the remainder of that property (s 245(1)(e)). References to property being 'associated' with recoverable property are to be read accordingly: s 245(2). No property is to be treated as 'associated' with recoverable property consisting of rights under a pension scheme (within the meaning of ss 273-275): s 245(3). An order may be made providing that property within the terms of the order is not associated property: s 309; and see the Proceeds of Crime Act 2002 (Exemption from Civil Recovery) Order 2003, SI 2003/336. For the purposes of Pt 5 (ss 240-316) (as amended) and Pt 8 (ss 341-416), 'associated property' has the meaning given by s 245: ss 316(1), 414(2), 416(9).

2150 Proceedings for recovery orders

NOTES 3, 6--SI 2003/336 amended: SI 2009/2054.

Halsbury's Laws of England/CRIMINAL LAW, EVIDENCE AND PROCEDURE (VOLUME 11(1) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1-620; VOLUME 11(2) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 621-1049; VOLUME 11(3) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1050-1557; VOLUME 11(4) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1558-2180)/26. CRIMINAL CONVICTION AND CRIMINAL RECORD CERTIFICATES/ (2) CIVIL RECOVERY IN THE HIGH COURT/ (ii) Property Freezing Orders/2151. Application for property freezing order.

(ii) Property Freezing Orders

2151. Application for property freezing order.

Where the enforcement authority<sup>1</sup> may take proceedings for a recovery order<sup>2</sup> in the High Court, the authority may apply to the court for a property freezing order (whether before or after starting the proceedings)<sup>3</sup>.

A property freezing order is an order that:

- 2805 (1) specifies or describes the property to which it applies<sup>4</sup>; and
- 2806 (2) subject to any exclusions<sup>5</sup>, prohibits any person to whose property the order applies from in any way dealing with the property<sup>6</sup>.

The court may make a property freezing order on an application if it is satisfied that the first condition below is met and, where applicable, that the second condition below is met<sup>7</sup>.

The first condition is that there is a good arguable case that the property to which the application for the order relates is or includes recoverable property<sup>8</sup>, and that, if any of it is not recoverable property, it is associated property<sup>9</sup>. The second condition is that, if:

- 2807 (a) the property to which the application for the order relates includes property alleged to be associated property<sup>10</sup>; and
- 2808 (b) the enforcement authority has not established the identity of the person who holds it<sup>11</sup>, the authority has taken all reasonable steps to do so<sup>12</sup>.

If it has not already started proceedings for a recovery order, the enforcement authority may not apply for a property freezing order unless it reasonably believes that the aggregate value of the recoverable property which it wishes to be subject to the recovery order is not less than £10,000<sup>13</sup>.

Provision is made for the mutual enforcement of freezing orders issued by the authorities of the member states of the European Community<sup>14</sup>.

1 For the meaning of 'enforcement authority' see PARA 2147 note 2 ante.

2 For the meaning of 'recovery order' see PARA 2154 post.

3 Proceeds of Crime Act 2002 s 245A(1) (ss 245A-245D added by the Serious Organised Crime and Police Act 2005 s 98(1)). An application for a property freezing order may be made without notice if the circumstances are such that notice of the application would prejudice any right of the enforcement authority to obtain a recovery order in respect of any property: Proceeds of Crime Act 2002 s 245A(3) (as so added). For the meaning of 'property' see PARA 2147 note 3 ante.

See Practice Direction--Proceeds of Crime Act 2002 Pts 5 and 8: Civil Recovery (RSC PD 115B) PARAS I.2.1, I.2.2, II.5.1, II.5.6.

4 Proceeds of Crime Act 2002 s 245A(2)(a) (as added: see note 3 supra).

5 See ibid s 245C(1)(b), (2) (as added); and PARA 2152 post.

6 Ibid s 245A(2)(b) (as added: see note 3 supra). 'Dealing' with property includes disposing of it, taking possession of it or removing it from the United Kingdom: s 316(1). As to references to a person 'disposing' of his property see PARA 2149 note 4 ante. As to the meaning of 'United Kingdom' see PARA 45 note 2 ante.

While a property freezing order has effect: (1) the court may stay any action, execution or other legal process in respect of the property to which the order applies (s 245D(1)(a) (as so added)); and (2) no distress may be levied against the property to which the order applies except with the leave of the court and subject to any terms the court may impose (s 245D(1)(b) (as so added)). See also s 245D(2)-(4) (as so added).

The registration Acts (ie the Land Registration Act 1925 (repealed), the Land Charges Act 1972 and the Land Registration Act 2002 (see LAND REGISTRATION): see the Proceeds of Crime Act 2002 s 248(2) (prospectively amended, so as to remove the reference to the Land Registration Act 1925, by the Proceeds of Crime Act 2002 s 457, Sch 12)):

326 (a) apply in relation to property freezing orders as they apply in relation to orders which affect land and are made by the court for the purpose of enforcing judgements or recognisances (Proceeds of Crime Act 2002 s 248(1)(a) (s 248(1), (3) amended by the Serious Organised Crime and Police Act 2005 s 109, Sch 6 para 11)); and

327 (b) apply in relation to applications for property freezing orders as they apply in relation to other pending land actions (Proceeds of Crime Act 2002 s 248(1)(b) (as so amended)).

However, no notice may be entered in the register of title under the Land Registration Act 2002 in respect of a property freezing order: Proceeds of Crime Act 2002 s 248(3) (as so amended)). The object of these provisions is to ensure that property freezing orders are registered as pending land actions.

If a person acting as an insolvency practitioner (see SENTENCING AND DISPOSITION OF OFFENDERS vol 92 (2010) PARA 424 note 5) seizes or disposes of any property in relation to which his functions are not exercisable because it is for the time being subject to a property freezing order made under s 245A (as added) or an interim receiving order made under s 246 (see PARA 2153 post) (or corresponding Scottish provisions), and at the time of the seizure or disposal he believes on reasonable grounds that he is entitled (whether in pursuance of an order of a court or otherwise) to seize or dispose of the property (s 432(1)(b) (amended by the Serious Organised Crime and Police Act 2005 s 109, Sch 6 paras 4, 23)), he is not liable to any person in respect of any loss or damage resulting from the seizure or disposal, except so far as the loss or damage is caused by his negligence (Proceeds of Crime Act 2002 s 432(2)) (without prejudice to the generality of any provision of the Insolvency Act 1986 or any other Act or Order which confers protection from liability on him (Proceeds of Crime Act 2002 s 432(4))), and he has a lien on the property or the proceeds of its sale for such of his expenses as were incurred in connection with the liquidation, bankruptcy, sequestration or other proceedings in relation to which he purported to make the seizure or disposal (s 432(3)(a)) and for so much of his remuneration as may reasonably be assigned to his acting in connection with those proceedings (s 432(3)(b)).

2151-2152 Property Freezing Orders

See also Proceeds of Crime Act 2002 s 245E (ss 245E-245G added by Serious Crime Act 2007 s 83(1)) which provides for a new type of receiver in civil recovery proceedings whose only function is to manage property subject to a property freezing order. See further 2002 Act s 245F (powers of receivers appointed under s 245E) and s 245G (supervision of s 245E receiver and variations). The Taxes Management Act 1970 ss 75, 77 (receivers: income tax and capital gains tax) do not apply in relation to a receiver appointed under the Proceeds of Crime Act 2002 s 245E: Sch 10 para 1(ca) (added by 2007 Act s 83(3)).

CRIMINAL CONVICTION AND CRIMINAL RECORD CERTIFICATES/ (2) CIVIL RECOVERY IN THE HIGH COURT/ (ii) Property Freezing Orders/2152. Variation and setting aside of property freezing order.

2152. Variation and setting aside of property freezing order.

The court may at any time vary or set aside a property freezing order<sup>1</sup>. If the court makes an interim receiving order<sup>2</sup> that applies to all of the property<sup>3</sup> to which a property freezing order applies, it must set aside the property freezing order<sup>4</sup>. If the court makes an interim receiving order that applies to some but not all of the property to which a property freezing order applies, it must vary the property freezing order so as to exclude any property to which the interim receiving order applies<sup>5</sup>. If the court decides that any property to which a property freezing order applies is neither recoverable property<sup>6</sup> nor associated property<sup>7</sup>, it must vary the order so as to exclude the property<sup>8</sup>. Before exercising a power<sup>9</sup> to vary or set aside a property freezing order, the court must (as well as giving the parties to the proceedings an opportunity to be heard) give such an opportunity to any person who may be affected by its decision<sup>10</sup>.

The power to vary a property freezing order includes (in particular) power to make exclusions as follows:

- 2809 (1) power to exclude property from the order<sup>11</sup>; and
- 2810 (2) power, otherwise than by excluding property from the order, to make exclusions from the prohibition on dealing with the property<sup>12</sup> to which the order applies<sup>13</sup>.

Exclusions from the prohibition on dealing with the property to which the order applies (other than exclusions of property from the order) may also be made when the order is made<sup>14</sup>. An exclusion may, in particular, make provision for the purpose of enabling any person to meet his reasonable living expenses<sup>15</sup> or to carry on any trade, business, profession or occupation<sup>16</sup>. An exclusion may be made subject to conditions<sup>17</sup>.

Where the court exercises the power to make an exclusion for the purpose of enabling a person to meet legal expenses that he has incurred, or may incur, in respect of proceedings<sup>18</sup>, it must ensure that the exclusion:

- 2811 (a) is limited to reasonable legal expenses that the person has reasonably incurred or that he reasonably incurs<sup>19</sup>;
- 2812 (b) specifies the total amount that may be released for legal expenses in pursuance of the exclusion<sup>20</sup>; and
- 2813 (c) is made subject to the required conditions<sup>21</sup> in addition to any other conditions<sup>22</sup> imposed<sup>23</sup>.

The court, in deciding whether to make an exclusion for the purpose of enabling a person to meet legal expenses of his in respect of proceedings<sup>24</sup>:

- 2814 (i) must have regard (in particular) to the desirability of the person being represented in any such proceedings in which he is a participant<sup>25</sup>; and
- 2815 (ii) must, where the person is the respondent<sup>26</sup>, disregard the possibility that legal representation of the person in any such proceedings might, were an exclusion not made, be funded by the Legal Services Commission or the Northern Ireland Legal Services Commission<sup>27</sup>.

The power to make exclusions must<sup>28</sup> be exercised with a view to ensuring, so far as practicable, that the satisfaction of any right of the enforcement authority<sup>29</sup> to recover the property obtained through unlawful conduct<sup>30</sup> is not unduly prejudiced<sup>31</sup>.

Halsbury's Laws of England/CRIMINAL LAW, EVIDENCE AND PROCEDURE (VOLUME 11(1) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1-620; VOLUME 11(2) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 621-1049; VOLUME 11(3) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1050-1557; VOLUME 11(4) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1558-2180)/26. CRIMINAL CONVICTION AND CRIMINAL RECORD CERTIFICATES/ (2) CIVIL RECOVERY IN THE HIGH COURT/(iii) Interim Receiving Orders/2153. Interim receiving orders.

(iii) Interim Receiving Orders

2153. Interim receiving orders.

Where the enforcement authority<sup>1</sup> may take proceedings for a recovery order<sup>2</sup> in the High Court, the authority may apply to the court for an interim receiving order (whether before or after starting the proceedings)<sup>3</sup>. If it has not already started proceedings for a recovery order, the enforcement authority may not apply for an interim receiving order unless it reasonably believes that the aggregate value of the recoverable property<sup>4</sup> which it wishes to be subject to the recovery order is not less than £10,000<sup>5</sup>.

An interim receiving order is an order for the detention, custody or preservation of property<sup>6</sup>, and the appointment of an interim receiver<sup>7</sup>.

An application for an interim receiving order may be made without notice if the circumstances are such that notice of the application would prejudice any right of the enforcement authority to obtain a recovery order in respect of any property<sup>8</sup>. The court may make an interim receiving order on the application if it is satisfied that the first condition below and, where applicable, the second is met<sup>9</sup>.

The first condition is that there is a good arguable case that the property to which the application for the order relates is or includes recoverable property<sup>10</sup>, and that, if any of it is not recoverable property, it is associated property<sup>11</sup>. The second condition is that, if the property to which the application for the order relates includes property alleged to be associated property<sup>12</sup> and the enforcement authority has not established the identity of the person who holds it, the authority has taken all reasonable steps to do so<sup>13</sup>.

An interim receiving order may authorise or require the interim receiver to exercise any of a number of specified<sup>14</sup> powers (namely, power to seize property to which the order applies<sup>15</sup>, to obtain information or to require a person to answer any question<sup>16</sup>, to enter any premises<sup>17</sup> in the United Kingdom to which the interim order applies<sup>18</sup> and to take a number of specified steps<sup>19</sup>, and to manage any property to which the order applies<sup>20</sup>) and to take any other steps the court thinks appropriate<sup>21</sup>, for the purpose of securing the detention, custody or preservation of the property to which the order applies or of taking any steps under the following<sup>22</sup> provisions<sup>23</sup>.

An interim receiving order must require the interim receiver to take any steps which the court thinks necessary to establish whether or not the property to which the order applies is recoverable property or associated property<sup>24</sup> and whether or not any other property is recoverable property (in relation to the same unlawful conduct<sup>25</sup>) and, if it is, who holds it<sup>26</sup>.

An interim receiving order must, subject to any permitted exclusions made<sup>27</sup>, prohibit any person to whose property the order applies from dealing with the property<sup>28</sup>.

An interim receiving order must require the interim receiver to inform the enforcement authority and the court as soon as reasonably practicable if he thinks that:

- 2816 (1) any property to which the order applies by virtue of a claim that it is recoverable property is not recoverable property<sup>29</sup>;

- 2817 (2) any property to which the order applies by virtue of a claim that it is associated property is not associated property<sup>30</sup>;
- 2818 (3) any property to which the order does not apply is recoverable property (in relation to the same unlawful conduct) or associated property<sup>31</sup>; or
- 2819 (4) any property to which the order applies is held by a person who is different from the person it is claimed holds it<sup>32</sup>, or if he thinks that there has been any other material change of circumstances<sup>33</sup>. An interim receiving order must require the interim receiver to report his findings to the court<sup>34</sup> and to serve copies of his report on the enforcement authority and on any person who holds any property to which the order applies or who may otherwise be affected by the report<sup>35</sup>.

While an interim receiving order has effect:

- 2820 (a) the court may stay any action, execution or other legal process in respect of the property to which the order applies<sup>36</sup>; and
- 2821 (b) no distress may be levied against the property to which the order applies except with the leave of the court and subject to any terms the court may impose<sup>37</sup>.

The court may at any time vary or set aside an order<sup>38</sup>. If the court decides that any property to which an interim receiving order applies is neither recoverable property nor associated property, it must vary the order so as to exclude it<sup>39</sup>. The court may vary an interim receiving order so as to exclude from the property to which the order applies any property which is alleged to be associated property if the court thinks that the satisfaction of any right of the enforcement authority to recover the property obtained through unlawful conduct will not be prejudiced<sup>40</sup>.

1 For the meaning of 'enforcement authority' see PARA 2147 note 2 ante.

2 For the meaning of 'recovery order' see PARA 2154 post.

3 Proceeds of Crime Act 2002 s 246(1). See Practice Direction--Proceeds of Crime Act 2002 Pts 5 and 8: Civil Recovery (RSC PD 115B) PARAS I.2.1, I.2.2, II.5.1, II.5.6. In its application for an interim receiving order, the enforcement authority must nominate a suitably qualified person for appointment as interim receiver, but the nominee may not be a member of the staff of the Assets Recovery Agency: Proceeds of Crime Act 2002 s 246(7). The extent of the power to make an interim receiving order is not limited by ss 247-255: s 246(8).

4 For the meaning of 'property' see PARA 2147 note 3 ante. For the meaning of 'recoverable property' see PARA 2149 ante.

5 See the Proceeds of Crime Act 2002 s 287(1), (3); the Proceeds of Crime Act 2002 (Financial Threshold for Civil Recovery) Order 2003, SI 2003/175, art 2; and PARA 2163 post.

6 Proceeds of Crime Act 2002 s 246(2)(a). An interim receiving order may require any person to whose property the order applies to bring the property to a place in England and Wales specified by the interim receiver or to place it in the custody of the interim receiver (if, in either case, he is able to do so) (s 250(1)(a)) and to do anything he is reasonably required to do by the interim receiver for the preservation of the property (s 250(1)(b)). An interim receiving order may require any person to whose property the order applies to bring any documents relating to the property which are in his possession or control to a place in England and Wales specified by the interim receiver or to place them in the custody of the interim receiver: s 250(2). For these purposes, 'document' means anything in which information of any description is recorded: s 250(2).

The registration Acts (ie the Land Registration Act 1925 (repealed), the Land Charges Act 1972 and the Land Registration Act 2002 (see LAND REGISTRATION): see the Proceeds of Crime Act 2002 s 248(2) (prospectively amended, so as to remove the reference to the Land Registration Act 1925, by the Proceeds of Crime Act 2002 s 457, Sch 12));

328 (1) apply in relation to interim receiving orders as they apply in relation to orders which affect land and are made by the court for the purpose of enforcing judgements or recognisances (s

248(1)(a) (s 248(1), (3) amended by the Serious Organised Crime and Police Act 2005 s 109, Sch 6 para 11)); and 329 (2) apply in relation to applications for interim receiving orders as they apply in relation to other pending land actions (Proceeds of Crime Act 2002 s 248(1)(b) (as so amended)).

However, no notice may be entered in the register of title under the Land Registration Act 2002 in respect of an interim receiving order: Proceeds of Crime Act 2002 s 248(3) (as so amended). Until a day to be appointed a person applying for an interim receiving order must be treated for the purposes of the Land Registration Act 1925 s 57 (repealed) (inhibitions) as a person interested in relation to any registered land to which the application relates, or to which an interim receiving order made in pursuance of the application relates: Proceeds of Crime Act 2002 s 248(4) (prospectively repealed by s 457, Sch 12). At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed. The object of the provisions in s 248 (as amended) is to ensure that interim receiving orders are registered as pending land actions.

7 Ibid s 246(2)(b). The provisions of the Taxes Management Act 1970 ss 75, 77 (receivers: income tax and capital gains tax: see CAPITAL GAINS TAXATION vol 5(1) (2004 Reissue) PARA 418; INCOME TAXATION vol 23(2) (Reissue) PARA 1247) do not apply in relation to an interim receiver appointed under the Proceeds of Crime Act 2002 s 246: s 488, Sch 10 para 1(d).

10 Ibid s 246(5)(a).

11 Ibid s 246(5)(b). For the meaning of 'associated property' see PARA 2150 note 6 ante.

12 Ibid s 246(6)(a).

13 Ibid s 246(6)(b).

15 Ibid Sch 6 para 1.

16 Ibid Sch 6 para 2(1). A requirement imposed in the exercise of this power has effect in spite of any restriction on the disclosure of information (however imposed): Sch 6 para 2(2). An answer given by a person in pursuance of such a requirement may not be used in evidence against him in criminal proceedings (Sch 6 para 2(3)), although this does not apply:

330 (1) on a prosecution for an offence under the Perjury Act 1911 s 5 (see PARA 717 ante), the Criminal Law (Consolidation) (Scotland) Act 1995 s 44(2) or the Perjury (Northern Ireland) Order 1979, SI 1979/1709 (NI 16), art 10 (false statements) (Proceeds of Crime Act 2002 Sch 6 para 2(4)(a)); or

331 (2) on a prosecution for some other offence where, in giving evidence, he makes a statement inconsistent with it (Sch 6 para 2(4)(b)), but an answer may not be used by virtue of head (2) supra against a person unless evidence relating to it is adduced (Sch 6 para 2(5)(a)) or a question relating to it is asked (Sch 6 para 2(5)(b)) by him or on his behalf in the proceedings arising out of the prosecution (Sch 6 para 2(5)).

An order making any provision under Sch 6 para 2 or Sch 6 para 3 (see the text and notes 17-19 infra) must make provision in respect of legal professional privilege: Sch 6 para 4(1).

17 For the meaning of 'premises' see the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 23 (as amended); and PARA 872 note 5 ante (definition applied by the Proceeds of Crime Act 2002 s 316(1)).

18 Ibid Sch 6 para 3(1)(a). See note 19 infra.

19 Ibid Sch 6 para 3(1)(b). Those steps are: (1) to carry out a search for or inspection of anything described in the order (Sch 6 para 3(2)(a)); (2) to make or obtain a copy, photograph or other record of anything so described (Sch 6 para 3(2)(b)); or (3) to remove anything which he is required to take possession of in pursuance of the order or which may be required as evidence in the proceedings under Pt 5 Ch 2 (ss 243-288) (as amended) (Sch 6 para 3(2)(c)).

The order may describe anything generally, whether by reference to a class or otherwise: Sch 6 para 3(3). An order making any provision under Sch 6 para 3 may require any person: (a) to give the interim receiver or administrator access to any premises which he may enter in pursuance of Sch 6 para 3 (Sch 6 para 4(2)(a)); or (b) to give the interim receiver or administrator any assistance he may require for taking the steps mentioned in Sch 6 para 3 (Sch 6 para 4(2)(b)). See Sch 6 para 4(1); and note 16 supra.

20 Ibid Sch 6 para 5(1). 'Managing property' includes: (1) selling or otherwise disposing of assets comprised in the property which are perishable or which ought to be disposed of before their value diminishes (Sch 6 para 5(2)(a)); (2) where the property comprises assets of a trade or business, carrying on, or arranging for another to carry on, the trade or business (Sch 6 para 5(2)(b)); and (3) incurring capital expenditure in respect of the property (Sch 6 para 5(2)(c)). As to references to a person 'disposing' of his property see PARA 2149 note 4 ante.

23 Ibid s 247(1). The interim receiver, any party to the proceedings and any person affected by any action taken by the interim receiver, or who may be affected by any action proposed to be taken by him, may at any time apply to the court for directions as to the exercise of the interim receiver's functions: s 251(1). See Practice Direction--Proceeds of Crime Act 2002 Pts 5 and 8: Civil Recovery (RSC PD 115B) PARAS II.6.1, II.6.2. Before giving any directions under the Proceeds of Crime Act 2002 s 251(1), the court must (as well as giving the parties to the proceedings an opportunity to be heard) give such an opportunity to the interim receiver and to any person who may be interested in the application: s 251(2).

24 Ibid s 247(2)(a). If the interim receiver deals with any property which is not property to which the order applies (s 247(3)(a)) and at the time he deals with the property he believes on reasonable grounds that he is entitled to do so in pursuance of the order (s 247(3)(b)), the interim receiver is not liable to any person in respect of any loss or damage resulting from his dealing with the property except so far as the loss or damage is caused by his negligence (s 247(3)). As to the meaning of 'dealing' with property see PARA 2151 note 6 ante.

25 For the meaning of 'unlawful conduct' see PARA 2148 ante.

26 Proceeds of Crime Act 2002 s 247(2)(b). See note 24 supra.

27 Exclusions may be made when the interim receiving order is made or on an application to vary the order: s 252(2). An exclusion may, in particular, make provision for the purpose of enabling any person to meet his reasonable living expenses (s 252(3)(a)) or to carry on any trade, business, profession or occupation (s 252(3)(b)), and may be made subject to conditions (s 252(3)).

Where the court exercises the power to make an exclusion for the purpose of enabling a person to meet legal expenses that he has incurred, or may incur, in respect of proceedings under Pt 5 (ss 240-316) (as amended), it must ensure that the exclusion:

332 (1) is limited to reasonable legal expenses that the person has reasonably incurred or that he reasonably incurs (s 252(4)(a) (s 252(4) substituted, s 252(4A) added, and s 252(6) amended, by the Serious Organised Crime and Police Act 2005 s 109, Sch 9 paras 4, 14));

333 (2) specifies the total amount that may be released for legal expenses in pursuance of the exclusion (Proceeds of Crime Act 2002 s 252(4)(b) (as so substituted)); and 334 (3) is made subject to the required conditions (ie under s 286A (as added)) in addition to any conditions imposed under s 252(3) (s 252(4)(c) (as so substituted)).

The Lord Chancellor may make regulations specifying the required conditions for the purposes of s 252(4) (see head (3) supra): see s 286A (added by the Serious Organised Crime and Police Act 2005 Sch 6 para 20). Pursuant to this power the Lord Chancellor has made the Proceeds of Crime Act 2002 (Legal Expenses in Civil Recovery Proceedings) Regulations 2005, SI 2005/3382. As to the making of regulations under the Proceeds of Crime Act 2002 see PARA 789 note 6 ante.

The court, in deciding whether to make an exclusion for the purpose of enabling a person to meet his legal expenses in respect of proceedings under Pt 5 (as amended) must have regard (in particular) to the desirability of the person being represented in any proceedings under Pt 5 (as amended) in which he is a participant (s 252(4A)(a) (as so added)) and must, where the person is the respondent, disregard the possibility that legal representation of the person in any such proceedings might, were an exclusion not made, be funded by the Legal Services Commission (s 252(4A)(b) (as so added)). See Practice Direction--Proceeds of Crime Act 2002 Pts 5 and 8: Civil Recovery (RSC PD 115B) PARAS II.5B.1, II.5B.3, II.7A.1, II.7A.8. If the excluded property is not specified in the order it must be described in the order in general terms: Proceeds of Crime Act 2002 s 252(5). The power to make exclusions must, subject to s 252(4A) (as added), be exercised with a view to ensuring, so far as practicable, that the satisfaction of any right of the enforcement authority to recover the property obtained through unlawful conduct is not unduly prejudiced: s 252(6) (as so amended). As to when property is obtained through unlawful conduct see PARA 2148 ante. Section 279 gives examples of the satisfaction of the enforcement authority's right to recover the original property.

If a court (whether the High Court or any other court) in which proceedings are pending in respect of any property is satisfied that an interim receiving order has been applied for or made in respect of the property, the court may either stay the proceedings or allow them to continue on any terms it thinks fit: s 253(2). If the interim receiving order applies to a tenancy of any premises, no landlord or other person to whom rent is payable may exercise any right of forfeiture by peaceable re-entry in relation to the premises in respect of any failure by the tenant to comply with any term or condition of the tenancy, except with the leave of the court and subject to any terms the court may impose: s 253(3). Before exercising any power conferred by s 253, the court must (as well as giving the parties to any of the proceedings in question an opportunity to be heard) give such an opportunity to the interim receiver (if appointed) and any person who may be affected by the court's decision: s 253(4).

40 Ibid s 254(2). The court may exclude any property within s 254(2) on any terms or conditions, applying while the interim receiving order has effect, which the court thinks necessary or expedient: s 254(3).

(iv) Vesting and Realisation of Recoverable Property

2154. Recovery orders.

If in civil proceedings<sup>1</sup> in the High Court<sup>2</sup> for the recovery of property<sup>3</sup>, the court is satisfied that any property is recoverable<sup>4</sup>, the court must make a recovery order<sup>5</sup>. The recovery order must vest the recoverable property in the trustee for civil recovery<sup>6</sup>.

The court may not, however, make in a recovery order:

- 2822 (1) any provision in respect of any recoverable property if:
- 619
- 110. (a) the respondent obtained the recoverable property in good faith<sup>7</sup>;
  - 111. (b) he took steps after obtaining the property which he would not have taken if he had not obtained it or he took steps before obtaining the property which he would not have taken if he had not believed he was going to obtain it<sup>8</sup>;
  - 112. (c) when he took the steps, he had no notice that the property was recoverable<sup>9</sup>; and
  - 113. (d) if a recovery order were made in respect of the property, it would, by reason of the steps, be detrimental to him<sup>10</sup>,
- 620
- 2823 and it would not be just and equitable to do so<sup>11</sup>; or
- 2824 (2) any provision which is incompatible with any of the Convention rights<sup>12</sup>.

A recovery order may: (i) sever any property<sup>13</sup>; (ii) impose conditions as to the manner in which the trustee for civil recovery may deal with any property vested by the order for the purpose of realising it<sup>14</sup>; (iii) provide for payment<sup>15</sup> of reasonable legal expenses that a person has reasonably incurred, or may reasonably incur, in respect of the proceedings<sup>16</sup> in which the order is made<sup>17</sup> or any related<sup>18</sup> proceedings<sup>19</sup>.

A recovery order overrides provisions that would otherwise prevent, or limit, the vesting of property in the trustee for civil recovery<sup>20</sup>.

The enforcement authority may not start proceedings for a recovery order unless the authority reasonably believes that the aggregate value of the recoverable property which the authority wishes to be subject to a recovery order is not less than £10,000<sup>21</sup>.

associated property to which specified insolvency provisions apply unless the appropriate court gives leave and the proceedings are taken or (as the case may be) continued in accordance with any terms imposed by that court: see s 311(1), (3); and see further s 311(4)-(8). For the meaning of 'associated property' see PARA 2150 note 6 ante.

6 Ibid s 266(2). The 'trustee for civil recovery' is a person appointed by the court to give effect to a recovery order: s 267(1). The enforcement authority must nominate a suitably qualified person for appointment as the trustee: s 267(2). For the meaning of 'enforcement authority' see PARA 2147 note 2 ante.

The functions of the trustee are: (1) to secure the detention, custody or preservation of any property vested in him by the recovery order (s 267(3)(a)); (2) in the case of property other than money, to realise the value of the property for the benefit of the enforcement authority (s 267(3)(b)); and (3) to perform any other functions conferred on him by virtue of Pt 5 Ch 2 (as amended) (s 267(3)(c)). In performing his functions, the trustee acts on behalf of the enforcement authority and must comply with any directions given by the authority: s 267(4).

The trustee is to realise the value of property vested in him by the recovery order, so far as practicable, in the manner best calculated to maximise the amount payable to the enforcement authority: s 267(5).

The trustee has the powers mentioned in Sch 7: s 267(6). Those powers are: power to sell property or any part of it or interest in it (Sch 7 para 1); power to incur expenditure for the purpose of acquiring any part of property, or any interest in it, which is not vested in him, and discharging any liabilities, or extinguishing any rights, to which property is subject (Sch 7 para 2); power to manage property (which includes doing anything mentioned in Sch 6 para 5(2) (see PARA 2153 note 20 ante)) (Sch 7 para 3); power to start, carry on or defend any legal proceedings in respect of property (Sch 7 para 4); power to make any compromise or other arrangement in connection with any claim relating to property (Sch 7 para 5); for the purposes of, or in connection with, the exercise of any of his powers, power by his official name to hold property, enter into contracts, sue and be sued, employ agents, and execute a power of attorney, deed or other instrument, and power to do any other act which is necessary or expedient (Sch 7 para 6). For special taxation provisions applicable when property is vested in the trustee for civil recovery or any other person by a recovery order see s 448, Sch 10 paras 2-33.

336 (2) the enforcement authority's interest in receiving the realised proceeds of the recoverable property (s 266(6)(b)).

CRIMINAL CONVICTION AND CRIMINAL RECORD CERTIFICATES/ (2) CIVIL RECOVERY IN THE HIGH COURT/ (iv) Vesting and Realisation of Recoverable Property/2155. Associated and joint property.

2155. Associated and joint property.

If the High Court makes a recovery order<sup>1</sup> in respect of any recoverable property<sup>2</sup> where:

- 2825 (1) the property to which the proceedings relate includes property which is associated<sup>3</sup> with the recoverable property and is specified or described in the claim form<sup>4</sup> and (if the associated property is not the respondent's property) the claim form or application has been served on the person whose property it is or the court has dispensed with service<sup>5</sup>; or the following provisions apply<sup>8</sup>.
- 2826 (2) the recoverable property belongs to joint tenants<sup>6</sup> and one of the tenants is an excepted joint owner<sup>7</sup>,

Where the enforcement authority<sup>9</sup> (on the one hand) and the person who holds the associated property or who is the excepted joint owner (on the other) agree, the recovery order may, instead of vesting the recoverable property in the trustee for civil recovery<sup>10</sup>, require the person who holds the associated property or who is the excepted joint owner to make a payment<sup>11</sup> to the trustee<sup>12</sup>. A recovery order which makes any such requirement may, so far as required for giving effect to the agreement, include provision for vesting, creating or extinguishing any interest in property<sup>13</sup>.

Where there is no such agreement<sup>14</sup> and the court thinks it just and equitable to do so<sup>15</sup>, the recovery order may provide:

- 2827 (a) for the associated property to vest in the trustee for civil recovery or (as the case may be) for the excepted joint owner's interest to be extinguished<sup>16</sup>; or
- 2828 (b) in the case of an excepted joint owner, for the severance of his interest<sup>17</sup>.

A recovery order making any provision by virtue of head (a) above may provide:

- 2829 (i) for the trustee to pay an amount to the person who holds the associated property or who is an excepted joint owner<sup>18</sup>; or
- 2830 (ii) for the creation of interests in favour of that person, or the imposition of liabilities or conditions, in relation to the property vested in the trustee<sup>19</sup>, or for both<sup>20</sup>. In making any such provision<sup>21</sup> in a recovery order, the court must have regard to:

- 2831 (A) the rights of any person who holds the associated property or who is an excepted joint owner and the value to him of that property or, as the case may be, of his share (including any value which cannot be assessed in terms of money)<sup>22</sup>; and
- 2832 (B) the enforcement authority's interest in receiving the realised proceeds of the recoverable property<sup>23</sup>.

- 1 For the meaning of 'recovery order' see PARA 2154 ante.
  - 2 For the meaning of 'property' see PARA 2147 note 3 ante. For the meaning of 'recoverable property' see PARA 2149 ante.

  - 5 Ibid s 270(2)(b).
  - 6 Ibid s 270(3)(a).
  - 7 Ibid s 270(3)(b). An 'excepted joint owner' is a person who obtained the property in circumstances in which it would not be recoverable as against him; and references to the excepted joint owner's share of the recoverable property are references to so much of the recoverable property as would have been his if the joint tenancy had been severed: ss 270(4), 316(1).
  - 8 Ibid s 270(1).
  - 9 For the meaning of 'enforcement authority' see PARA 2147 note 2 ante.
  - 10 As to the trustee for civil recovery see PARA 2154 note 6 ante.
  - 11 The amount of the payment is to be the amount which the enforcement authority and that person agree represents:
    - 337 (1) in a case within s 270(2) (see head (1) in the text), the value of the recoverable property (s 271(3)(a));
    - 338 (2) in a case within s 270(3) (see head (2) in text), the value of the recoverable property less the value of the excepted joint owner's share (s 271(3)(b)).
- However, if:
- 339 (a) a property freezing order, an interim receiving order, a prohibitory property order or an interim administration order applied at any time to the associated property or joint tenancy (s 271(4)(a) (ss 271(4)(a), (b), 272(5)(a), (b) amended by the Serious Organised Crime and Police Act 2005 s 109, Sch 6 paras 4, 16, 17)); and
  - 340 (b) the enforcement authority agrees that the person has suffered loss as a result of such order (Proceeds of Crime Act 2002 s 271(4)(b) (as so amended)),
- the amount of the payment may be reduced by any amount the enforcement authority and that person agree is reasonable, having regard to that loss and to any other relevant circumstances (s 271(4)). For the meaning of 'property freezing order' see PARA 2151 ante. For the meaning of 'interim receiving order' see PARA 2153 ante. Prohibitory property orders and interim administration orders are Scottish orders which are not dealt with in this work.
- If there is more than one item of associated property or excepted joint owner, the total amount to be paid to the trustee, and the part of that amount which is to be provided by each person who holds any such associated property or who is an excepted joint owner, is to be agreed between both (or all) of them and the enforcement authority: s 271(5).
- 12 Ibid s 271(1). A recovery order which makes any requirement under s 271(1) must make provision for any recoverable property to cease to be recoverable: s 271(6).

If: (1) a property freezing order, an interim receiving order, a prohibitory property order or an interim administration order applied at any time to the associated property or joint tenancy (s 272(5)(a) (as amended: see note 11 supra)); and (2) the court is satisfied that the person who holds the associated property or who is an excepted joint owner has suffered loss as a result of the order mentioned in head (1) supra (s 272(5)(b) (as so amended)), a recovery order making any provision by virtue of s 272(2) or (3) (see the text and notes 16-20 supra) may require the enforcement authority to pay compensation to that person (s 272(5)). The amount of compensation to be paid under these provisions is the amount the court thinks reasonable, having regard to the person's loss and to any other relevant circumstances: s 272(6).

CRIMINAL CONVICTION AND CRIMINAL RECORD CERTIFICATES/ (2) CIVIL RECOVERY IN THE HIGH COURT/ (iv) Vesting and Realisation of Recoverable Property/2156. Payment in respect of rights under pension schemes.

2156. Payment in respect of rights under pension schemes.

2833 (1) to pay to the trustee for civil recovery within a prescribed period the amount determined by the trustees or managers to be equal to the value of the rights<sup>8</sup>; and

2834 (2) to give effect to any other provision so made<sup>9</sup> in respect of the scheme<sup>10</sup>.

A recovery order so made<sup>11</sup> overrides the provisions of the pension scheme to the extent that they conflict with the provisions of the order<sup>12</sup>. A recovery order so made may provide for the recovery by the trustees or managers of the scheme (whether by deduction from any amount which they are required to pay to the trustee for civil recovery or otherwise) of costs incurred by them in:

2835 (a) complying with the recovery order<sup>13</sup>; or

2836 (b) providing information, before the order was made, to the enforcement authority, interim receiver or interim administrator<sup>14</sup>.

1 For the meaning of 'recoverable property' see PARA 2149 ante.

2 'Pension scheme' means an occupational pension scheme or a personal pension scheme; and those expressions have the same meaning as in the Pension Schemes Act 1993 (see SOCIAL SECURITY AND PENSIONS vol 44(2) (Reissue) PARAS 710, 853): Proceeds of Crime Act 2002 s 275(4). As to references to a pension scheme see also s 275(6).

3 Ibid s 273(1).

4 For the meaning of 'recovery order' see PARA 2154 ante.

5 For the meaning of 'property' see PARA 2147 note 3 ante.

6 As to the trustee for civil recovery see PARA 2154 note 6 ante.

7 In relation to an occupational pension scheme or a personal pension scheme, 'the trustees or managers' means in the case of a scheme established under a trust, the trustees, and, in any other case, the managers: Proceeds of Crime Act 2002 s 275(5). See also s 275(7).

8 Ibid s 273(2)(a). Section 273(2) is subject to ss 276-278 (see PARAS 2157-2158 post): s 273(2). None of the following provisions applies to a court making a recovery order by virtue of s 273(2):

341 (1) any provision of the Pension Schemes Act 1993 s 159 (see SOCIAL SECURITY AND PENSIONS vol 44(2) (Reissue) PARA 928) or the Pensions Act 1995 s 91( see SOCIAL SECURITY AND PENSIONS vol 44(2) (Reissue) PARA 865) (Proceeds of Crime Act 2002 s 273(5)(a));

342 (2) any provision of any enactment (whenever passed or made) corresponding to any of those provisions (s 273(5)(b)); and 343 (3) any provision of the pension scheme in question corresponding to any of those provisions (s 273(5)(c)).

A recovery order made by virtue of s 273(2) must require the trustees or managers of the pension scheme to make such reduction in the liabilities of the scheme as they think necessary in consequence of the payment made in pursuance of s 273(2): s 274(1). Accordingly, the order must require the trustees or managers to provide for the liabilities of the pension scheme in respect of the respondent's recoverable property to which s 273 applies to cease: s 274(2). So far as the trustees or managers are required by the recovery order to provide for the liabilities of the pension scheme in respect of the respondent's recoverable property to which s 273 applies to cease, their powers include (in particular) power to reduce the amount of any benefit or future benefit to which the respondent is or may be entitled under the scheme (s 274(3)(a)) and any future benefit to which any other person may be entitled under the scheme in respect of that property (s 274(3)(b)). For the meaning of 'respondent' see PARA 2150 note 5 ante.

The Proceeds of Crime Act 2002 (Recovery from Pension Schemes) Regulations 2003, SI 2003/291, make provision under the Proceeds of Crime Act 2002 s 275(1)-(3) as to the exercise by trustees or managers of pension schemes of their powers under ss 273, 274.

TEXT AND NOTE 14--2002 Act s 273(4)(b) amended: Serious Crime Act 2007 s 83(2).

2157. Consent orders.

The High Court may make an order staying any proceedings for a recovery order<sup>1</sup> on terms agreed by the parties for the disposal of the proceedings if each person to whose property<sup>2</sup> the proceedings, or the agreement, relates is a party both to the proceedings and the agreement<sup>3</sup>. Such an order may, as well as staying the proceedings on terms:

- 2837 (1) make provision for any property which may be recoverable property<sup>4</sup> to cease to be recoverable<sup>5</sup>; and
- 2838 (2) make any further provision which the court thinks appropriate<sup>6</sup>.

Where recoverable property to which proceedings in the High Court for civil recovery relate includes rights under a pension scheme<sup>7</sup>, such an order may not stay the proceedings on terms that the rights are vested in any other person<sup>8</sup> but may include provision imposing the following requirement, if the trustees or managers<sup>9</sup> of the scheme are parties to the agreement by virtue of which the order is made<sup>10</sup>. The requirement is that the trustees or managers of the pension scheme make a payment in accordance with the agreement<sup>11</sup> and give effect to any other provision made<sup>12</sup> in respect of the scheme<sup>13</sup>. The trustees or managers of the pension scheme have power to enter into an agreement in respect of the proceedings on any terms on which a consent order<sup>14</sup> may stay the proceedings<sup>15</sup>.

Section 280 (see PARA 2159 post) applies to property vested in the trustee for civil recovery, or money paid to him, in pursuance of the agreement as it applies to property vested in him by a recovery order or money paid under s 271 (see PARA 2155 ante): s 276(3). As to the trustee for civil recovery see PARA 2154 note 6 ante. The order overrides the provisions of the pension scheme to the extent that they conflict with the requirement: s 277(6). The order may provide for the recovery by the trustees or managers of the scheme (whether by deduction from any amount which they are required to pay in pursuance of the agreement or otherwise) of costs incurred by them in complying with the order (s 277(7)(a)) or providing information, before the order was made, to the enforcement authority, interim receiver or interim administrator (s 277(7)(b)). Sections 273(5), 274 (read with s 275) (see PARA 2156 ante) apply as if the requirement were included in an order made by virtue of s 273(2) (see PARA 2156 ante): s 277(8). ### 2157 Consent orders

Halsbury's Laws of England/CRIMINAL LAW, EVIDENCE AND PROCEDURE (VOLUME 11(1) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1-620; VOLUME 11(2) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 621-1049; VOLUME 11(3) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1050-1557; VOLUME 11(4) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1558-2180)/26. CRIMINAL CONVICTION AND CRIMINAL RECORD CERTIFICATES/ (2) CIVIL RECOVERY IN THE HIGH COURT/ (iv) Vesting and Realisation of Recoverable Property/2158. Limit on recovery.

2158. Limit on recovery.

2840 (2) in respect of property which is or represents property obtained through unlawful conduct where such an order, or a consent order<sup>6</sup>, has previously been made in respect of related property<sup>7</sup>,

the court is not to make a recovery order if it thinks that the enforcement authority's right to recover the original property has been satisfied by a previous recovery order or a consent order<sup>8</sup>.

Subject to this, if the court thinks that a recovery order may be made in respect of two or more related items of recoverable property<sup>9</sup> but the making of a recovery order in respect of both or all of them is not required in order to satisfy the enforcement authority's right to recover the original property<sup>10</sup>, the court may, in order to satisfy that right to the extent required, make a recovery order in respect of:

or both<sup>13</sup>.

1 For the meaning of 'enforcement authority' see PARA 2147 note 2 ante.

2 For the meaning of 'recovery order' see PARA 2154 ante.

3 For the meaning of 'property' see PARA 2147 note 3 ante.

4 For the meaning of 'unlawful conduct', and as to when property is obtained through unlawful conduct, see PARA 2148 ante.

5 Proceeds of Crime Act 2002 s 278(1)(a). For these purposes, the original property and any items of property which represent the original property are to be treated as related to each other (s 278(2)(b)); and 'the original property' means the property obtained through unlawful conduct (s 278(2)(a)).

6 ie an order under ibid s 276 (see PARA 2157 ante).

7 Ibid s 278(1)(b).

8 Ibid s 278(3). Where the court may make a recovery order in respect of any property, s 278 does not prevent the recovery of any profits which have accrued in respect of the property: s 278(6).

If:

344 (1) an order is made under s 298 (see PARA 2168 post) for the forfeiture of recoverable property (s 278(7)(a)); and

- 345 (2) the enforcement authority subsequently seeks a recovery order in respect of related property (s 278(7)(b)), the order under s 298 is to be treated for the purposes of s 278 as if it were a recovery order obtained by the enforcement authority in respect of the forfeited property (s 278(7)).

If:

- 346 (a) in pursuance of a judgment in civil proceedings (whether in the United Kingdom or elsewhere), the claimant has obtained property from the defendant ('the judgment property') (s 278(8)(a));

- 347 (b) the claim was based on the defendant's having obtained the judgment property or related property through unlawful conduct (s 278(8)(b)); and

- 348 (c) the enforcement authority subsequently seeks a recovery order in respect of property which is related to the judgment property (s 278(8)(c)), the judgment is to be treated for the purposes of s 278 as if it were a recovery order obtained by the enforcement authority in respect of the judgment property (s 278(8)). As to the meaning of 'United Kingdom' see PARA 45 note 2 ante.

If:

- 349 (i) property has been taken into account in deciding the amount of a person's benefit from criminal conduct for the purpose of making a confiscation order (s 278(9)(a)); and

- 350 (ii) the enforcement authority subsequently seeks a recovery order in respect of related property (s 278(9)(b)), the confiscation order is to be treated for the purposes of s 278 as if it were a recovery order obtained by the enforcement authority in respect of the property referred to in head (i) above (s 278(9)). For these purposes, a 'confiscation order' is an order under s 6 (see SENTENCING AND DISPOSITION OF OFFENDERS vol 92 (2010) PARA 391) (or its Scottish or Northern Ireland equivalent under s 92 or s 156) (s 278(10)(a)) or an order under a corresponding provision of one of the repealed enactments listed in s 8(7)(a)-(g) (see SENTENCING AND DISPOSITION OF OFFENDERS vol 92 (2010) PARA 394 note 16) (s 278(10)(b)); and, in relation to this type of order, the reference to the amount of a person's benefit from criminal conduct is to be read as a reference to the corresponding amount under the enactment in question (s 278(10)).

2159. Applying realised proceeds.

The trustee for civil recovery<sup>1</sup> is to make out of the realised proceeds<sup>2</sup>:

- 2843 (1) first, any payment required to be made by him by virtue of the provisions which apply to associated and joint property in default of agreement<sup>3</sup>;
- 2844 (2) next, any payment of legal expenses which are payable<sup>4</sup> in pursuance of a provision contained in the recovery order<sup>5</sup>;
- 2845 (3) then, any payment of any payable<sup>6</sup> expenses incurred by a person acting as an insolvency practitioner<sup>7</sup>, and any sum which remains is to be paid to the enforcement authority<sup>8</sup>.

The Director of the Assets Recovery Agency<sup>9</sup> may apply a sum received by him under these provisions in making payment of the remuneration and expenses of: (a) the trustee<sup>10</sup>; or (b) any interim receiver appointed in, or in anticipation of, the proceedings for the recovery order<sup>11</sup>.

1 As to the trustee for civil recovery see PARA 2154 note 6 ante.

2 I.e: (1) sums which represent the realised proceeds of property which was vested in the trustee for civil recovery by a recovery order or which he obtained in pursuance of a recovery order (Proceeds of Crime Act 2002 s 280(1)(a)); and (2) sums vested in the trustee by a recovery order or obtained by him in pursuance of a recovery order (s 280(1)(b)). If property is subject to a property freezing order made under the Proceeds of Crime Act 2002 s 245A (as added) (see PARA 2151 ante) or an interim receiving order made under s 246 (see PARA 2153 ante) (or corresponding Scottish provisions) (s 432(8)(a), (9)(a) (amended by the Serious Organised Crime and Police Act 2005 Sch 6 paras 4, 23)) and either a person acting as an insolvency practitioner (see SENTENCING AND DISPOSITION OF OFFENDERS vol 92 (2010) PARA 424 note 5) incurs expenses in respect of property subject to the order in circumstances where he does not know (and has no reasonable grounds to believe) that the property is subject to the order (Proceeds of Crime Act 2002 s 432(8)(b), (c)), or a person acting as an insolvency practitioner incurs expenses which are not ones in respect of property subject to the order in circumstances where the expenses are ones which (but for the effect of the order) might have been met by taking possession of and realising property subject to it (s 432(9)(b), (c)), then whether or not that person has seized or disposed of any property, he is entitled to payment of the expenses under s 280 (as amended) (s 432(10)).

CRIMINAL CONVICTION AND CRIMINAL RECORD CERTIFICATES/ (2) CIVIL RECOVERY IN THE HIGH COURT/(vi) Miscellaneous/2162. Compensation.

2162. Compensation.

If, in the case of any property<sup>1</sup> to which a property freezing order<sup>2</sup> or an interim receiving order<sup>3</sup> has at any time applied, the court does not in the course of the proceedings decide that the property is recoverable property<sup>4</sup> or associated property<sup>5</sup>, the person whose property it is may make an application to the court for compensation<sup>6</sup>.

If the court has made a decision by reason of which no recovery order<sup>7</sup> could be made in respect of the property, the application for compensation must be made within the period of three months beginning with the date of the decision or, if any application is made for leave to appeal, with the date on which the application is withdrawn or refused or (if the application is granted) on which any proceedings on appeal are finally concluded<sup>8</sup>.

If the proceedings in respect of the property have been discontinued, the application for compensation must be made within the period of three months beginning with the discontinuance<sup>9</sup>.

If the court is satisfied that the applicant has suffered loss as a result of the property freezing order or interim receiving order, it may require the enforcement authority<sup>10</sup> to pay compensation to him<sup>11</sup>.

If, but for being overridden<sup>12</sup>, any right of pre-emption or the like would have operated in favour, or become exercisable by, any person, he may make an application to the court for compensation<sup>13</sup>.

If the court is satisfied that, in consequence of the operation of the provisions whereby a recovery order overrides provisions that would otherwise prevent, or limit, the vesting of property in the trustee for civil recovery<sup>14</sup>, the right in question cannot subsequently operate in favour of the applicant or (as the case may be) become exercisable by him, it may require the enforcement authority to pay compensation to him<sup>15</sup>.

The amount of compensation to be paid under these provisions is the amount the court thinks reasonable, having regard to the loss suffered and any other relevant circumstances<sup>16</sup>.

If an officer of Revenue and Customs<sup>1</sup> or constable<sup>2</sup> who is lawfully on any premises<sup>3</sup> has reasonable grounds for suspecting that there is on the premises cash<sup>4</sup>:

- 2849 (1) which is recoverable property<sup>5</sup> or is intended by any person for use in unlawful conduct<sup>6</sup>; and
- 2850 (2) the amount of which is not less than the minimum amount<sup>7</sup>, he may search for the cash there<sup>8</sup>.

If an officer of Revenue and Customs or constable has reasonable grounds for suspecting that a person (the suspect) is carrying cash:

- 2851 (a) which is recoverable property or is intended by any person for use in unlawful conduct<sup>9</sup>; and
- 2852 (b) the amount of which is not less than the minimum amount<sup>10</sup>, he may exercise the following powers<sup>11</sup>. The officer or constable may, so far as he thinks it necessary or expedient, require the suspect:

- 2853 (i) to permit a search of any article he has with him<sup>12</sup>; and
- 2854 (ii) to permit a search of his person<sup>13</sup>.

An officer or constable exercising powers by virtue of head (ii) above may detain the suspect for so long as is necessary for their exercise<sup>14</sup>.

The above powers are exercisable only so far as reasonably required for the purpose of finding cash<sup>15</sup> and are exercisable by an officer of Revenue and Customs only if he has reasonable grounds for suspecting that the unlawful conduct in question relates to an assigned matter<sup>16</sup>.

These powers may be exercised only with the appropriate approval<sup>17</sup> unless, in the circumstances, it is not practicable to obtain that approval before exercising the power<sup>18</sup>. If the powers are exercised without the approval of a justice of the peace in a case where no cash is seized<sup>19</sup>, or any cash so seized is not detained for more than 48 hours<sup>20</sup>, the officer of Revenue and Customs or constable who exercised the powers must give a written report to the appointed person<sup>21</sup>.

The Secretary of State has issued<sup>22</sup> a code of practice<sup>23</sup> in connection with the exercise by officers of Revenue and Customs and constables of these powers. A failure by an officer or constable to comply with a provision of the code does not make him liable to criminal or civil proceedings<sup>24</sup>. The code is admissible in evidence in criminal or civil proceedings and is to be taken into account by a court or tribunal in any case in which it appears to the court or tribunal to be relevant<sup>25</sup>.

NOTE 23--See the Proceeds of Crime Act 2002 (Cash Searches: Code of Practice) Order 2008, SI 2008/947, which gives effect to a revised code of practice effective from 6 April 2008.

CRIMINAL CONVICTION AND CRIMINAL RECORD CERTIFICATES/(3) RECOVERY OF CASH IN SUMMARY PROCEEDINGS/(ii) Seizure and Detention/2166. Seizure and detention of cash.

(ii) Seizure and Detention

2166. Seizure and detention of cash.

An officer of Revenue and Customs or constable<sup>1</sup> may seize any cash<sup>2</sup> if he has reasonable grounds for suspecting that it is recoverable property<sup>3</sup>, or intended by any person for use in unlawful conduct<sup>4</sup>. An officer of Revenue and Customs or constable may also seize cash part<sup>5</sup> of which he has reasonable grounds for suspecting to be recoverable property<sup>6</sup> or intended by any person for use in unlawful conduct<sup>7</sup>, if it is not reasonably practicable to seize only that part<sup>8</sup>. These provisions do not authorise the seizure of an amount of cash if it or, as the case may be, the part to which the officer or constable's suspicion relates, is less than the minimum amount<sup>9</sup>.

While the officer of Revenue and Customs or constable continues to have reasonable grounds for his suspicion, cash so seized may be detained initially for a period of 48 hours<sup>10</sup>. The period for which the cash or any part of it may be detained may be extended by an order made by a magistrates' court; but the order may not authorise the detention of any of the cash beyond the end of the period of three months beginning with the date of the order<sup>11</sup> or in the case of any further such order, beyond the end of the period of two years beginning with the date of the first order<sup>12</sup>.

An application for such an order may be made by the Commissioners for Her Majesty's Revenue and Customs or a constable, and the court or justice may make the order if satisfied, in relation to any cash to be further detained, that either of the following conditions is met<sup>13</sup>:

2855 (1) that there are reasonable grounds for suspecting that the cash is recoverable property and that:

114. (a) its continued detention is justified while its derivation is further investigated or consideration is given to bringing (in the United Kingdom or elsewhere) proceedings against any person for an offence with which the cash is connected<sup>14</sup>; or

115. (b) proceedings against any person for an offence with which the cash is connected have been started and have not been concluded<sup>15</sup>; or

2856 (2) that there are reasonable grounds for suspecting that the cash is intended to be used in unlawful conduct and that:

623

116. (a) its continued detention is justified while its intended use is further investigated or consideration is given to bringing (in the United Kingdom or elsewhere) proceedings against any person for an offence with which the cash is connected<sup>16</sup>; or

117. (b) proceedings against any person for an offence with which the cash is connected have been started and have not been concluded<sup>17</sup>.

An application for such an order may also be made in respect of any cash seized<sup>18</sup> on the ground that part of it is reasonably suspected to be recoverable property, or intended for use in unlawful conduct, and it is not reasonably practicable to seize only that part; and the court or justice may make the order if satisfied that head (1) or (2) above is met in respect of that part of the cash and that it is not reasonably practicable to detain only that part<sup>19</sup>.

If cash is so detained<sup>20</sup> for more than 48 hours<sup>21</sup>, it is at the first opportunity to be paid into an interest-bearing account and held there; and the interest accruing on it is to be added to it on its forfeiture or release<sup>22</sup>.

An order under s 295(2) (as amended) must provide for notice to be given to persons affected by it: s 295(8). ## 28. VICTIMS OF CRIME

2172. The Victims' Code of Practice.

The Domestic Violence, Crime and Victims Act 2004 imposes a duty on the Secretary of State to issue a code of practice as to the services to be provided to a victim of criminal conduct<sup>1</sup> by persons appearing to him to have functions relating to victims of criminal conduct, or to any aspect of the criminal justice system<sup>2</sup>.

The code may restrict the application of its provisions to: (1) specified descriptions of victims<sup>3</sup>; (2) victims of specified offences or descriptions of conduct<sup>4</sup>; (3) specified persons or descriptions of persons appearing to the Secretary of State to have functions relating to victims of criminal conduct, or to any aspect of the criminal justice system<sup>5</sup>. The code may include provision requiring or permitting the services which are to be provided to a victim to be provided to one or more others instead of the victim (for example where the victim has died), or as well as the victim<sup>6</sup>. It may make different provision for different purposes, including different provision for different descriptions of victims, for persons who have different functions or descriptions of functions or for different areas<sup>7</sup>. However, the code may not require anything to be done by a person acting in a judicial capacity or by a person acting in the discharge of a function of a member of the Crown Prosecution Service which involves the exercise of a discretion<sup>8</sup>.

The Secretary of State may from time to time revise the code<sup>9</sup>, but only if it appears to him that the proposed revisions would not result in a significant reduction in the quality or extent of the services to be provided under the code, or a significant restriction in the description of persons to whom services are to be provided under the code<sup>10</sup>.

If a person fails to perform a duty imposed on him by the code, the failure does not of itself make him liable to criminal or civil proceedings<sup>11</sup>. The code is admissible in evidence in criminal or civil proceedings and a court may take into account a failure to comply with the code in determining a question in the proceedings<sup>12</sup>.

1 'Criminal conduct' means conduct constituting an offence: Domestic Violence, Crime and Victims Act 2004 s 32(7). In determining whether a person is a victim of criminal conduct for these purposes, it is immaterial that no person has been charged with or convicted of an offence in respect of the conduct: s 32(6).

2 Ibid s 32(1).

The Code of Practice for Victims of Crime (A Guide for Victims), made in pursuance of this power, was published and came into operation on 3 April 2006: see the Domestic Violence, Crime and Victims Act 2004 (Victims' Code of Practice) Order 2006, SI 2006/629. Before publication, a draft of the code had to be prepared in consultation with the Attorney General and Lord Chancellor and then published and laid before Parliament: see the Domestic Violence, Crime and Victims Act 2004 s 33(1)-(7).
